PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 110th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 153

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 2007

No. 90

Senate

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable BENJAMIN L. CARDIN, a Senator from the State of Maryland.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Heavenly Father, whose compassion never fails, from Your vantage point of eternity, look afresh into our time. Teach us to love as You love and to touch hurting lives as You do. Remove from us besetting fears about what tomorrow holds as You remind us that our times are in Your hands.

Today, inspire our Senators to honor You. Empower them to treat one another as they themselves desire to be treated and to pray for one another. Calm their anxieties and strengthen their faith in the ultimate triumph of Your purposes. Let Your unfailing love energize them to new levels of excellence and service.

We pray in Your strong Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable BENJAMIN L. CARDIN led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD).

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, June 6, 2007.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable BENJAMIN L. CARDIN, a Senator from the State of Maryland, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. CARDIN thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

IMMIGRATION

Mr. REID. Mr. President, in reading this morning's paper, I was reminded of the times I would read Dr. Seuss to my boys and my girl. In today's New York Times, Tom Friedman quotes Dr. Seuss as follows:

Then he shut the Things in the box with the hook.
And the cat went away with a sad kind of look.
"That is good," said the fish.
"He has gone away. Yes,
but your mother will come.
She will find this big mess!
And this mess is so big
And so deep and so tall, we can not pick it up.
There is no way at all!"

Mr. President, some would say that is what we have in the Senate today—a big mess. But if you go back and read Dr. Seuss, the cat manages to clean up the mess. And as big of a mess as we have with immigration in the United States, we have the opportunity to clean up a big mess. If we work on a bipartisan basis in the next couple of days, we can clean up this mess. If we cannot, then we are back with the cat who didn't clean up the mess and the Senate didn't clean up its mess with immigration.

We have known for 3 months the time set for doing immigration. People worked in good faith trying to come up with legislation, and they were a week short. They said: We need more time. So they got more time. They came up with a bipartisan bill. Ten Senators, Democrats and Republicans, came up with an immigration bill. Is it a perfect bill? Of course, not. Is it a good bill? It is not bad at all. It does some things that I think are extremely important, something I have talked about for a long time based on my experience in Smith Valley, NV, with a girl who couldn't go to college. She was Hispanic. Her parents were here illegally, and this young girl couldn't go to college even though she was the best student in her class. So we have in this bill the DREAM Act. It is a dream for many young Americans.

AgJOBS. We have been talking about an AgJOBS bill for years. This bill has one in it.

Border security. We have talked about the need for border security. This bill provides border security.

Employer enforcement, employer sanctions. This legislation has good employer sanction language. Good enough? Well, we will have to see. Some want to improve it. Maybe that is the way to do things.

Pathway to legalization. For millions of people here illegally with improper papers, a path to legalization is a way to bring them out of the shadows. That is in this legislation.

This year's legislation builds on the bill passed by the Senate last year after extensive committee considerations and many floor amendments. This year, there were lengthy bipartisan negotiations involving about 10 Senators and a number of Cabinet officers, in addition to other people from the White House. The negotiators asked for additional time. We talked about that. It was agreed upon.

We started the floor debate the week before Memorial Day recess. During that week, we disposed of more than a dozen amendments and allowed an additional 14 amendments to become pending to the bill. Proponents of the bill asked for an additional week of floor debate. I agreed. The minority leader said this time this is a 2-week bill. I agreed with him and scheduled a second week of debate, and that is where we are now.

This week, we have conducted four rollcall votes, adopted four other amendments by voice vote, and we probably would have done more but for the unfortunate death of our colleague and friend, Senator Thomas. Yesterday morning, in memory of our friend, we decided not to work here, and that was the right thing to do. This morning, we have two more votes that are scheduled already on the Cornyn and Kennedy amendments regarding eligibility for the legalization program. We have proposed a unanimous consent agreement. We did that yesterday, and I understand the managers have that fairly well worked out on the 12 pending amendments to have votes on those later today. That was not accepted last evening, but I am hopeful that agreement can be worked out soon.

So it is clear we are working in good faith to process amendments and move forward on this bill. My decision about cloture last night was simply a way to ensure that we finish this bill in a timely manner. By offering to postpone the cloture vote, as I did yesterday, until tomorrow night, I am offering an additional full day of amendments before the cloture vote and, of course, germane amendments are considered postcloture.

I had a meeting in my office just a few minutes ago with a bipartisan group of Senators. I believe there is a good-faith effort being made by a majority of Senators, Democrats and Republicans, to move this bill forward. That is what we are going to try to do.

There are some people, rightly or wrongly—and that is all in the eyes of the beholder—who feel they have not had an opportunity to deal with this legislation. If that is the case, let's see if we can come up with some amendments that will make them happy. We do a lot of business in this body by unanimous consent—in fact, most everything. The cloture vote is scheduled for tomorrow morning, an hour after we come into session. We can change that. It is my hope that we can finish the bill this week. I am very confident we can.

I personally feel an obligation to go to the funeral in Wyoming. Craig Thomas was a Republican with whom I worked very closely on a number of issues, and I had great appreciation and admiration for him. Out of respect for him and Susan, I feel that I need to go to that funeral, and I am sure many others feel the same way. So that is going to change our schedule. It is my understanding that funeral is going to be Saturday. I have notified my caucus, and I have explained to the distinguished Republican leader that we may have to work longer hours this week. But let's try to finish this bill.

There are some, and it is a small number of people, who don't want this bill finished under any circumstances. That happens on a lot of bills, and we have to try to work our way through that.

I hope people understand that I would like to get a bill passed. We have responsibilities as Senators to not only deal with immigration, which is a system, as I have tried to explain with a little vignette from Dr. Seuss, that is badly in need of fixing, but we have a lot of other problems in this country that are badly in need of fixing. So we may have to work hours the Senate hasn't seen very often. We may have to work into the night, tonight and tomorrow night and maybe even Friday and Friday night, and who knows if that will be enough time to get us over the hump.

I hope people will understand that it is not a question of how much time we spend on the bill, it is a question of whether people feel they have had the opportunity to change the provisions that are in the bill. I have gone over most of them: AgJOBS, DREAM Act, employer enforcement, legalization, border security.

I hope we can get this bill done. We can debate this bill all year and end up right back where we are. The American people did not send us here to pontificate; they sent us here to legislate. That is what I am trying to do and most are trying to do.

Recognizing that this immigration system is broken and that we need to fix it, I extend my appreciation to Senators—Democrats and Republicans—who believe this is the time for us to do something important for the country.

I have said on a number of occasions that this bill, when it comes out of this body, is not the last word. We have other ways of working on this bill. We, as Senators, are going to be fully involved in the legislation until it comes out of conference, which is after the House passes a bill which will have the imprint of the White House on it.

So I hope we can move forward in good faith and understand that everything we do in life has deadlines, even our legislation in the Senate.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. REID. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank our leader, someone who has been interested, along with many others, in the immigration issue, for the leadership he has provided in making sure the Senate was going to take up this issue. He had announced in January of this year that he was going to take a time for the Judiciary Committee to consider this legislation but that he was going to allocate 2 weeks of time, which was basically the time we took on the last bill, but it was a major period of time to consider the people's business regarding this issue. He has been accommodating in terms of working through the Senate's schedule. For all of us who are interested in getting a bill, we thank him for all he has done in terms of encouraging us to reach judgments on these various measures.

As he has mentioned, we have made very important and significant progress, and I think there is a strong mood in the Senate, as there is in the country, that this is an extremely important issue. We are increasingly close to trying to at least make a recommendation to the country about what the Senate's judgment will be on this issue.

I join with him, as others, to say we are eager to move ahead during the day today and tomorrow and to work with the leadership. I know they have full schedules. I do think we are making significant progress and it is being done in a bipartisan spirit with a desire that those who have differing views about this issue can come together and do the Nation's business. When we achieve that, hopefully by the end of this week, both the Senator from Nevada and the Senator from Kentucky will be very much appreciated for their support in helping this legislation move ahead.

RECOGNITION OF THE REPUBLICAN LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader is recognized.

IMMIGRATION

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, as I think my good friend, the majority leader, already knows, we are ready to work with the other side to schedule votes on pending amendments. I think the two managers are working together this morning to set up a schedule of votes for this afternoon. All of that is a step in the right direction.

Many of the amendments we hope to schedule, however, for the afternoon are amendments that were offered prior to the recess. My concern with cloture being filed last night is that we do not want to deny Members who have yet to offer—and many of them have been denied the right to offer their amendments this week—and those who have been denied the right to offer their amendments should still get their opportunity prior to being shut out.

Now, I am counting progress on this bill not by calendar days—that is one way of looking at it—but by the ability of Senators to debate and to vote on their respective ideas is the way that I would consider progress on the bill. So I hope we can clear out the amendments that are currently pending and that we will also work together to schedule debate and votes on additional amendments that are going to be offered.

Let me remind everyone again, on the day my conference elected me leader I said that I thought we ought to do two big important things, at least, in this Congress. And one of the issues I mentioned was immigration. So I am among those in the Senate who would like to see us accomplish something on a very difficult, some days seemingly intractable, issue. Nevertheless, I am in favor of trying to pass an immigration bill. But there is going to be widespread reluctance on this side of the aisle to support cloture and thereby bring the bill to a conclusion unless amendments, a significant number, are being allowed to be considered.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

SERGEANT JAMES W. HARLAN

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, while I am in my leader time, I rise today to honor the heroic sacrifice of a fellow Kentuckian, a brave soldier who served multiple tours in Iraq. He was also a proud father and grandfather who sought to protect the people and the land he loved.

SGT James W. Harlan was tragically killed on May 14, 2004, when a suicide bomber detonated a car bomb next to his humvee at Camp Anaconda near Balad, Iraq. Sergeant Harlan was a native of Owensboro, KY, and a member of the 660th Transportation Company's 88th Regional Readiness Command in the U.S. Army Reserve. He was 44 years old.

For his heroic service, Sergeant Harlan was awarded the Silver Star and the Purple Heart, among many other awards and medals of distinction.

I mentioned that Sergeant Harlan was brave; let me elaborate on that. When he was 11 years old, his older sister Doris was assigned the daunting task of babysitting young Jimmy. "Jimmy was mischievous. He was always into something," she recalls. Sensing a window of opportunity to display his courage, Jimmy declared that he would jump off the roof of their family's house while his parents were away. At first Doris protested, but realizing that his intentions were probably only to rankle her, she told Jimmy: "Fine, you go ahead and do it." She even went so far as to set out pillows for him to land on. Sure enough, brave young Jimmy jumped off that roof, and to this day Doris is surprised that he escaped without major injury.

Jimmy's love of adventure carried over into his adulthood. He enjoyed the outdoors and would often take his kids fishing and hunting. A compassionate and loving father to his five children, Jimmy always made sure to spend quality time with his family. "When everyone else was sitting around with their bellies full on Thanksgiving, he would be outside throwing the football," his brother Kenny Likens recalls.

One of his favorite things to do was to coach baseball with his brothers. When he spent time indoors, he enjoyed watching old Western movies with his kids.

His sons, James Bryan Harlan, David Shane Harlan and Jacob Alexander Roberts, and his daughters, Tara Strelsky and Amanda Prout, as well as his two stepchildren, Bobby and Brittany Gray, will miss his caring and generous spirit.

Jimmy will also be missed by two girls who might not yet realize the extraordinary sacrifice their grandfather made, but who will learn it as they grow older. He was especially proud of them. Jimmy often said of his granddaughters, Jaidyn Main and Abigail Prout, "Aren't they just the prettiest things you have ever seen?"

Jimmy's civilian career was partly spent as a truck driver. He enjoyed the opportunity to work on the big rigs and to see different parts of the country. He would often drive with his brother Kenny Likens. Through all that driving across the country, though, the two never did find a place they liked as much as their hometown of Owensboro, KY, where Jimmy was born and raised. When Jimmy left for his final tour in Iraq, he was working for the streets department in Owensboro.

Having served for two decades in the military and Reserves, Jimmy was a seasoned soldier. His patriotism and sense of civic duty compelled him to reenlist after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, and he served two tours in Iraq.

While there, Jimmy supervised truck drivers who transported supplies to the troops at Camp Anaconda. His son James Bryan Harlan offered some perspective when he remarked:

Nobody wants to see their father die . . . but to have it be while doing something of this significance, we're proud of him.

I would like to take this opportunity to say that not only is his family proud of him, but all of America is proud of Jimmy's heroism and sacrifice.

SGT James W. Harlan drove a rig across the highways of the United States, and he traversed the desert sands of Iraq. He had an adventurous spirit, and his far travels and his exemplary service were a natural fit for that little boy who once jumped off his parents' roof.

Jimmy Harlan left an inspirational example for his children and grandchildren, his brothers, Kenny Likens and DeWayne Likens; his sister, Doris Taylor; his step-brothers, Randall Wingfield, Steve Wingfield, and the late Michael Calloway; his fiancée, Carol Gray; his mother, Doris Marie Gray; and his late father, William Arthur Harlan.

I ask the Senate to keep the family of SGT James W. Harlan in their thoughts and prayers. I know they will be in mine.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will be 2 hours of debate with respect to amendment No. 1184, as modified, offered by the Senator from Texas, Mr. CORNYN; an amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts, Mr. KENNEDY, related to the same subject, with time equally divided and controlled between Senator CORNYN and Senator KENNEDY.

Who yields time?

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I am requesting just 30 seconds to make a unanimous consent request.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside and that we call up three amendments, Nos. 1187, 1188, and 1201, and then we be returned back to the pending amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Objection.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. ALLARD. I thank the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, just for the benefit of the Members, we have tried to establish a way of moving along today. We are going to consider the Cornyn amendment, and then there is an amendment that I will place at the desk. We will have a 2-hour time allocation equally divided, though I am not sure we will take all the time, and then we will have an opportunity to vote on that measure.

We are trying to set up a series of votes through the morning, through the afternoon, and through the evening. What we are going to try to do is to give Members as much time as possible on these items, rotating back and forth through the course of the day, and we will work with our colleagues to try to accommodate their schedules. We have a rigorous program, and we will announce that.

We have talked with the floor managers, Senator SPECTER, Senator KYL, and others, on these measures, and we will proceed in that way. So Members need to understand that we will have a busy and full day, and we will start off with the amendment of the Senator from Texas, No. 1184, as I understand.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas.

AMENDMENT NO. 1184

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I yield myself up to 10 minutes.

Mr. President, this amendment we will vote on this morning is an important amendment. It was first filed 2 full weeks ago, and it has taken this long to be able to get a vote on this amendment, for which I am grateful, but I must say that, as the Republican leader indicated this morning, the rate of progress with getting amendments debated and voted on is not promising. And the fact that the majority leader has now filed cloture, potentially cutting off the opportunity for full and fair debate and an adequate number of votes on this bill, again, is not encouraging at all.

I am one of those who would like to see a solution to this problem, but I think it is important that we reflect on what kind of solution we will accomplish if we are successful. To me, the goal is simply to restore law and order to our immigration system. It is important to our national security because we have to know who is coming into our country and why people are here in a post-9/11 world. It is important to public safety because we know the same broken borders that can allow people who are economic migrants to come across can also allow common criminals, drug traffickers, and even terrorists. And it is important to our prosperity in this Nation that we reestablish our heritage as a nation that believes in the rule of law. We simply cannot have people choosing to obey some laws and disobeying others. That is not adherence to the rule of law. That is picking and choosing, cherry-picking what laws you find convenient and what laws you find inconvenient.

To my mind, and based upon my experience with my constituents across the State of Texas last week, this is the cause for so much distrust of the Federal Government when it comes to this issue. The basic objection to this underlying bill is not that people don't believe there is a serious problem, it is not that people are racist or anti-immigrant or nativists or know-nothings or any of the other names that sometimes people are called. It is that the American people believe we have been here before.

In 1986, they gave their trust to the Federal Government to actually fix this problem by granting a one-time amnesty and then providing for an enforcement system that would actually be enforced against employers who hire people who cannot legally work here. They were sold a bill of goods. It didn't work. We got an amnesty, and we got no enforcement. That is why people are so distrustful.

So if we are serious about restoring the rule of law, I believe the first place to start would be by passing this amendment, amendment No. 1184, on the floor of the Senate.

What does this amendment do?

Well, first of all, this amendment would mandate that gang members cannot obtain legal status. It is well documented that members of MS-13 and other gangs, ultra-violet gangs emanating from Central America, have come across our broken borders and committed terrible crimes of violence in the United States. In the underlying bill, the Secretary of Homeland Security could actually grant a waiver that would allow a gang member legal status.

That just cannot be. Congress should draw a line about whom we are willing to allow in and whom we are not, and we shouldn't delegate this to the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security or the Attorney General or anyone who might hold those positions in the future.

The next thing my amendment would do is it would address the definition of "good moral character." We would allow only people with good moral character, as defined in the bill, to obtain legal status. The underlying bill does not contain a prohibition on those who are affiliated with terrorist organizations. My amendment makes the commonsense change that would bar them. The amendment also requires that those who apply for legalization under the bill must generally show they have good moral character.

Third, my amendment makes the failure of sex offenders to register in high-speed flight crimes grounds of ineligibility for Z visas.

Fourth, my amendment makes repeat DWIs, driving while intoxicated or driving under the influence, an aggravated felony. It is a simple fact of life that repeat DWI offenders are a substantial threat to a community's safety.

They have a proven history of involvement in various serious collisions that kill, maim, and otherwise seriously injure innocent people.

When I was in Texas this last week, I met with representatives of Mothers Against Drunk Driving and told them about the gaps in this underlying bill and received the assurance, at least of that representative, that this was an issue she cared passionately about. I suggest all of us who care passionately about public safety and decreasing the incidence of drunk driving and driving under the influence, that are a threat to public safety, that those who care about decreasing that threat should vote for this amendment. Designating a third DUI offense as an aggravated felony recognizes the acute danger that repeat DUI offenders present to the American people and the strong need to remove from the United States those who repeatedly commit DUI offenses.

The fifth category is the one on which I believe there is the biggest disagreement. This has to do with so-called absconders and identity thieves. This gets to the essence of this bill and whether we are serious about restoring the rule of law to our immigration system and whether we are going to send a message, loudly and clearly, that while we might be willing to consider those who have entered our country without a visa, who are by definition guilty of a misdemeanor, or those who have come in legally and who have overstayed, who are guilty of a status violation under our immigration laws—while we might be willing to consider them for a path to legalization and citizenship under some conditions, we should not allow a path to legalization and citizenship for those who have openly defied our courts, the lawful orders of our courts, and who have shown themselves as having no regard for the rule of law.

What kind of citizens can we expect these individuals to be, individuals who have been ordered deported, who have had their day in court and who simply defied that court order by going on the lam and melting into the American landscape, or those who have been ordered deported and who have actually been deported but then who have reentered the country? Both of those, going on the lam after you have been ordered deported and reentering after you have been actually deported, are felonies under section 243 of the Immigration and Naturalization Act—a felony.

If we are serious about restoring respect for the rule of law, then we should, at the very least, prohibit felons and repeat offenders from getting the Z visa or path to legal status, including the opportunity to apply for legal permanent residency and citizenship. We should be willing to draw a bright line there.

I have to say, with all due respect, if we do not adopt this amendment, then we might as well retitle that section of this bill, “No Felon Left Behind.” It is clear, whether it is gang members, terrorists, sex offenders or repeat drunk drivers, these people have thumbed their noses at the law. While there is some common ground, and I congratulate Senator KENNEDY for moving our way on this issue, it completely omits the category of felons who have shown no regard for our laws and who have shown themselves unwilling to live in peace with Americans in this country. We ought to draw a bright line there. My amendment would do that.

Mr. President, I yield myself 2 additional minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Senator is recognized.

Mr. CORNYN. I know we have a number of colleagues who not only are Members of the Senate but are also running for the highest office in our land, running for the office of President of the United States. I know there have been a number of debates on the Democratic side and Republican side. I believe this amendment and the vote on this amendment is a defining issue for those who seek the highest office in the land, for them to demonstrate their respect for the rule of law and to demonstrate their desire to return law and order to our immigration system. A “no” vote on the Cornyn amendment will demonstrate that we are not serious, that we do not believe the rule of law deserves respect because, unfortunately, under the Kennedy amendment, the alternative is literally a figleaf that has been offered to give people the sense they voted for something so they will have an explanation, even knowing they have not voted to exclude these felons. A failure to vote yes on the Cornyn amendment will indicate we are not serious about restoring the rule of law through our immigration system and will indicate we are willing to allow felons and people who have no desire, based on their experience, to comply with our laws and live in peace in this country, to become part of America. I think we need to send a loud and clear message as to where that line should be drawn.

I reserve the remainder of our time on this side and yield the floor.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. CORNYN. I will, Mr. President.

Mr. DURBIN. I would like to ask the Senator about a hypothetical that is not a hypothetical. It is a real case that has come through my office in Chicago. I ask the Senator from Texas if he would consider the facts in this case and tell me how his amendment would apply to the case.

In a family in Chicago, the father is a citizen of the United States and the four children that he and his wife have are all citizens of the United States. The mother is undocumented. The mother came into the United States illegally. She was married, raised a family—and her grandmother died in Mexico. She went back over the border and, when she tried to reenter the United States, produced identification that was false. They caught her. They deported her back to Mexico, but she made it back to the United States. She is now with her family in Chicago.

It is a case that has had a lot of publicity because she was deported 2 days before Mother’s Day. She has been allowed to return to the United States on a humanitarian waiver to be with her family.

I would like to ask the Senator from Texas, how would you treat her under your amendment? What would her status be? Would she be characterized as an aggravated felon? Could she, under any circumstances, be given any opportunity to become legal under your amendment?

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I will be glad to try to answer the question. Similar to a lot of hypotheticals, it has a lot of twists and turns. Let me give it a try.

Under this amendment, people who entered the country illegally and who are guilty of illegal entry, or who come in legally and overstay, would not be rendered ineligible, not under the Cornyn amendment. Those who are repeat offenders—in other words, people who have entered illegally, then exited the country and reentered; exited, reentered—are guilty of a more serious offense because they are multiple offenders.

I am not sure, under the hypothetical the Senator asked, whether this individual would be barred. But people who are serial offenders and violators of our immigration laws would be barred under this amendment.

Mr. DURBIN. So if I might ask the Senator from Texas: The Senator from Texas would suggest, then, that this mother of four citizens, married to a citizen of the United States, who has lived here for more than 10 years, should be deported?

Mr. CORNYN. What my amendment would do would not order her deported. What it would do is say she is ineligible for a Z visa.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask the Senator from Texas—let’s get down to the reality of the situation. As far as this family is concerned, where the mother has gone through the experience I described, you would say that family has to either break up or leave?

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I disagree with the characterization of the Senator from Illinois. As this hypothetical individual is married to a U.S. citizen, she could get a waiver on that ground because she is married to a U.S. citizen. She would not, under existing law—she could get a waiver and would not be deported necessarily.

Mr. DURBIN. If I might ask one last question, is that a provision in your amendment? Or is that in the underlying bill?

Mr. CORNYN. In response to the question, that is a provision of current law that my amendment does not touch.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator from Texas.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Illinois for raising that issue. I think our language makes it extremely clear. I think there is a real question. We are looking through the language of the Senator from Texas about whether that would necessarily define that individual as an aggravated felon and therefore would deny the judge the opportunity to make a humanitarian finding on it, but we can come back to that.

AMENDMENT NO. 1333, AS MODIFIED

Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 1333, as modified.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] proposes an amendment numbered 1333, as modified, to amendment No. 1150.

Mr. KENNEDY. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

On page 48, strike line 11 and all that follows through page 51, line 37, and insert the following:

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I will make a comment. I see my friend from Rhode Island. I would like to make a brief comment on the amendment of Senator CORNYN and a brief comment on our amendment. Then I hope the Senator from Rhode Island will speak to it.

It is always interesting to listen, when we are talking about the immigration bill, to those who go back to the 1986 bill. I remember it very clearly. I voted against it. That was an amnesty. That was a real amnesty. We hear a great deal in the public about what is amnesty, what is not amnesty. That was amnesty. This legislation is not amnesty. That effectively said those people who were undocumented, who came here, were forgiven. They followed the basic recommendations of a report by the distinguished president of Notre Dame, the Hessberg Report. I remember it clearly.

There were enforcement provisions in there. They were completely inadequate. I might remind my friend from Texas, from 1986 to 1992, we had a Republican administration, a Republican President, and they didn't enforce it, as they have not enforced the recent legislation. They have had three investigations in terms of investigating undocumented aliens—three. They are the great defenders of the American border? Great defenders about immigration reform?

Please.

We always have to go through the little dance about the 1986 bill and the enforcement. I wish, during that period of time—1986, 1987, 1988, 1989—I wish all during those years we had the enforcement. But we did not. So we are where we are today. The real question is, is this legislation that we have now the downpayment on national security, on security internally? Does it provide the opportunity for those who are here to pay the fine, go to the back of the line, demonstrate a good working relationship and be able to emerge out of the shadows—the AgJOBS bill, the DREAM Act, and other provisions of the temporary worker program?

With regards to the Cornyn amendment, we have an immigration program in this legislation that is strong, practical, and fair. One of the essential elements is to bring the 12 million men, women, and children—hard-working families—out of the shadows into the sunlight of America. We know we are not going to conduct massive roundups and deport 12 million people. We don't have the means to do it. It would disrupt our economy, inflict untold hardships on millions of hard-working people. It is estimated it would cost more than $250 billion. We would have buses all the way from Los Angeles to New York and back to trying to do this, if it were even possible.

But the Cornyn amendment would make vast numbers of these families ineligible for our program. We are trying to deal with a key element of the program and that deals with the families who are here. It would keep them in the shadows, where employers abuse and underpay them. That hurts the immigrants, but it hurts American workers, too, by depressing wages.

That is what we see that is out there now, with undocumented—the 12 million with a work record which is even better, in terms of percentages, than native born Americans, people who are willing to work and want to work hard. But there is exploitation of those individuals because every one of them knows all the boss has to do is go down and call the immigration service.

Work 80 hours a week.

Well, I don't want to.

Well, I'm going to call the immigration service and you're deported.

They do that. That individuals are exploited in this country is well understood. We are trying to free ourselves from that kind of a condition. But the Cornyn amendment would still make vast numbers of these families ineligible for our programs, keep them in the shadows where employers abuse and underpay them, which hurts the immigrants but it hurts American workers, too, by depressing their wages.

The Cornyn amendment does this by classifying an array of common garden variety immigration offenses as crimes that would make them ineligible for the program. For example, the Cornyn amendment says that if you come here, have been ordered out of the country by immigration authorities, but if you fail to leave or you come back, you are ineligible. That is exactly what has been going on with our broken immigration system; people have come to work, employers want them to come, and they have benefitted our economy.

Immigration officers may find them and order them home, but our employers beg them to come back. Our broken borders make that possible.

Cornyn says: If you have used false identification, you may be found inadmissible and may be deported. But in our broken system, the people who have wanted to work have been forced to use the false identification. That is the reality of where we are today. Cornyn says he wants to be tough on gang members, sex offenders, individuals convicted of domestic violence. So do we. We have addressed any provisions not covered by the current law. Our amendment goes even further than the bipartisan compromise bill.

He wants to exclude gang members. Our amendment does that too. Nobody who has engaged in illegal activity as part of a criminal gang will be allowed to enter or stay in this country. He says we should bar sex offenders from coming here. Our amendment does that. Any convicted sex offender who fails to register will not be allowed back in the country; if already here, then those offenders will face deportation.

Cornyn says immigrants who commit acts of domestic violence or endanger their families should be punished. Our amendment does that. He says drunk drivers should be deported. Our amendment does that. Any immigrant with one felony conviction for drunk driving will not be allowed to enter this country. If convicted here, then the drunk driver will be deported.

He says there should be consequences for individuals engaging in fraud. Our amendment does that. Our amendment punishes anyone who commits perjury or makes false statements when seeking immigration benefits. If any person lies on their application, then this individual will be prosecuted and subject to criminal penalties.

He says we should go after immigrants convicted of firearms offenses. Our amendment does that, too. Who are the people we want to apply under our program? Who are the people the Cornyn amendment would condemn to the shadows of abuse? We know that the vast majority of the families who have come over here are hard-working people who care for their children, go to church, and contribute to their communities.

In America, we respect hard work. Hard work built America. So our program says: If your only offense is that you came here to work, you came here to provide for your family, we will proceed in a way that you can atone for that offense and earn the right to stay and work legally. If you are a criminal, then we will arrest you. If you are a threat to our national security, a terrorist, then we will lock you up. If you try to cheat your way into the program through fraud, we will deport you. But if you came here to work and build a life, then you can stay. But first you have to meet the tough requirements: You have to pay the $5,000 fine, show a steady work history, learn English, get to the back of the line to get your green card, behind all those who have been waiting legally to get theirs.

The Cornyn amendment creates harmful barriers for refugees fleeing persecution. In America, we have had a long and proud tradition of providing refuge to people who have faced persecution and oppression in their lands, whose lives are at risk because they stood up for their beliefs.

We took in refugees from Cuba and from Vietnam as they fled communism. We have helped people from Somalia and Bosnia and other areas of conflict and oppression. Now we are beginning to help people whose lives are at risk because they helped our troops in Iraq.

But often these persecuted refugees have no choice but to cooperate with their oppressors in order to save their families' lives and enable their escape. The Cornyn amendment says: If you do that, if you provide what is called material support to these oppressors and terrorist groups, then we are not going to rescue you from the hands of your oppressors. You have to take your chances and hope your oppressors do not persecute you or even kill you or your family.

Consider the case of Helene from Sierra Leone, Revolutionary United Front rebels attacked her home, hacked one of her family members to death with a machete; they set her son on fire, leaving him near dead with severe burns. They held her family captive, raping her and her daughter and forcing them to cook, forcing her to cook and wash their clothes.

The Cornyn amendment would bar legitimate refugees who were forced to assist their oppressors under duress. Under the Cornyn amendment, Helene would be ineligible to come to America as a refugee because she cooked for the rebels and washed their clothes. Under the Cornyn amendment, she and her family are ineligible because they provided material support for a terrorist group.

If that is not bad enough, the Cornyn amendment says she can be excluded based on secret evidence, evidence that neither she nor anyone else outside the Government can see. She may never know why she was excluded. The Cornyn amendment even bars her from going to court to explain her situation and appeal the denial of her case. The decision of the Secretary of Homeland Security or the Attorney General is final.

Helene would never get her day in court to explain the tragic circumstances of her case. The door to freedom in America would be closed shut, end of the discussion, you go back into the hands of your persecutors.

Madam President, surely by now, we have learned that closed proceedings conducted by executive branch officials based on secret evidence without any possibility of court review are inconsistent with American traditions and inconsistent with the search for justice; let's not go down that road again.

The amendment makes all of its changes retroactive. They apply to the past and future conduct. The Cornyn amendment would change the rules in midstream. That is frowned on in American jurisprudence; it is unconstitutional in criminal law and disfavored elsewhere. People whose conduct would not have affected their immigration status at a time it was committed, will suddenly suffer severe consequence. The retroactivity provisions simply bring home the punitive nature of this amendment. It is not designed to contribute to creation of a tough but fair and practical system of immigration, it is designed to be harshly punitive.

This amendment would exclude hundreds of thousands from benefits of this bill and undermine the bipartisan compromise that members of this body worked so long and so hard to produce. We will have an opportunity to vote for an alternative, the amendment I have offered. The amendment expands the already tough criminal gang provisions contained in the bill.

If you are associated with a gang, and that gang is known to be engaged in violent crimes, drug crimes, crimes involving firearms or explosives, alien smuggling or trafficking, you are not going to qualify for benefits. If you are associated with a gang and the gang has been engaged in crimes of violence, including murder, arson, possession, kidnapping, bank robbery, sexual exploitation, abuse of children, obstruction of justice, witness tampering, burglary, racketeering, among other crimes, you are not going to be entitled to receive lawful status in this country, and you are not going to qualify for benefits.

This amendment expands the already tough grounds of inadmissibility and the criminal penalties in the current immigration law. We target essentially the same provisions as Senator CORNYN but in many instances go further. This amendment bars the admission of sex offenders who don't register as required and makes them subject to deportation as well.

It ensures that wife beaters, child abusers, stalkers, and others who prey on the vulnerable are inadmissible to the United States. It ensures that a drunk driver who is sentenced to 1 year of prison cannot be admitted to the United States and can be removed as well. Our drunk driving provisions, which require only one felony conviction, are even more restrictive than Senator CORNYN's, which requires three convictions before a drunk driver becomes inadmissible. We increase the penalties for illegal entry. We ensure that immigration fraud is subject to perjury charges. We toughen the penalties for firearm offenses. We are tough, but we are practical too. That is where this side by side differs from Senator CORNYN. His provisions are bright-line rules. He turns many of these criminal offenses into aggravated felonies. That is "immigration speak" for: You will never, ever be forgiven.

For many offenses, such as murder, that is more than a reasonable consequence. Murderers should not become U.S. citizens. Under the current law, they can never become a citizen. But most immigrants are not murderers, they are people who have entered the United States illegally. Under the Cornyn amendment, they could be aggravated felons too.

As a practical matter, Senator CORNYN does not want us to distinguish between murder and illegal entry; but that is not practical, nor does it reflect our criminal justice system. So it is true that we build in some small but important waivers that in extraordinary circumstances would give someone a second chance, not murderers but someone who had long ago made a mistake.

This week, I received a letter about a young man named Adrian, a former gang member in Massachusetts who has turned his life around. Adrian went from a life of juvenile delinquency to that of a dedicated student; one who works full time now in hopes of going to college. Adrian's principal and his teachers praise him for his hard work, his commitment to family, his newfound motivation to go to college. They want him to have a chance to stay in this country.

The author of the letter then says: "It is a very, very hard thing to leave the gang life behind. There are other Adrians out there as well who have made the same decision regardless of difficulty. Is the message this country wants to send them, that what they have done is unforgivable regardless of whatever changes they may have courageously made? Wouldn't the country gain by having an incentive in law that might attract young people to leave gang life and move their lives forward a very different way? Wouldn't it be helpful to the country to have a waiver that a person could apply for if they can prove they have left a gang and provided evidence on how they have moved on?"

Every change in our immigration law represents a statement about whom we are as a country. Are we a country that takes individual circumstances into account or are we a country that punishes with no regard for individual circumstances? We can be tough on crime and yet retain a level of discretion in our immigration laws? This is the crux of the difference between what I am suggesting to the Senate and what Senator CORNYN has proposed.

That a measure of discretion is every bit as much a tool of law enforcement as the strictest ban. I see my friend who has been waiting here. I yield time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. MCCASKILL.) The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I would ask the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts if we may go back and forth across the aisle. I have a speaker on our side as well who would like to be recognized for 10 minutes. Is that acceptable?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, I would like to follow that. The good Senator was here even before I was this morning. Is that agreeable?

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Madam President, I would yield to the request of the Senator from Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. VITTER. I thank all my colleagues for their courtesies.

Madam President, I rise in strong support of the Cornyn amendment and in opposition to the much weaker, watered-down Democratic alternative.

This amendment illustrates a lot about this debate. The Cornyn amendment is clear. It is necessary. It is common sense. It is absolutely necessary we pass amendments such as this and have the ability to debate and vote on amendments such as this in the important immigration debate.

This amendment is very straightforward. It prevents terrorists, gang members, sex offenders, and other folks who have broken the law in significant ways, committed significant felonies, from receiving immigration benefits and citizenship in the future. How can any of us in the Senate oppose a straightforward and necessary commonsense amendment? How can any of us be comfortable with an underlying bill which has these gaping loopholes? We must address these gaping loopholes. How can we tell families across America that we are going to allow sex offenders and gang members to become legal residents, possibly citizens? The Cornyn amendment would prevent this. It would address all of these significant loopholes.

Again, terrorists, gang members, violent gang members, those who have committed other significant felonies, those who have been detained for coming into the country illegally and have absconded, those who have been deported from the country for coming into the country illegally and have reentered illegally—all of those categories of illegals should be prevented from gaining the benefits of this bill. The Cornyn amendment clearly does that.

The Democratic alternative clearly does not. It has significant omissions from the Cornyn amendment. It allows absconders, those who have been detained and have gone underground, to receive the benefits of the bill. It allows those who have been deported from the country and who came back in illegally to get the benefits of this bill. It allows others who fall into the category of gang members and those who committed serious felonies to gain the benefits of this legislation. That is simply wrong. We must support the commonsense, straightforward Cornyn amendment.

I also want to spend a portion of my time urging my colleagues to not vote for cloture on this bill as it presently rests before us, because we have many important amendments to consider. Two of those are the amendments I will humbly offer to the Senate. They are important issues; they are important amendments. I urge us to pay careful consideration to them and to have an opportunity for debate and vote.

In that spirit, I ask unanimous consent to lay aside the pending amendment and to call up my amendment No. 1338.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KENNEDY. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. VITTER. I am sorry to hear that. Let me try my second amendment which is also at the desk. It concerns a significant provision in the bill which we need the opportunity to debate and vote on. That is Vitter amendment No. 1339.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KENNEDY. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. VITTER. Madam President, unfortunately, this illustrates the point about the inappropriateness of cloture. These are two significant amendments which go to important provisions of the bill. All of us—and more importantly, the American people—deserve to have these matters debated and voted on. Let me explain what these amendments are about. Everybody—certainly the majority side—has been given the amendments.

My first amendment only requires what Congress originally mandated back in 1986; that is, the entry/exit system known today as US-VISIT. We must have that fully operational before all aspects of this bill are allowed to go into effect. It was authorized 10 years ago, but it is not near to fully operational now. We must make sure that it is a part of this bill's enforcement trigger.

Without the US-VISIT system's completion, we can't be sure that we know what individuals are in the country. In fact, we can be sure we will not know because how can we possibly have a grasp of who is in the country and who is not in the country without this system which tracks people as they exit? There are a lot of folks on visas here for a limited period of time. Under that visa, they, of course, need to exit the country before their visa is up. The US-VISIT system allows us to know if they are doing that. How can we possibly be ready for the full implementation of this legislation, how can we possibly say we have the enforcement system we need in place without the US-VISIT system, without knowing who exits the country and when, without knowing whether they have overstayed their visa?

As of 2006, the illegal population included 4 to 5.5 million overstays, people here illegally because they are overstaying the time limits of their visa. The US-VISIT system is absolutely necessary to get to the heart of the problem and to enforce against overstays. How can we say we have adequate enforcement, how can we trigger the other provisions of this bill without making sure we have that in place, functioning, fully operational?

The US-VISIT system is not any part of the triggers now in the bill. It must be. That is what my amendment 1339 goes to.

As I mentioned, I have another amendment, No. 1338, that would correct a provision in the bill which doesn't allow for a catch-and-release program anymore but simply changes that to a catch, pay, and release program. In this legislation, those in this country illegally who are caught and who are not from Mexico don't have to be kept in custody. They can be released on a $5,000 bond. For months, and indeed years, we on the Senate floor and those around the country have decried the catch-and-release program, a program that has been in place where illegals are caught but are released into our country and simply given a piece of paper that says: Show up to court on such-and-such a date. Guess what. They never do. This bill merely changes that to a catch, pay, and release program. It allows catch and release to continue, only with a $5,000 bond.

Why is that a problem? Because many of the folks we are talking about, particularly those who are among the most dangerous, those involved in illegal drug activity, those in other organized crime, can get the $5,000 bond. If they are already paying human smugglers to get them across the border, in many cases thousands and thousands of dollars, one has to assume they can get the resources to pay this bond. Changing catch and release to catch, pay, and release is completely inadequate. Yet that is what the underlying legislation does.

Amendment No. 1338 would close that loophole, would say: No, we are going to end catch and release forever, and we are not going to allow cash, pay, and release. When we catch these folks coming into the country illegally who are not from Mexico, so we can't simply send them back to Mexico at the southern border, we are going to detain them. We are not going to let them into the country on a bond or anything else. We are going to detain them until they are deported, and we are going to work very hard to deport them as quickly as possible.

Again, I believe my two amendments, which have not been allowed to be offered, clearly illustrate why we are not ready for cloture on this bill. This is a significant debate on a massive, 800-page bill. This bill, if enacted, will affect our country in major and significant ways for decades to come. Everybody admits that, no matter what side of the debate they may be on. Yet we have only been allowed to have a modest number of votes on the bill, something on the order of 12. That is ridiculous. We need these sorts of amendments considered and voted on, and we must oppose cloture until that happens.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, we have tried to work out an orderly process as we have proceeded. We are going to have plenty of time to deal with a range of different amendments, as we did with the Vitter amendment previously.

I yield 12 minutes to the Senator from Rhode Island.

How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts has 39½ minutes remaining.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield the Senator from Rhode Island 12 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

REMEMBERING SENATOR CRAIG THOMAS

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Madam President, this is my first time speaking on the floor since the passing of our colleague, Senator Thomas. I know we are all very conscious of the desk draped in black across the way, next to Senator CORNYN. I extend my condolences to his many friends, my many esteemed colleagues who knew and admired Senator Thomas and mourn his loss and know he will be sorely missed by his friends in the Senate and his friends and family in his native State of Wyoming.

AMENDMENT NO. 1184

I rise today to address amendment No. 1184 offered by my friend from Texas, my former attorney general colleague, Senator CORNYN.

I will oppose this amendment. It is not entirely without merit in every one of its many dimensions, but it would undercut the fundamental principles of due process which are a longstanding and vital hallmark of our legal system. I fully support the creation of new grounds for inadmissibility to the United States for convicted sex offenders, gang members, repeat DUI offenders, and for individuals who have been convicted of firearms offenses and domestic violence. I have prosecuted these crimes. I have a firsthand understanding of how dangerous these criminals are. Simply stated, America's doors should not be opened to people who commit such crimes. If Senator CORNYN believes there are loopholes, I am happy to plug them, although I would note that the Secretary of Homeland Security, the Attorney General, the President, and others seem satisfied.

For that reason, I will support the alternative amendment offered by Senator KENNEDY which would add these offenses and others to the grounds for inadmissibility.

There is a right way to ensure dangerous criminals don't enter the country and there is a wrong way. Unfortunately, the amendment we are debating goes about it the wrong way. Let me explain.

Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, good moral character is a prerequisite for a variety of benefits and privileges, the most important being naturalization. Therefore, the law lists a series of characteristics which exclude a person from the definition of "good moral character": for example, a person whose income is derived principally from gambling or one who has given false testimony for the purpose of obtaining benefits or one who has been convicted of an aggravated felony. This, of course, makes perfect sense. These individuals as a general rule should not get on a path to naturalization.

But this amendment would change the definition of "good moral character" in a very novel and unsettling way: It would exclude from that definition one who the Secretary of Homeland Security or the Attorney General determines, in the unreviewable discretion of the Secretary or the Attorney General, to have been at any time an alien described in section 212(a)(3) or 237(a)(4). These sections list a series of security-related grounds under which an alien is excludable or deportable. Those grounds, sensibly enough, include espionage, sabotage, terrorist activity, and any other unlawful activity. Anyone convicted of such offenses or even indicted for such offenses should be, of course, excludable. But that is not what this amendment says. This amendment would give the Secretary of Homeland Security and the Attorney General unreviewable discretion to make a determination as to good moral character.

First, as I have previously said, I am not inclined to expand the powers of the current Attorney General in any substantive way, much less to expand his power to make important unreviewable decisions. Setting aside my grave hesitation about this particular Attorney General, as a general rule, I don't believe we ought to prevent judges from reviewing important decisions which can affect life, liberty, and property. This would violate one of the most fundamental principles of American democracy—judicial review, a principle we have honored for centuries.

The second issue is even more unsettling. That is, under the proposed amendment, a person could be determined to lack "good moral character" if the unreviewable decision is made that he or she is "described in" these two specific sections of the immigration code.

"Described in," what exactly does it mean to be "described in" a statute? Not "convicted" under a statute, not "in violation" of a statute, not "indicted" under a statute but merely "described in" it.

Who knows what it means? I have found no precedent for this formulation. Is it consistent with American values to grant the Attorney General and the Secretary of Homeland Security the unreviewable discretion to say that a person is "described in" those statutes; the unreviewable power to say that somebody is engaged in "unlawful activity"; and the unreviewable power to then deny them the benefits and privileges of American law?

That is not my experience as a prosecutor. I found due process to be important and valuable.

The amendment does not stop there. It would allow this unreviewable discretion to be based on evidence which the accused would never have the opportunity to confront.

Madam President, like you, I have spent my professional life in the American legal system, a good deal of it I spent as a U.S. attorney and as an attorney general. My experience is that our American system of law stands on some fundamental principles, among them that people can be aware of the charges brought against them, that people have an opportunity to confront the evidence used against them, that the prosecution and the judge are not rolled into one, and that we have judicial review of important decisions affecting people's rights and privileges.

These are basic principles, and they represent core American values.

I do not know why we have to keep getting up to defend this. This is bedrock stuff. From the suspension of habeas corpus, to the administration's legal defense of torture, to "extraordinary rendition," and so on, we have seen relentless efforts to chip away at bedrock principles of American law. With this amendment, there they go again.

Of course, we must do everything proper and necessary to protect our borders and keep Americans safe. But to throw out the separation between prosecution and judge, to throw out the opportunity to understand and explain evidence used against you, to throw out our ancient principle of judicial review, to allow Government officials to take away rights and privileges without answering to anyone? I do not think so.

These principles are too dear to be thrown away so lightly. Our country has been through a lot over the years, and these principles have survived and flourished, to lie today in our hands, in our stewardship, to protect and to pass on, as they were passed on to us.

I do not think this immigration issue is so terrifying that we need to throw these principles away now over immigration. We are made of sterner stuff than that.

I ask my colleagues to oppose Senator CORNYN's amendment No. 1184.

I thank Senator KENNEDY, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I yield the Senator from Alabama 10 minutes from our allotted time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam President, I appreciate the Senator's comments about American law and principles. As a former U.S. attorney and attorney general, I share the general view. He mentions the historic privileges we have in America. But let me tell you, no one has a right to enter the United States of America. We decide who comes in and who does not.

That is a core principle of sovereignty. Every Nation in the world makes those decisions, if they are a functioning state, and you then allow people to enter on your terms, on whatever conditions they may be. The condition may be, you can enter as long as you are enrolled in a college, you can enter for a certain period of time, you can enter on a tourist visa to do a certain number of things.

But those conditions are not such that if you say someone cannot come here you violated the laws of America. If you say you can come to America but not if you have a history of being a sexual predator, what right does that violate? What principle of American law does that violate? I suggest none.

We have every right to insist and ensure the immigration system of the United States serves the national interest. The national interest means you do not allow people to continue to stay in our country or to come to our country who have repeat DUIs or who sell drugs or who are associated with terrorists. How basic is that? Nobody has a constitutional legal right to demand entry into the United States of America. How much more basic can it be than that?

So that is where we are confused. It amazes me the lack of understanding and comprehension of what it is all about. We set the standards. We have the most generous immigration laws of almost any country in the world. It has been a big part of our heritage. We are not going to end immigration. Nobody wants to do that, or to act irrationally, and so forth.

But to set reasonable standards, as Senator CORNYN is attempting to do with his amendment, only makes common sense. For example, I have mentioned some of the loopholes. He fixes them. I give him every bit of credit for this: for standing firm, for insisting on this vote, after he has been objected to and objected to and blocked from getting his vote. But he stood firm on this issue. He is going to fix a number of the problems I wish to briefly mention.

Some aggravated felons who have sexually abused a minor are eligible for amnesty under this bill. They have no entitlement to amnesty. Nobody has entitlement to amnesty, whether they are perfectly wonderful citizens and all that. They are not entitled to that. This is a gift we give. So why would you want to give that to somebody who sexually abused a minor?

Well, the child molester who committed the crime, before this bill is enacted, is not barred from getting amnesty if their conviction document omitted the age of the victim. If the conviction document did not put the age down, then they are to be admitted under this bill. After there was some objection to it, they fixed that language for the future but did not fix it for the past or current convictions. So I think Senator CORNYN is correct. I support that portion of his amendment very strongly.

Another provision is that aliens with terrorism connections under this legislation are not barred from getting amnesty. They do not have a right to stay here. If we have any suggestion that someone in this country, now here, or someone who wants to come here is connected to terrorists, they do not have to be admitted. What kind of right do they have to demand to be admitted? If our State Department, in some country around the world, has information that a person is connected to terrorism, they do not have any right to demand to come here. They come at our pleasure, our sufferance.

So one of the things this bill, as written, does is it says an illegal alien seeking most of the immigration benefits must show good character. But last year's bill—let me say this on the terrorism question—specifically barred aliens with terrorism connections from having the required good moral character to enter the United States. That is one of the things we say. You cannot come here unless you have good moral character. You cannot come here if you are a felon, a thief, a drug dealer or a child molester. Surely, that would make sense. So this bill eliminated that.

Another example, surprisingly, of this bill being weaker even than last year's fatally flawed bill: The bill's drafters have ignored the Bush administration's request that changes be made to the asylum, cancellation of removal, and withholding of removal statutes in order to prevent aliens with terrorist connections from receiving relief. The bill drafters were told about this by the Bush administration and were urged to put different language in, and they refused to do so, for reasons I cannot fathom.

But it begins to show a certain mindset. I think that mindset is we are somehow here to represent people who want to come into our country and stay in our country instead of representing the American people and the interests of the United States.

Last year, we had good moral character as a requirement. Good moral character involved not being connected to terrorists. But according to current law, an alien cannot have good moral character if they are a habitual drunkard, a majority of their income comes from illegal gambling, giving false testimony for immigration benefit purposes, they have been in jail for 180 days, they have been convicted of an aggravated felony or they have engaged in genocide, torture, or extrajudicial killings. That is current law we have. But this year's bill is completely missing these new terrorism bars that were in last year's bill, and the bill no longer requires good moral character. That is a matter that leaves us at greater risk than we need to be. It concerns me.

Another example. Instead of ensuring that members of violent gangs, such as MS-13, are deported, the bill will allow violent gang members to get amnesty as long as they renounce their gang membership on their application. That is the current law. Under the bill, being in a violent gang is not going to prevent you from qualifying for amnesty. The bill requires amnesty applicants to list—to list—you are required to list that gang membership on your application. Then you get a blank that says "renunciation of gang affiliation." So if you check that blank and say you renounce it, then you get to stay in, perhaps.

So why don't we allow this: If an illegal alien has been a member of a violent international gang, such as Mara Salvatrucha 13, MS-13, why don't we say that blocks him or her from being eligible for the amnesty in the bill? Loyalty to the United States should be the requirement, not loyalty to some outside gang that is violent.

The night before last, I happened to turn on C-SPAN and catch a National Press Club conference by a series of law enforcement officers involved in the Border Patrol, the former chairman of the Border Patrol. They were ferocious in their criticism of this bill. I was surprised how strongly they felt about it.

Hugh Brien, himself an immigrant, was Chief of the Border Patrol from 1986 to 1989. He called the bill a sellout, a complete betrayal of the Nation, a slap in the face to millions of Americans who have come here legally like he had done. In 1986, he recalled: "Our masters, our mandarins promised it would work." Of course, the 1986 bill did not. He also said, based on his experience in many years with the Border Patrol: "It's a disaster."

Kent Lundgren, the national chairman of the Association of Former Border Patrol Officers, said this: "There are no meaningful criminal or terrorist checks" in the legislation. He noted that the "screening will not happen." He added Congress is lying about it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used his time.

MR. SESSIONS. Madam President, I thank the Chair and support the Cornyn amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

MR. KENNEDY. Madam President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-one minutes.

MR. KENNEDY. Madam President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized for 5 minutes.

MR. SCHUMER. Thank you, Madam President.

First, I salute my colleague from Massachusetts for his undaunted, courageous, and effective leadership on this issue, which is one of the most difficult issues we face. I think he has the respect of everybody in this body for that—the Senator from Massachusetts does—whether they agree or disagree with the bill.

Now, I rise in opposition to the Cornyn amendment and in support of the Kennedy alternative amendment No. 1333. There certainly are attractive parts of the Cornyn amendment, but the good parts of the amendment are buried in complicated language that strikes at the heart of the comprehensive immigration bill many of us are working hard to pass. At a minimum, my colleague's amendment would have the effect of stripping the path to citizenship, one of the mainstays of the compromise—one of the two mainstays of the compromise—out of the bill altogether. This body has already rejected that approach outright. It ought not do it now by stealth. It is a Trojan horse—nothing short of an attempt to kill the whole bill in the guise of tough enforcement.

My colleagues know when it comes to tough enforcement, whether it is on immigrants, citizens, or anyone else, I don't yield to anybody. I am a tough-on-crime guy. I come from an area that was ravaged by crime, and the works of the Federal Government, State government, and city government helped make the communities I represent much safer.

What we do in the Kennedy amendment is keep the tough enforcement without killing the bill. Let me repeat that. What we do in this amendment is keep the tough enforcement—it is all there—but we don't kill the bill. We don't eliminate the path to citizenship which is, of course, what the Cornyn amendment does and may well be intended to do.

If we are serious about passing the best possible bill and passing a bill that makes good sense, we should support the Kennedy amendment and not throw out the baby with the bathwater. We all want a bill that is tough on people who have broken the law, and we all want a bill that keeps people who should not be let into the United States in the first place from coming here.

Senator KENNEDY's amendment is both tough and smart. It changes the law to prevent the worst criminals from getting into the country and kicks out people who shouldn't be here, and it picks out the best parts of the Cornyn amendment and leaves out the worst.

Like Senator CORNYN's amendment, Senator KENNEDY's amendment says any new immigrant who has participated in a criminal gang in any way, shape, or form can't come live in the United States, period. It doesn't wait for a felony conviction or anything else. If you are in a gang, you can't come in, and you can't become a citizen. Any immigrant in the United States who has been a member of a gang can be deported. That is how it should be. Also, Senator KENNEDY's amendment cracks down on gang members who violate our gun laws.

Under Senator KENNEDY's amendment, aliens who have committed the horrible crimes of domestic violence—stalking, child abuse, child neglect, or child abandonment, and who have been sent to jail for a year—are barred from moving to the country or from attempting to naturalize as citizens. The amendment provides that sex offenders who don't register can't immigrate or come work here, and convicted sex offenders who don't register get deported.

The amendment would keep drunk drivers from immigrating to the United States. Just one felony conviction for drunk driving and you are out. People who try to sneak into the country, illegally cross the border, or lie to immigration agents will face steep fines and jail time, as the bill provides, as this body ratified last week.

The amendment has tough penalties for repeat offenders. An alien who tries to enter the country after being convicted of a serious penalty can face up to 20 years in jail under the amendment.

So this is one tough amendment. But, again, it doesn't seek by stealth, as the Cornyn amendment does, to eliminate the bill altogether. Some of the things in this amendment are exactly like the language in Senator CORNYN's amendment. Senator KENNEDY's amendment takes the best of the Cornyn amendment and leaves out the parts that will gut or decapitate the bill. A vote for the Kennedy alternative is a vote for tough enforcement but also smart policy.

Madam President, I yield back the remaining time to my colleague and friend from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, customarily, as a manager of the bill, I control time, but I think now the time is in whose hands? I ask for 12 minutes of time, Madam President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, may I inquire whether the Senator intends to speak for or against the—

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, I yield 12 minutes to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CORNYN. I think that takes care of it. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I was about to say some nice things about the Senator from Texas, and I still will. He has been a very active and constructive participant in the consideration of immigration reform. In the 109th Congress he was very much involved and contributed greatly. We didn't always agree on a number of items, but he is very sincere, very studious, very thoughtful, and very constructive, and he continues in that role, although as is evident, there are some differences as to our approach. But I commend the Senator from Texas for what he has done and for what he continues to do here.

I am in favor of the alternative to the Cornyn amendment. I say that because we have structured the bill with a great many compromises. While I might be inclined to agree with the Senator from Texas on some of the specifics that he has enumerated which would be a bar to citizenship, there was a tremendous amount of give-and-take in the structuring of this bill so that I am standing with the committee bill—strike that. We don't have a committee bill. I wish we did. But I am supporting the bill which came out of the lengthy consultation with about a dozen principal Senators participating. There are a number of specifics, in the amendment which is side by side, which I think are preferable to the amendment by the Senator from Texas.

Illustrative of this preference is that the Senator from Texas makes a third conviction for drunk driving a crime of violence. Well, it may be a crime of violence, or it may not be a crime of violence. The alternative which has been proposed would make drunk driving a grounds for inadmissibility and deportability, providing the alien serves at least a year in prison. From my days as district attorney, I have seen quite a number of cases involving drunk driving, for example, and while I don't condone multiple convictions, I think it is a more appropriate ground that there be inadmissibility or deportability where the drunk driving was serious enough to call for a year in jail.

The amendment offered by the Senator from Texas also strips judicial review of findings that an alien is barred on national security grounds. From what we have seen about this issue in many contexts, there needs to be judicial review, although in a different context. In the last few days we have seen the Military Commission conclude that it had no jurisdiction because of problems with the indicting procedure with respect to whether one is an enemy alien or an unlawful enemy alien. This points to the necessity for judicial review, which would be excluded by the Cornyn amendment.

The Cornyn amendment also would deport or prevent citizenship for someone who has ever violated a protective order. Well, it is a good bit more complicated than that. The alternative amendment provides that there would be an analysis. It would exclude people convicted of a felony domestic violation, but there would be a consideration about whether, on a protective order, the alien was acting in self-defense, along with other considerations, in fact. Most fundamentally, the Cornyn amendment would strip the authority of the Departments, the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Justice, to waive certain grounds which would warrant deportation or inadmissibility. That discretion, which is lodged in the alternative, enables a fuller review of the facts. It gives a chance to really look beyond some of the technical categorizations which might appear ominous on their face, but which, after there is a detailed review of what has happened on the underlying factors, might reveal there ought not to be inadmissibility or deportation. That discretion ought to remain with responsible officials in the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Justice.

It is for those reasons, but fundamentally because the pending legislation was crafted with a great many compromises, that I favor the substitute and oppose the Cornyn amendment.

I would like to address something which is more fundamental and very serious, as we have had a statement by the majority leader that if cloture is not invoked tomorrow at 6 o'clock, he will take down this bill.

I think that would be grossly erroneous. I think that would be very bad procedure. If you compare what was done last year in the 109th Congress with what we have done in this Congress, you would see there was much more consideration in the last Congress than has been afforded this bill at this time.

For example, in the 109th Congress, we worked the bill through the committee. We did not work this bill through the committee. That was a leadership decision. I have stated on the Senate floor on several occasions the concern of not having gone through committee; that it was probably a mistake. Well, if this bill is taken down because we haven't made sufficient progress in the eyes of the majority leader, there is no doubt it would be a mistake because had we gone through committee, we would have worked through so many of these issues which we have had to legislate on the floor.

In the 109th Congress, the Judiciary Committee, which I chaired, had 6 days of committee markups. They were tough and laborious days, and we dealt with 59 amendments. We returned one Monday after a recess when the majority leader said he would proceed with the substitute bill, and a Monday back after a recess is a very tough day. But on March 27, 2006, the committee made a special effort to reconvene. We had a quorum, believe it or not, by 10 o'clock in the morning, and we worked through, laboriously, until the evening when we reported out a bill. That is what happened during the markup, 6 days of markup in the committee where, as I say, we considered some 59 amendments.

Then, when we moved to the floor of the Senate, we had 12 days on the bill. We had 4 days before cloture failed, and then we came back with 8 days more and considered in excess of 50 total votes—some rollcall, some voice votes—in passing the bill out of the U.S. Senate.

Now, contrast that with what we have had up to the present time. We have been on the bill 8 days, and 3 of those days were Mondays or Fridays pro forma without voting. We have only had 5 days where we have been involved in voting. Even on those days, they have not been as productive as voting days were on the bill in the 109th Congress because we have been in quorum calls. We have been negotiating. We have been trying to work through issues that, had this bill gone through committee, would have been resolved some time ago.

So you have a comparison of, really, 5 days, plus 3 days of pro forma, 8 at the most, contrasted with 12 days before. It is more accurately a comparison of 12 to 5—12 in the last Congress where we legislated and where we passed the bill. Here, where we have voted on only 21 amendments, contrasted with more than 50 we voted on in the last Congress.

We have also had a tremendous amount of Senators' time and time of the Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of Homeland Security. We met for 2 hours on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, and sometimes on Mondays and Fridays as well, over a 10-week period.

It is hard to calculate how many hours were put in by Senators, but I think it goes into the thousands. It is hard to calculate how much time was put in by the two secretaries, but I think that goes into the hundreds. If you talk about staff time, it is incalculable. The staff director, Mike O'Neill, worked for about 20 days solid, including weekends, and that was sort of par for the course.

So to pull this bill tomorrow at 6 o'clock—I think it would be hard to find the right word that is appropriate in strength and not overboard. But I think "outrageous" would be a modest comment; it would be outrageous to pull this bill tomorrow.

One of my staffers said this bill has been the result of blood, sweat, and fears—paraphrasing Churchill's blood, sweat, and tears—and maybe more fears than blood and sweat. But we have come a long way. We have already seen a lot of finger pointing on this floor. We seem to be a lot better in the Senate at finger pointing than at legislating. But if this bill is pulled down, then you may even see toe pointing, because 10 fingers won't be sufficient for Republicans blaming Democrats and the majority leader for pulling down the bill, and Democrats blaming Republicans for a lot of dilatory amendments.

The majority leader has said these amendments are designed to kill the bill, that the people offering the amendments don't have any intention of voting for the bill. Senators who offer amendments don't have to have intentions of voting for the bill. Senators can offer amendments because they are Senators and because they think their amendments may pass, and because, who knows, they may even think their amendments could improve the bill. I think Senator CORNYN sincerely believes his amendment will improve the bill.

I ask unanimous consent for 3 more minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I ordinarily keep better track of time, but I am a little wound up and concerned about where all of the work we have done may end up if this bill is pulled and, more importantly, after the work that has been done, where it would leave the immigration mess in the United States. We have 12 million undocumented immigrants; we don't know where they are or what risks they face. We cannot deport them all. We have a porous border. If we don't have comprehensive immigration reform, we are not going to put up all the fencing, the barriers, and stop the additional people. The administration has made commitments, and there will be more about how the funds will be spent. We are not going to go through with employer verification. We are not going to spend the money on foolproof identification so employers can see who is legal and who is not legal, so that we have the basis for imposing tough sanctions, including jail. We are not going to eliminate the magnet to bring more people in. It will be a colossal failure.

I think it is safe to say the Senate would be the laughingstock of the country, after all of the hyperbole and publicity and all of the proposals and objections, if we are not able to finish this bill. It doesn't have to be finished this week. There is next week. We are not known for necessarily using the full week. We vote very infrequently on Mondays, almost never on Fridays. The evening session is not really practiced around here. When I came to the Senate with Howard Baker, we used to have a lot of all-night sessions. One night in 1982 or 1983—I ask for 4 more minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 4 more minutes to the Senator. How much time will I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will have 6½ minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, we had a tax bill on the Senate floor, and it was 11:45. Howard Baker, the majority leader, was consulting with the Finance chairman, Senator DOLE. There were 63 amendments pending. Senator Baker said we are going to work through the night. He said amendments, like mushrooms, grow overnight. So we worked through the night. There were some amendments taken, some amendments withdrawn, and some voted upon. It is amazing how much shorter the debate is at 3 a.m. It is also amazing how many more Senators there are on the floor at 3 a.m. There were a lot of people on cots in the cloakroom, but a lot of Senators were on the floor. The insomniacs outnumbered the sleepers by 2 to 1. We had a lot of comments like you heard in Parliament. Someone would be making an argument and there would be cries of "vote, vote." At 3 a.m. the cries of "vote" and the lack of decorum carried the day.

The point is that a few more days in the Senate will not impede the action of this body. Some of the items that are coming up on the agenda may not merit the kind of time and attention the immigration bill does.

The American people are obviously sick and tired of the bickering in the Congress and in the Senate, sick and tired of the kind of finger pointing, and there will be an awful lot of it if we fail to legislate on this matter. The bill may be voted down. I think the bill will pass if we stick with it. Certainly, we ought to carry it through to conclusion.

I thank my colleague from Massachusetts for yielding me the extra time.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WEBB. Madam President, I rise today to discuss amendment No. 1313, an amendment that I will offer to the immigration reform bill, which will address what I believe are two crucial flaws in this legislation. The first flaw relates to what some people may call amnesty, wherein the bill legalizes almost everyone who entered this country by the beginning of this year. The second flaw relates to an unworkable set of procedures applicable to those who are properly offered legal status. It is important to the health and practicality of our system that these two flaws be addressed.

My amendment would achieve three critically important goals: it creates a fair and workable path to legalization for those who have truly put down roots in America; it protects the legitimate interests of all working Americans; and it accords honor and dignity to the concept of true American justice.

If one accepts the premises of these three goals, then I strongly believe that this amendment is the best way forward.

As a general matter, I agree with my colleagues that the time has come for fair and balanced reform of our broken immigration system. When I say "fairness," I mean a system of laws that is fair to everyone here in the United States and especially our wage earners.

I strongly support the provisions in this immigration bill that strengthen our Nation's borders. Our porous borders are a threat to our national security, and we have waited far too long to fix this problem.

I also support the sections of the bill that create tough civil and criminal penalties for employers who unfairly hire illegal immigrants, creating both a second-class population and undercutting American workers. The bill's employment verification system will help ensure that illegal workers cannot get employment in the United States and would therefore face little choice but to return to their homelands.

As a point of reference, I do not support this bill's creation of a massive new temporary worker program. Two weeks ago, I voted to support Senator DORGAN's two amendments to strike and sunset that program, and I find it regrettable that the Senate did not adopt those amendments.

We have seen a good bit of analysis on the Senate floor in recent days to the effect that the temporary worker program will be largely unworkable. To the extent that it would work, it would create a wage-based underclass and a bureaucratic nightmare. Furthermore, as I stated on the floor 2 weeks ago, I believe that guest worker programs—aside from purely temporary, seasonal work—drive down the wages of hard-working Americans and of those who came here by following the law.

With those points in mind, I now turn to my amendment, which regards the other major component of this bill—the legalization program.

My amendment reflects a proposal that I have been discussing with Virginians ever since I began my campaign for the Senate. I have always supported tough border security and cracking down on large employers who hire illegal workers. I also have always supported a path to legalization for those who came here during a time of extremely lax immigration laws but who have laid down strong roots in their communities. I do not, however, favor this path to citizenship for all undocumented persons.

Under the provisions of the immigration bill we are debating, virtually all undocumented persons currently living in the United States would be eligible to legalize their status and ultimately become U.S. citizens. Estimates are that this number totals 12 million to 20 million people. This is legislative overkill. It is one of the reasons that this bill has aroused the passions of ordinary Americans who have no opposition to reasonable immigration policies but who see this as an issue that goes against the grain of basic fairness, which is the very foundation of our society.

By contrast, my amendment would allow a smaller percentage of undocumented persons to remain in the United States and legalize their status, based on the depth of a person's roots in their community.

Under my proposal, undocumented persons who have lived in the United States at least 4 years prior to enactment of the bill could apply to legalize their status. I note that this 4-year period is even more generous than the 5-year threshold that was contained in several bills in the past few Congresses—bills that were supported by Senators from both parties and by immigrants' rights groups.

After receiving the application, the Department of Homeland Security would evaluate a list of objective, measurable criteria to determine whether the applicant should receive a Z visa and thus be allowed to get on the path to citizenship.

The statutory criteria to be considered would be work history, payment of Federal or State income taxes, property ownership and business ownership in the United States, knowledge of English, attendance at U.S. schools, immediate family members in the United States, whether the applicant has a criminal record, and whether the applicant wants to become a U.S. citizen.

Like the underlying bill, applicants would be given probationary status while the DHS considers their Z visa application and could lawfully work during this probationary status period.

I believe these provisions are fair to our immigrant population and also that they will help us avoid the mistakes this Congress made in 1986 with the Simpson-Mazzoli amnesty bill, which resulted in a tidal wave of illegal immigration.

My amendment would also make the underlying bill more practical.

It strikes the bill's unrealistic "touchback" requirement. Few immigrants would have the money or the ability to return to their home countries on other continents. Most of these persons would lose their U.S. jobs, leaving their families in turmoil and placing further strain on our communities. Basic fairness dictates that these persons be allowed to apply for a green card from within the United States.

I believe that my amendment sets forth an equitable system that not only recognizes the contributions of immigrants to our society but also introduces practical measures that will help us avoid the same mistakes our country made in 1986 with the Simpson-Mazzoli amnesty bill.

I have heard loud and clear from Virginians, and I have talked with people on all sides of this issue. What I hear over and over again is that Congress should find a fair system that both protects American workers and respects the rule of law. This amendment represents the fairest method I know to do so and to do so realistically.

I ask you all to support amendment No. 1313 when it comes for a vote in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 22 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield as a point of interest?

Mr. CORNYN. Yes.

Mr. KENNEDY. I think I have 6½ minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 8½ minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. I am trying to get some information to the Senators who will follow along. Does the Senator plan to use the remainder of his time? I am not trying to hurry him; it is only for information purposes.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I agree it is a good idea to try to give our colleagues notice as to when a vote will occur. I am happy to agree we can have the vote at 11:45. I probably will not use all of my time, but it depends on how wound up I get.

Mr. KENNEDY. Why don't we sort of move along but indicate to our colleagues that we are reaching a conclusion and we expect votes fairly soon. Then we will have follow-on amendments with Senator DEMINT and, hopefully, Senator BINGAMAN. If we can work those out in the next 20 minutes or so, we can get stacked votes; otherwise, we plan to have these two votes reasonably soon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. For the information of Senators, the vote will occur at approximately 11:55 if some time is not yielded back.

The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, we have a number of speakers who have commented. I appreciate the wise comments of the Senator from Pennsylvania, and I am not talking about the part where he was complimentary of me; I am talking about his comments on the process and the difficulty, since this bill came to the floor without going through committee, of providing an adequate opportunity for debate and amendments. We have all tried to work our way through this.

I do concur it is a terrible mistake in judgment to seek to close off debate on this bill before an adequate opportunity for votes occurs. We have had, by my count—and I could be off one or two—nine rollcall votes on this bill. By way of comparison, when the McCain-Kennedy bill, which later became the Hagel-Martinez bill, was on the floor last year, we had 32 rollcall votes, I believe. We need to have an adequate opportunity to flesh this out. As we have seen here, some of these details get very technical, but they have a profound consequence in terms of the outcome.

Let me speak to some of the specific items that have been raised here. As we pointed out, first, there will be a vote on the Kennedy amendment, and then there will be a vote on the Cornyn amendment. With all due respect, I call the first one a watered-down version of the second one. I will point out the differences now, in part.

The Kennedy amendment would still allow waivers to allow members of gangs to become legalized under the provisions of this bill. The Kennedy bill would still allow sex offenders to not be barred if they were sentenced to less than 6 months. The Kennedy bill would still allow waivers for firearms offenses; that is, allow people who have been convicted of firearms offenses to get a waiver and to be allowed legal status.

My amendment covers those who are associated with terrorist organizations. Those innocents referred to under the material support provisions are covered by a waiver executed by the Department of State and Department of Homeland Security.

As we can see, this gets exceedingly technical. Let me focus on sex offenders, by way of example, to point out why these differences are important. My amendment would bar those who have failed to register as sex offenders from becoming eligible for a Z visa and legal permanent residency status and a path to American citizenship. We have spoken in Congress on this issue through such legislation as the Adam Walsh Act. We have made it clear we will monitor and lock up those sex offenders who don't follow the rules and bar sex offenders from bringing individuals into the country whom they may also harm.

Yet the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts, Senator KENNEDY, would still give those sex offenders who fail to register a loophole to exploit if they can plea bargain their case to less than 6 months. The maximum penalty for the underlying offense is no more than 1 year. All of us who have had experience in the legal system, particularly with the criminal law system, understand plea bargains are a way of life and it may well be a very serious sex offender will have plea bargained an indictment against him or her to less than 6 months, and still be allowed entry into the United States under the Kennedy amendment.

Here is what the Kennedy amendment does. On page 20 of the amendment, it modifies the exceptions to the criminal bars admissibility by adding failure to register as a sex offender and firearm offenses to the list of offenses excepted from the criminal bars to accessibility.

Why would we allow this loophole? We just got this amendment last night, of course. We have not been able to survey the sex offender registry laws of all 50 States. We know there is at least one State—New York—where first-time failure to register a conviction is a class A misdemeanor, punishable by up to 1 year.

My simple question is: Why would we want to employ a loophole for sex offenders and allow them to gain the benefits under this bill by being eligible for a Z visa, with a path to legal permanent residency, potentially, and American citizenship?

My amendment makes clear—unlike the Kennedy amendment—that all these loopholes are closed and this is not possible. I cannot imagine that the American people would feel, among the many other people who are arguably worthy of gaining benefits under this bill, we would want to demean what we are doing here by providing these benefits to people who so clearly have shown themselves unworthy of getting those benefits.

I will point out that I know we have had a big debate in this country and in the Senate about what constitutes amnesty. I think the problem is the American people—many of them—don't feel we are serious about restoring the rule of law when it comes to our broken immigration system. I don't mean for a minute to impugn the good faith of Senators who have labored long and hard to try to bring this bill to the floor, and those of us who are trying to improve it, to make it better. But by way of example, these are the sorts of offenses that ordinarily would be punishable under our laws but which are completely ignored when it comes to applicants for a Z visa—and that is the 12 million or so who are here—who have committed these acts.

Anyone who has entered the country without being inspected or admitted; that is, who came across the border before January 1, 2007, this bill would make eligible for a Z visa.

Any alien who failed to show up for his or her removal proceeding without just cause would be eligible for legal status under this bill.

Any alien; that is, any noncitizen, who, through fraud or willful misrepresentation, got a visa or other document or admitted to the United States would be eligible for a Z visa.

Any individual who makes a false claim to U.S. citizenship—this is an independent offense against our criminal laws—would be eligible for a Z visa.

Any noncitizen who was a stowaway who made their way into the United States, anyone who is the subject of a civil penalty for document fraud would be eligible under this bill for legalization and a Z visa.

Any alien who, when trying to enter the country, did not have the proper documents, visa, passport, border-crossing card, et cetera; any alien who remained unlawfully in the United States for less than a year, left the United States before removal, and then tried to reenter in a 3-year period would be eligible for a Z visa under this bill, or was in the United States unlawfully continuously for more than a year, then tried to reenter the United States within 10 years after leaving or being removed from the United States. It gets a little convoluted, but that person would be eligible for a Z visa or legalization and potentially a path to legal permanent residency and American citizenship.

Under this bill, any alien who, after previously violating immigration laws, for example, crossed the border multiple times and remained unlawfully in the United States for an aggregate of a year or more under this bill would be eligible for legalization under a Z visa, potentially eligible for legal permanent residency and American citizenship.

Any alien who came with another alien who is not admissible to the United States who is certified as helpless due to sickness, disease, and disability and requires the protection or guardianship of an alien. That is one more example of the kind of offenses which ordinarily we would punish under our laws which are waived and not considered when it comes to eligibility of the Z visa.

I don't think it is particularly productive on the floor of the Senate to talk about what is amnesty and what is not, but let me talk about the more basic consideration and one reason I think my constituents in Texas have expressed such strong concerns about it. It is really exemplified in the debate we are having on the Cornyn and Kennedy amendments. Are we serious about restoring respect for the law or are we going to simply turn a blind eye to violations in the future?

What we are being told by the proponents of this bill—and I believe they in good faith believe this, but it is unfortunate that the bill language itself does not appear to bear out that optimism and hope when it comes to the enforceability—is that this is, as in 1986, the last time we are going to do this. If we deal with the 12 million people who have come into the country without a visa or who have entered legally and who have overstayed their visa, if we give them an opportunity to get a Z visa, this is it, last time, it will never happen again. That sounds ominously similar to what the American people were told in 1986 when there were 3 million people in that category. Now we have 12 million in that category.

So the question people have, logically—these are not racists, these are not bigots, they are not nativists, they are not anti-immigrants; these are American citizens who are concerned about their country and about being a country that respects the rule of law—they want to know: Is this going to work? Will it be enforced? Are we serious about restoring the rule of law to our country?

I have to say that the sort of fine and requirement that is being required with the Z visa is looked at with great skepticism. Last week, I had a constituent who said: Well, Senator, are you telling me that we are going to allow people who have not respected our immigration laws to pay $5,000, in effect, to buy legal status and then potentially apply for legal permanent residency and then become an American citizen? Who wouldn't go for that kind of deal? That caused me a lot of concern because I, frankly, had not thought about it in those terms.

But what causes me even greater concern is the concept that is missing from this legislation that is so important; that is, when it comes to our laws, we believe in the role of deterrence. In other words, when we provide a penalty to somebody for violating the law, one of the considerations is, will it deter people from acting in a similar capacity in the future?

I am afraid, when I look at this legislation, it completely omits any consideration of what will deter people from violating our immigration laws in the future. In fact, I am afraid what happens, as pointed out by my constituent, is that it is really viewed as an incentive. If all you have to do is to get into the country any way you can and then wait for the next bill to pass Congress which will allow you to pay a fine and then become legally here and on a path to legal permanent residency and citizenship, that is no deterrent. That is a powerful magnet which will continue to attract people to our country.

I say this not in any spirit except to say we have to find a way to fix this. I have been one who wants to try to fix this legislation. The amendments I have offered are in that spirit. But I have to say that we are going to continue to be viewed as nonserious about workability, about enforcement, about restoring respect for the rule of law unless we vote to exclude those who have shown nothing but defiance for our laws by absconding, by going underground even after having their day in court and refusing an order of deportation, or those who have been deported following a day in court, following all the rights our country provides for judicial review and administrative review and who simply left to only reenter again illegally.

As I mentioned at the outset, the Immigration and Naturalization Act makes both those categories of individuals felons—felons. This is not a misdemeanor. This is not an inadvertency. These are not people, frankly, who are entitled to the generosity of the American people when it comes to dealing with their legal status. These are people who showed they have nothing but contempt for our laws, for restoring the rule of law, and I just cannot imagine why any Member of the Senate would vote to give these individuals a path to legal residence and a path to potentially American citizenship.

If we are going to regain that lost credibility—and I think this is really where the rubber meets the road because, frankly, people across this country don't really believe we are serious about making this work. They are used to a history of being overpromised and undersold when it comes to fixing our broken immigration system. But I believe there is going to be a high price to pay for those of us who are still around in the coming years if, in fact, we pass this law knowing that it has these huge, gaping loopholes that excuse unlawful conduct, which is basically thumbing their noses at the rule of law. If we are not serious about making sure people who go through background checks are actually not criminals or terrorists, if we are not serious about making this work, there is going to be a high price to pay for those who support this legislation only in the coming years to find that it was another scam pulled on the American people.

That is why it is so absolutely critical that we continue this debate, and I implore the majority leader to allow us to continue the debate, to allow us to have amendments offered. I understand and we all understand in this country that you win some and you lose some, majorities rule, but that is what we ought to be doing on this bill to make it as good as we possibly can to try to regain the respect and the trust of the American people because, frankly, we don't have it now. That is the reason for the outcry we have heard in my State and around the country when it comes to this legislation.

We can fix it. I am an optimist, but we cannot fix it if there is not an opportunity for a full and fair debate and if the majority leader is determined to cut off the opportunity to provide votes on amendments and is going to insist on "my way or the highway"; in other words, you are either going to have to agree to not let your amendments be heard and to let this bill go to a final vote or the majority leader is going to pull it down and deny us the opportunity to fix this problem.

I don't know anyone in the Senate who doesn't want to fix this problem. It is enormously complicated because this problem has festered for 20 years or more without a solution. That is no excuse for not trying, and that is why

I have tried, along with my colleagues, to come up with an acceptable solution. I would say 90 percent of it we agree with. There is no light separating us. It is in the 10 percent we talked about that is the subject of important amendments which need to be heard and voted on where we can regain that trust.

Let me say in conclusion—and I may reserve a little bit of time—let me say before I sit down, Mr. President, that a "no" vote on the Cornyn amendment and a "yes" vote on the Kennedy amendment will, in essence, could retitle this section of this bill "No Felon Left Behind" because while we have excluded many categories of felons, we have, for some reason, left this big, gaping hole when it comes to those who show nothing but contempt for our laws. We need to fix this bill, we need to make it better, not make it worse, and we have an uphill climb to regain credibility of the American people to show we are serious and we want to restore our reputation as a nation that believes in the rule of law. A "no" vote on the Cornyn amendment will do nothing to help it; indeed, I think it will confirm the worst suspicions of the American people—that we really are not serious about fixing this problem.

Mr. President, I yield the floor but reserve the remainder of our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CASEY). The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 8½ minutes remaining.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I listened carefully to the Senator's presentation. I have come to a different conclusion. The Senator said a "no" vote means we are really not for dealing with this issue. We have a bipartisan group that has worked long and hard. The Senator from Texas was involved in a lot of the discussions. As we pointed out previously, we wanted to have tough law enforcement internally. We wanted recognition that those 12.5 million people here were going to be able to be secure, they weren't going to be deported, they were going to go to the end of the line, they would have to go through the earned legalization program, bring families together again, set up a program in terms of a temporary worker program. I don't know what 90 percent the Senator agrees with because I haven't heard much.

What is important is what his amendment does and what its impact would be.

We ought to come back at the conclusion of this debate to the point that was raised at the beginning because after all the rhetoric, after all is said and done, listen to the example that was given by my friend from Illinois.

Senator DURBIN describes a mother of four U.S. citizens, married to a U.S. citizen, who is herself undocumented. She left the country to visit her sick mother. She was apprehended after she snuck back in. That means she has reentered the United States at least twice, and under the Cornyn amendment on page 2, she could be convicted of illegal reentry. That would make her an aggregated felon. Even if she is not convicted, the Cornyn amendment makes her ineligible for the Z program.

On page 10 of the amendment, he eliminates the waiver for final orders available in the bill. This is a waiver for hardship to family, and he eliminates it. No harm, the Senator says, because she can get a different waiver as the wife of a U.S. citizen. That didn't stop DHS from deporting her.

So why should people come out of the shadows? Why should they come out of the shadows if they are here with false papers, undocumented? Why should they come out of the shadows when they have seen what has happened to a mother of four citizens married to an American citizen? That is what we are basically talking about. That is undermining the basic core because we are talking about 12½ million people who are here, who came here to work in order to provide for their families, and they have been trying to do that for their families. More often than not, they probably went back to their countries of origin and came back in again. Probably more often than not they had false papers in order to be able to get their jobs. That in and of itself, under the Cornyn amendment, would effectively exclude them from participating in this program and would subject them to deportation. End of story. End of story because that undermines, obviously, the essential aspect of this legislation.

The rest of the Cornyn amendment—which I mentioned earlier with the list of the amendments that we have put through—covers the bars, the criminal gang members, including the new provisions of gang members engaged in gun crimes. Sex offenders are covered by the comprehensive Adam Walsh Act. The sex offenders are not going to get Z visas.

The Senator from Texas can say, under our language, under his interpretation, they will, but they would not. End of story. They would not.

On the provisions regarding drunk-driving convictions and individuals convicted of domestic violence, stalking, child abuse, and other serious crimes, we increase the penalties for perjury, fraud, and firearm offenses.

It is important that after all is said and done—and we gave the illustration earlier about the questions of material support—the terrorists are out.

One thing about managing a bill, for those of us who have been here, we understand it; that there is always the possibility and the likelihood people will misrepresent what is in the bill and then differ with it. It is an old technique. I have even used it myself. But we ought to understand when we see it that it is just a technique that is being used.

So with all respect to my friend and colleague, and I have a good deal of respect for him, the effect of the underlying Cornyn amendment would effectively exclude from the Z visa program any immigrant who had been or will be convicted of using false documents. That is the problem today. Because of our broken immigration system, almost every hard-working immigrant in the country has been forced at one time or another to use false documents to get a job. These people have come here to work. They have been lured by the employers offering work. They are the very people this program is designed to bring out of the shadows. The Cornyn amendment will ensure they cannot come forward. Indeed, if they did come forward, they could be subject to prosecution and mandatory deportation for using a fake Social Security card.

I believe we have addressed many of the concerns the Members have had on dealing with some of these other issues and questions with the Kennedy amendment, and I would hope the Members would vote in favor of that and against the Cornyn amendment.

Mr. President, I withhold the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. May I inquire how much time remains on my side, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 2 minutes 45 seconds.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, let me assure my colleague, Senator KENNEDY, that only those who have actually been convicted of document fraud would be excluded under my amendment.

According to recent statistics, roughly 10 million Americans fell victim to identity theft last year, at an estimated cost of $50 billion to U.S. taxpayers, and victims spent an average of $1,500 and 175 hours to actually recover their good name and their good credit after identity theft. This is not a trivial matter, and it is only people who have actually been convicted, not those who have presented false documents to work in the country who have not been convicted.

As far as the woman with four American children and married to an American spouse, my amendment does not touch her rights under current law. For example, we don't touch current law waivers for consent to reapply for admission. We don't touch the Secretary's ability to grant humanitarian parole. And we don't touch the waivers under current law that cover an immigrant who is the spouse of a U.S. citizen.

I thought Mr. DURBIN, the Senator from Illinois, was satisfied with that answer earlier, but I point that out to my colleagues just so they can be satisfied that there are exceptions for extraordinary circumstances.

What this amendment does is it broadly says felons will not be given the benefits of legalization and a path to American citizenship. They have had their chance, they blew their chance, and they have shown themselves unworthy of the trust and confidence of the American people when it comes to living among us in compliance with our laws and respecting the fact that, yes, we are a nation of immigrants, and proudly so, but we are also a nation of laws. Those laws keep us safe, they keep us secure, and they assure our prosperity, and the prosperity of generations yet to come. We cannot, once again, turn a blind eye to the laws that protect all of us, including those immigrants who have come here to become part of our great country and to seek opportunity for their future.

I hope my colleagues will support the Cornyn amendment, that they will vote against the Kennedy amendment as a dilution and watered-down figleaf of the Cornyn amendment.

With that, Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, with regard to Senator DURBIN, he could come back and speak to this issue, this was a mother of four U.S. citizens, herself undocumented, who left the country to visit her sick mother and was apprehended after she snuck back in. She had entered and reentered the U.S. twice. She had false documents, and she has been effectively deported.

The Senator says, well, she had rights to appeal, rights to do this and to do that. This is the real impact. This is the real impact of the Cornyn amendment. This is what the Cornyn amendment is all about. We know the people who have come in here. Why do they come in here? They come to work. Why do they come to work? Because the job is there. They are devoted to their families, devoted to their work and faith, in many instances devoted to this country—with 70,000 of them working in the Armed Forces of the United States. But in order to be able to do that, somewhere along the way they get the false papers. That is what the facts are. The great majority have them.

Under the Cornyn amendment, it says those individuals are subject to deportation. He thinks all 12½ million people are all going to volunteer and come out and say, well, by the way, Senator CORNYN gave us assurance that somebody down there in DHS can give me a waiver and let me stay. Come on. Come on. We believe that? That is going to be sufficient assurance to get these people to come out of the shadows so that they are not going to continue to be exploited? I don't believe that.

I have a lot of respect for my friend. I know what he is attempting to do in order to deal with some of these other issues, and we have attempted to address that. But the fact remains his amendment undermines the basic core of this—recognizing that people here are undocumented, and the ones who are undocumented, by and large, have these false papers. That is a part of the reality.

The question is: Are we going to say to those individuals: Look, you came here and are undocumented. You are going to pay a fine, and you are going to have to demonstrate that you are going to work, and you are going to show that you are going to be a good citizen. And in 8 years, after all the other people who have been waiting in line, after all of that period, when you are able to pay the fine, demonstrate that you have worked all that time, and have been a good citizen trying to make a difference in terms of going into the country, that then you will be able to at least start—start—on the potential road to citizenship.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. All time has expired.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, does the Senator desire the yeas and nays?

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order to consider the yeas and nays on both amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request for the yeas and nays on both amendments?

The chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Is there sufficient second on both amendments?

There appears to be a sufficient second. The yeas and nays are ordered on both amendments.

Mr. KENNEDY. Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President: There are going to be two back-to-back votes. The first one will be on the Kennedy amendment and the second one is on the Cornyn amendment; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Kennedy amendment is the first vote.

Mr. KENNEDY. And the second vote is the Cornyn amendment. I thank the Chair.

To continue, Mr. President, it is our hope that we will move toward the DeMint amendment. We had good debate on that yesterday, and the Bingaman amendment, and then have votes on those fairly soon after. I thank all our Members for their cooperation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1333, as modified, offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHN-SON) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

NOT VOTING—1

The amendment (No. 1333), as modified, was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1184

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided on amendment No. 1184 offered by the Senator from Texas, Mr. CORNYN.

Who yields time? The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I would ask my colleagues for a “yea” vote on this amendment. If you voted for the Kennedy amendment, you made an incremental improvement over the current law when it comes to banning criminals from getting the benefit of our immigration system. But in order to exclude felons, people who have shown their contempt and defiance of American law, and unless it is your intent to reward felons who have shown their contempt for the American legal system, to reward them with the most precious gift this country can offer, which is legal status, potentially legal permanent residency and a path to citizenship, you should vote yes on this amendment. I would urge my colleagues to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, make no mistake about it, with many good intentions which were covered in the Kennedy amendment, this guts the bill because it not only eliminates—it not only says that felons should not become citizens, and we agree with that, it says that anyone who has filed an illegal paper should not become a citizen. That is every immigrant who would be on the path to citizenship. This body voted against eliminating that provision overtly a few weeks ago. Now they are trying to do the same thing covertly because if you vote for this amendment, you will say no one will have a path to citizenship, no one who works, because everyone who has worked had to file a Social Security paper or something like that.

Anyone who wants to keep this bill going at the moment should vote against the Cornyn amendment. The Kennedy amendment dealt with felons. This is a stealth, Trojan horse amendment to kill the bill by saying no one—no one—who has ever worked shall have the path to citizenship.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, with all due respect, the Senator should read the amendment. It does not affect people who have committed identity theft unless they have actually been convicted of that. It would have no effect on people who have entered without a visa or who have come in on a legal visa and overstayed. This is no gutting of the bill; it is only to protect the American people from felons.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. McCONNELL. Objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1184, as modified, offered by the Senator from Texas.

The yeas and nays were previously ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON) is necessarily absent.

Mr. LOTT. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN).

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MENENDEZ). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

NOT VOTING—2

Coburn

Johnson

The amendment (No. 1884), as modified, was rejected.

Mr. REID. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. KENNEDY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time until 2 p.m. today be for debate prior to a vote in relation to the following amendments; that the time until then be equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees, with the time to run concurrently; that no amendments be in order to any of the amendments covered in this agreement; that at 2 p.m., the Senate proceed to vote in relation to the amendments in the order listed; that there be 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to each vote, with the vote after the first being 10 minutes in duration, with no amendments in order to the amendments prior to the vote: DeMint No. 1197, Bingaman No. 1267, as modified.

I designate Senator KENNEDY to have my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, we are making some good progress. The Senator from South Carolina, Mr. DEMINT, had a good discussion last evening, as well as Senator BINGAMAN. We are grateful to them. We will have a good discussion prior to 2 o'clock on these issues.

We are hopeful, then, we will be moving along. Senator CORNYN had an amendment on confidentiality. We have Senator DODD. There are a number of those where we are trying to go back one side to the other. We hope those Senators who have amendments who are ready, particularly those who would like to enter into a time agreement, will let us know as quickly as possible. We will be in touch with others during this luncheon period and continue to move along. But we are thankful for all the help and cooperation we have received.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, staff has been working hard to set up votes on the amendments that have been called up. We ran into a little problem; that is, we had too many Democratic amendments. But we think at this stage they are now working on setting up side by side, in some instances, Republican amendments. We need to clear off the amendments that have been called up.

Now, as I have just indicated, if we have offsets for the Democratic amendments, we will go ahead and allow those to be called up or have side-by-sides. Once we get this done, I have been assured by both Senator KENNEDY and Senator KYL and others that we can have a list of amendments people need a vote on—not they want a vote on but need a vote on. We hope both cloakrooms have hotlined this and Senators are working on a personal basis with individual Senators.

Hopefully, we can get, by the 2 o'clock time, permission to do away with—I should not say “do away with”—to dispose of the amendments that have been called up. Then, hopefully, we can shortly thereafter find out what amendments people wish to have votes on. If we can do that, it would really move this ball down the court a long ways.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

As I understand, 1 o'clock today is the deadline for the filing of amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. KENNEDY. A number of Senators have spoken to me about having their amendments filed. Many of them I have given the assurances that we would. The Senator from Texas, Mrs. HUTCHISON, had asked that 2 days ago, and we are working with the Finance Committee. I see her in the Chamber. I think Senator THUNE was here last evening. I objected to those individuals proceeding. It would appear to me, out of fairness we ought to make sure they are not excluded. Is our policy to make sure they are at least within—if they have indicated to the floor managers, they want to be in, we have them meet the deadline?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, all first-degree amendments would have to be filed by 1 o'clock. As we have indicated, we are going to try to be fair to everybody. If there are amendments that have been up at the desk, we will certainly do our best to get to those. I think what we need to do is find out, as I have indicated, what needs to be voted on. Some Senators on our side, for example, have been contacted this morning, and they have decided not to offer amendments. The same will happen over there. If people have been waiting around and feel aggrieved they have not been allowed to offer their amendments, of course, we will consider that. But I do not think we need to do anything right now as far as a unanimous consent request in that regard.

We will do everything we can—everybody is working in good faith—to have people feel they have the opportunity to offer their amendments. I know the Senator from Texas—she is gone—she just walked in. I do not know what her amendment is about. I think it is Social Security. I am not too certain. She has been around here a lot. She is entitled, if for no other reason than having the endurance to hang around as long as she has, to have her amendment offered. We will work with everybody, both Democrats and Republicans, to see if we can work something out to have all these amendments offered and a time set to vote on them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, as I understand, all they have to do is be filed by this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. REID. That is correct.

Mr. KENNEDY. So for those who are back in their offices, they do not have to be called up. They just have to be filed. So they have until 1 o'clock for the filing of amendments. We urge those who want to have amendments filed to make sure they understand that. They do not have to call them up. They are protected in that way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be allowed to speak up to 10 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following me, the Senator from Maine be allowed to speak for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, let me add another part to that unanimous consent request: that the Senator from Florida be allowed to speak for up to 10 minutes, following the Senator from Maine.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Georgia.

(The remarks of Mr. CHAMBLISS are printed in today's RECORD under “Morning Business.”)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, as I understand, under the rules, the filing time was set for 1 o'clock, and the leader has indicated for filing any amendments that we extend that. I ask unanimous consent that the filing time be extended until 2 o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if I could just say this—I would say this mostly to the staffs: We do not need a big rush over here as to filing amendments. It does not give anybody any benefit anyway. Just show some discretion on who has to file amendments, and then we will work our way through those and find out how we are going to dispose of them. So I think this is the right thing to do. There is no magic to the next 5 minutes. So we will wait for the next 65 minutes. If people have trouble making that deadline, let us know.

I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, if I might just add a word, we thank the majority leader and the Senator from Massachusetts for extending the time. That should ease substantial pressure on this side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Maine.

(The remarks of Ms. COLLINS pertaining to the introduction of S. 1554 are printed in today's RECORD under “Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.”)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

(The remarks of Mr. MARTINEZ are printed in today's RECORD under “Morning Business.”)

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. President, I note the absence of a quorum, and I ask that the time be equally charged.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from South Dakota is recognized.

(The remarks of Mr. THUNE are printed in today's RECORD under “Morning Business.”)

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that the time be charged equally between both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1267

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I want to first speak on behalf of an amendment I offered with Senator OBAMA. It is one of the two amendments that will be voted on in the sequence at 2 o’clock. The amendment is aimed at addressing what I believe is a very shortsighted provision in this draft immigration bill.

My amendment applies only to this new guest worker program we are creating under the bill, the so-called Y-1 program. It doesn’t impact the Y-2 program, which is the seasonal and non-agricultural program that is based on the existing H-2B program, or the H-2A program, which is the agricultural temporary worker program.

Under this immigration bill as it now stands, Y-1 workers—guest workers, which is how we refer to them—would be able to work in the United States for three 2-year work periods. But before they could renew their visas for the second and the third of those 2-year work periods, they would have to leave the country for at least a year. This is the so-called 2-1-2-1-2 provision. Work for 2 years, leave for 1 year, work for 2 years, leave for 1 year, work for 2 years, and then leave for good. The total number of work years in the United States would be limited to 6 years, but the work pattern would be interrupted twice each time by a 1-year absence requirement.

The amendment I have offered, and that we will be voting on in a few minutes, simply removes the requirement these guest workers leave the country before they renew their visas. It would leave in place the term of the visa, which is 2 years, and it would not alter the 6-year total work limit that is provided for in the bill. In addition, it would modify the requirement that Y-1 workers meet all of the relevant requirements under the program each time they apply to renew their visas.

Over the last 2 days, I have come to the floor to discuss this provision a couple of times. I strongly believe it does not make any sense from a policy standpoint and, ultimately, we are going to be judged by how much sense this legislation makes. As I have pointed out, this provision is bad for employers; it harms American workers; it will be difficult and costly to implement; and it will likely encourage these workers, whom we are bringing here as so-called guest workers, to overstay their visas.

For these reasons, my amendment has the broad support of labor groups, such as the Service Employees International Union; business organizations, such as the National Association of Home Builders and the Associated Builders and Contractors; and immigration and religious groups, such as the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, the American Association of Immigration Lawyers, and the National Immigration Forum. The coalition of organizations supporting this amendment is indicative of how harmful the 1-year absence requirement would be from a variety of different perspectives.

I ask unanimous consent that following my remarks, the following material be printed in the RECORD: the statement that was issued by the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, a letter by the Associated Builders and Contractors Organization, a letter by the National Association of Home Builders, and a statement by the SEIU, the Service Employees International Union.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, with regard to the employer, it would be extremely costly to require businesses to retrain and rehire new workers every 2 years. No employer I am aware of would think it satisfactory for an employee to take a 1-year so-called break every couple of years. Each of us in the Senate employs people in our offices, here in the Capitol and our home States. This would be an unacceptable condition for us, and I am sure it would be for any employer. Businesses would have to hire other workers to take over for the leaving guest worker, would have to invest time and money in retraining additional staff. This would be extremely burdensome, particularly on small businesses.

From an economic standpoint, I believe it generally does not make sense to enact laws that cause instability in the workforce and create requirements that unnecessarily impose significant costs on our small businesses. I am not an economist, but this does not seem to be a sensible way for us to do business.

Let me take a moment to read a portion of a letter I received from the National Association of Homebuilders on this issue. The letter says:

This system essentially makes the entire program in title IV unworkable for the construction industry. In the residential construction industry, employers spend much time and resources training employees. To arbitrarily lose valued employees at the end of 2 years, as they are forced to return home for a full year, creates unnecessary amounts of instability in our workplaces, and wastes scarce employer resources.

The construction industry is not the only sector of the economy that would be adversely impacted by this provision. The new guest worker program is not limited in the respect that existing temporary worker programs are in terms of the work being seasonal or within certain industries, such as in agriculture. These are, in fact, permanent jobs we are talking about, and they are scattered throughout our economy and will be affected if we leave this provision unchanged.

The 1-year absence requirement is also harmful to American workers. Kicking workers out of the country every 2 years ensures that there will always be guest workers who will be coming in to be paid at the low end of the pay scale, and this will result in a depression of wages for all workers, not just those guest workers but for the American workers who are competing for those jobs as well.

According to a letter of support I have asked to be printed in the RECORD that I received from the Service Employees International Union, they say the following:

Employers will be less likely to invest in worker training or other benefits and wages to retain workers. . . . The 2-1-2-1-2 is a recipe for wage depression, job turnover and increased illegal workers.

The structure of the new guest worker program will also result in a substantial number of these workers overstaying their visas so they don't have to leave the country for an extended period of time. The Government has not done a great job in the past of ensuring that individuals leave the country at the expiration of their visas, and I have no reason to believe—I don't think any of us have any reason to believe—that the Department of Homeland Security will be able to do a substantially better job in the near future.

In December of last year, after the Government Accountability Office issued a report regarding the US-VISIT Program, which is a mechanism by which Government is supposed to be able to track the entry and the exit of foreign visitors, the Department of Homeland Security scrapped its plans to implement the exit portion of that program for U.S. land ports of entry.

In essence, the GAO report found it could take up to 10 years to develop the technology required to fully implement the program and that the cost of doing so could be in the tens of billions of dollars. There is nothing in the immigration bill that indicates that this capability is within our reach.

In section 130 of the bill, the Federal Government is required to come up with a schedule for deploying the exit component of the US-VISIT system. However, we have already been told by the GAO that this will not be a reality for a very long period of time.

In crafting this immigration bill, there has been a lot of attention given to trying to bring together individuals with a wide variety of political views. In my opinion, we have not focused enough on the practical aspects of how this bill is going to be implemented. Compromises need to be made as part of any legislative package, but we cannot lose sight of the need to craft legislation that makes sense from a policy standpoint and that actually can be implemented and can work.

It is my belief the new guest worker program is currently structured in a manner that has more to do with the politics of getting a compromise among those who drafted the legislation than it does with sound policy. As I have discussed, the requirement that these guest workers leave every 2 years before renewing their visas is bad for employers, it is harmful to American workers, it is difficult to enforce, and it will likely result in a larger population of undocumented workers in this country in the future.

For those reasons, I urge my colleagues to support my amendment and to help make this bill more workable and better public policy.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

UNITED STATES CONFERENCE OF CATHOLIC BISHOPS,
Washington, DC, June 6, 2007.

U.S. CATHOLIC BISHOPS URGE SENATE TO SUPPORT AMENDMENTS PROTECTING ASYLUM SEEKERS AND GUEST WORKERS IN THE COMPREHENSIVE IMMIGRATION BILL

The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops urges Senators to vote for the following amendments to S. 1348, the Comprehensive Immigration Reform Act of 2007:

The Lieberman Safe and Secure Detention Amendment. Lieberman amendment #1191 would maintain U.S. obligations to international human rights by providing safe and secure detention for victims of torture and persecution seeking asylum protection in this country. While awaiting judgment on their cases, persons claiming persecution or fear of persecution in their home countries often are subjected to prison-like conditions in U.S. detention facilities without proper health, nutritional, physical or spiritual care. This amendment makes major improvements to the U.S. detention system by reinforcing the country's rich heritage and tradition of assisting especially vulnerable persons.

The Bingaman Guest-Worker Workability Amendment. Bingaman amendment #1267 would eliminate the requirement for the "years out" for guest workers who are renewing their temporary Y-visas. By requiring workers to leave the country after two years, only to return one year later, the underlying legislation would create a highly-bureaucratic and unstable system for guest workers to come in to the country. It is likely that many guest workers would overstay their visas, knowing that they are to return in just a year, and many government resources would likely be devoted to seeking out and punishing individuals who are providing valuable and much-needed work. The Bingaman amendment provides a significant step toward creating a worker program that is more humane, workable, and desirous for both guest workers and employers alike.

ASSOCIATED BUILDERS AND CONTRACTORS, INC.,

June 6, 2007.

THE U.S. SENATE,
Washington DC.

DEAR MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES SENATE: On behalf of Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC) and its more than 24,000 general contractors, subcontractors, material suppliers and construction related firms across the United States, I urge you to vote YES on an amendment (#1267) being offered by Senator Bingaman and Senator Obama to S. 1348, the "Secure Borders, Economic Opportunity, and Immigration Reform Act of 2007," which would remove the requirement that Y-1 temporary workers leave the country before renewing their visas.

Currently, the immigration bill allows Y-1 guest workers to work in the U.S. for 2-year periods (up to 6 years). However, it requires the workers to leave the U.S. for at least 1 year before renewing their visas. Requiring these workers to leave the country for a lengthy period of time between each work period is harmful for employers; extremely difficult and costly to enforce; harms American workers; and increases the likelihood that individuals will overstay their visas. Moreover, the construction industry, more so than many other industries, relies on highly trained workers to fill their labor force. Having a temporary worker on the job for only a two year time frame makes the current Y-1 visa program outlined in S. 1348 virtually useless for our industry. This is due to the fact that in most cases it takes two to four years to properly train workers in the construction industry.

The Bingaman/Obama amendment (#1267) would allow Y-1 temporary workers to stay in the United States for the entire duration of their work visa. This would give ample time for the employee to become fully trained in the construction industry and it would make the new Y-1 temporary visa beneficial to our ever expanding industry. It is imperative that America's construction industry be allowed the time needed to properly train their employees so that accidents on jobsites can be avoided at all costs.

ABC supports the Bingaman/Obama amendment (#1267) that would remove the mandatory requirement that Y-1 temporary workers leave the country before renewing their visa and ask you to vote "YES" on this important amendment.

Respectfully Submitted,
WILLIAM B. SPENCER,
Vice President, Government Affairs.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF HOME BUILDERS,

June 5, 2007.

Hon. HARRY REID,
Majority Leader, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.
Hon. MITCH MCCONNELL,
Minority Leader, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MAJORITY LEADER REID AND MINORITY LEADER MCCONNELL: On behalf of the 235,000 member firms of the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB), we urge you (NAHB), we urge you to vote in support of the amendment being offered by Senators Jeff Bingaman (D-NM) and Barack Obama (D-IL), AMDT 1267, that would eliminate the mandatory one year cooling off periods in the proposed 2-1-2-1-2 future flow ("temporary worker") program contained in Title IV of S. 1348, the Secure Borders, Economic Opportunity, and Immigration Reform Act of 2007. Because of the importance of this issue to our members, and the overall workability of comprehensive immigration reform, NAHB will be key voting in support of this amendment.

The future flow program in Title IV of S. 1348 will create a legal process by which immigrants can enter the United States in future years to work in industries that have established labor shortages. Under the current proposed legislation, the bill would require a worker to return to their home country for a full year every two years. This system essentially makes the entire program in Title IV unworkable for the construction industry. In the residential construction industry, employers spend much time and resources training employees. To arbitrarily lose valued employees at the end of two years, as they are forced to return home for a full year, creates unnecessary amounts of instability in our workplaces, and wastes scarce employer resources.

The Bingaman/Obama amendment will eliminate the mandatory one-year "cooling off" periods in the current bill, and replace it with a two-year visa, that can be renewed two additional times for a total of six years—equal to the six years that are ultimately allowed under the program in S. 1348 now. Removing the cooling off periods will create a much more usable program for employers, and we urge you to support this effort to improve the bill.

NAHB believes that a workable future flow immigrant program is essential to comprehensive immigration reform because without it, it is likely to lead to a situation that will encourage more illegal immigration in the future.

Again, NAHB will be key voting in support of the vote on the Bingaman/Obama amendment, AMDT 1267.

Sincerely,

JOSEPH M. STANTON,
Chief Lobbyist.

SEIU strongly support the removal of the requirement that Y-1 temporary workers leave the U.S. for at least 1 year before renewing their visas. While we are willing to accept a temporary worker program in exchange for legalization of the 12 million undocumented living among us, we are very disappointed with the guest worker program contained in the "Grand Bargain". This is why the Bingaman/Obama amendment is critical and would improve workers ability to stay employed during the entire period of their Y visa. When temporary workers are working in year round jobs it is more difficult for all workers to raise their wages and improve their working conditions. The Y-1 visa program as it is currently drafted will ensure wage depression for all workers, because it will ensure workers leave their jobs every two years. Employers will be less likely to invest in worker training or offer benefits and wages to retain workers. Removing the 1 year return requirement will help all workers raise the wages, gain job experience and receive valuable training to improve the job skills. The 2-1-2-1-1 is a recipe for wage depression, job turnover and increased illegal workers, as history has demonstrated—guest workers will overstay their visas, when they have no legal channel to remain in the country.

We thank Senator Bingaman and Senator Obama for their continued leadership on comprehensive immigration reform. SEIU urges all Senators to vote for this improving amendment.

ALISON REARDON,
Director of Legislation, Service Employees International Union (SEIU).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the Senator from New Mexico and I have worked on a great many matters since he was elected in 1982. If I may have the attention of the Senator from New Mexico, I am about to compliment him. I don't like to compliment him behind his back. The Senator from New Mexico and I have worked on a great many matters since he was elected to the Senate in 1982. I came at about the same time after the 1980 election. I am especially interested in his amendment and the criticism of the bill because it is the politics of compromise and not based on sound public policy.

The Senator from New Mexico and I are now working on a bill called the Bingaman-Specter bill on global warming. I am pleased to hear there has been no compromise in that bill that is based upon sound public policy. But in a very serious way, I suggest that is what we do. This place would be run a lot better if I ran it unilaterally. The Senator from New Jersey, who is presiding, smiles at that. I think more in humor than in disagreement. But we have 100 Members of this body with 200 different ideas. Each of us has two ideas on the same subject at a minimum. I know the Senator from New Mexico has a full plate on many items. He chairs the Energy Committee. He has been working on the global warming issue. He is not on Judiciary, and he doesn't have a special concern—well, for whatever reason, he did not elect to become part of the group of Senators who worked on the bill, for good and sufficient reason. I am not suggesting he should have. He attended the sessions, as did the Senator from New Jersey who is presiding, and saw what we were doing. We were so compromised that people on opposite ends of the political spectrum left us. They wouldn't stay with us because we couldn't satisfy everybody, and understandably so. We simply could not satisfy everybody.

The question is whether we would have satisfied anybody. We will know when we move along and try to get this bill to final passage. But when you take what happened to us last year—we passed a bill in the Senate, they passed one in the House, and we couldn't even conference it, wouldn't even conference it. There are people who just want a tight border and to deport 12 million undocumented immigrants. That is what they want to do.

As we work through the compromises, I would consider it a compliment to be a party to the politics of compromise, and I would accept the term "politician" with grace and appreciation. I remember hearing Adlai Stevenson speak in the early fifties. Perhaps it was when he first ran for President in 1952. He said: Do you know the definition of a statesman? The definition of a statesman, Mr. President, is a dead politician. That is why I much prefer being a politician, at least for the moment. I much prefer being a politician.

On this specific amendment, we hasled about this a long time. We had 6 years in mind. Should it be 3 and 3 or should it be 2 and back and 2 and back for a year and back? We finally accepted this compromise to try to make the workers temporary, that they would not get roots here and not return to their home country; that when we are working within the structure of the immigration laws, we have to accommodate the 12 million because we cannot deport them. We would like to identify those who are criminals, who are not contributing, who do not have roots and deport them, if we can identify them in numbers that we can handle.

Then there was the issue of trying hard to avoid the characterization of amnesty. Amnesty is a lot like Shakespeare's famous definition of a rose:

That which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet.

If we could find more ways to make these 12 million people earn citizenship, we would. We have the fine. Maybe it is too high, maybe it is too low. We have back taxes. Maybe we can find that out and maybe we cannot. The requirement of English I think everybody agrees with. Having roots in this country, yes. Being a contributor to this country, yes. If we could shake the title of amnesty, we would like to do it, if somebody could tell us how to do it.

There are many people who are so opposed to what we are trying to do, they will call anything amnesty. I am not going to say it is not amnesty—although I believe it is not amnesty because they are earning their way—because if you get involved in name calling, it all disintegrates. People are angry at President Bush for saying it is not amnesty when they are sure it is amnesty.

I compliment the President for the leadership he has shown on this issue. He sent us Secretary of Commerce Gutierrez and Secretary of Homeland Security Chertoff. For hours, days, weeks, months they worked on it. There was a commitment by the administration.

The President has spoken out on this issue loudly, plainly, and clearly. He has taken a lot of brickbats for it, but he is working hard on it. On the Senate floor a few weeks ago, I made a comment that it was either amnesty or anarchy. Anarchy is what we have here; that is, if it is amnesty—and, again, I say I think it is not, but I am not going to get into a name-calling contest with people who want to call names.

Lou Dobbs of CNN has been one of the most vocal critics of the plan. He has a right to do that, and I have been on his program and discussed it with him, debated it with him. But I was interested to see him comment about my characterization of anarchy. That struck a chord. Lou Dobbs doesn't like anarchy—nobody likes anarchy—but in a sense that is the choice we have.

So I urge my colleagues to vote against the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico, although I have great respect, and I know this is very thoughtful, very well presented, all except for his criticism of the politics of compromise.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I first thank my colleague and congratulate him for his leadership on this bill. I know he has worked long and hard to bring this bill to the floor and is making the best out of a very awkward, difficult situation in trying to get all the interested parties under the same tent.

I am reminded of when I was attorney general of my State of New Mexico. One of the duties of the attorney general in New Mexico is to issue what are called attorneys general opinions about different legal points that come up. Sometimes those opinions are followed by various State agencies and then they are challenged in court. I remember in one of the cases where it was challenged in our State supreme court, a friend of mine on the State supreme court, who was a very wise man, wrote an opinion essentially saying that the opinion I had issued, the attorney general opinion, was wrong. He said attorneys general opinions are entitled to great weight, except when they are wrong.

That is sort of the way I feel about the bill that has been brought to the floor. I have great respect for those who have put it together, and it is entitled to great weight and deference, except where it clearly is wrong. That is what we are trying to do with this amendment, is to correct an area of the bill that clearly is wrong. I hope my colleagues will see it the same way and support my amendment. But I compliment the Senator from Pennsylvania for his leadership on this important issue.

AMENDMENT NO. 1177

I wish to speak very briefly about another amendment, unless the Senator from Pennsylvania wishes to say something, and then I would defer to him. I gather he does not need to at this point.

Let me speak briefly about another amendment I have filed. It is amendment No. 1177. It provides forestry workers with Y visas some of the same rights to ensure that the terms of their guest worker contracts are honored the same way other guest workers in the agricultural sector can have their contracts honored.

This is an amendment that is eminently reasonable. It was adopted by unanimous consent during the debate as part of the immigration bill we passed out of the Senate in the last Congress. I hope we can get agreement from the managers of the legislation to include it this year as well. So I wished to briefly allude to that amendment and urge every consideration of it.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I expect that Senator DEMINT will come to the floor to address his amendment, but in the next 5 minutes that we have before he does so, I would say his amendment is basically saying there will be no adjustment in status unless all these individuals are going to be able to buy into the high-deductible HSAs, health savings accounts, and that because of the fact that immigrants are a burden on the health care system, that they should be required to do this additional kind of work to meet their responsibilities under this legislation.

There are a couple factors I wish to mention. First of all, if you take the fact that you have 12 million of these individuals, the 12 million who are the undocumented, they are going to, as part of their fine, pay $500 per individual. That comes to some $6 billion—$6 billion—that can go for support for various health care offsets into local communities. That is not an insignificant amount of resources. We anticipated this possibility, No. 1.

No. 2, we ought to make an examination of what happens to these undocumented individuals. What is the utilization by the undocumented? We know they are basically healthier, they are younger, and the various information and statistics we see says there is not an overutilization of the health services.

I have statistics for undocumented immigrants in one of the border States, this is in Texas, and I will read this and include the appropriate part in the RECORD. The Comptroller's office estimates the absence of the estimated 1.4 million undocumented immigrants in Texas would have been a loss to their gross State product of $17 billion. Also, the Comptroller's office estimates State revenues collected from undocumented immigrants exceed what the State spends on services, with the difference being $424 million. That is today, one State—Texas—in the utilization of services.

So we find this population where there has not been an overutilization of services, and we have provisions in the current legislation to deal with this problem and deal with it generously.

But the Senator from South Carolina wants to insist on a high-deductible program.

Let us look at the average high-deductible program. The average annual deductible for a high-deductible plan required under the DeMint amendment is $1,900 for an individual and $4,000 for a family. The average annual premium for the plan: $2,700 for an individual and $7,900 for a family. The total average cost for an individual would be $4,600 and $11,000 for a family. That is for the average individual and family. This includes the fees and also the deductibility.

We have the various studies that have been done, the reports, and this information is from the Los Angeles Times. It points out that plans with high deductibles of $1,000 or higher monthly premiums that can be less than $100, as Senator DEMINT provides, are a good fit for healthy people with some financial resources. The median annual income of those using the high-deductible plans is $75,000. This is a fit for $75,000. Although the lower premiums make plans attractive, cash-strapped families run the risk of being unable to afford the deductibles.

Those are the facts. So the effect of the DeMint amendment is another way of denying the 12 million undocumented from being able to participate in the other provisions of the legislation, which we have very carefully crafted. They have to pay a high fine, they have to pay the State a set-aside, they are going to have to pay the fees as they move along. These are not insignificant. We are talking about thousands and thousands of dollars which have been worked out carefully and considered.

This kind of additional burden will say to men and women whose average income may be $10,000 or $11,000 that they are not going to be able to do it. Take those individual Americans who are making $10,000 and $11,000 and look at how many of them are able to afford health insurance. Virtually none. We know about that in Massachusetts because Massachusetts has passed a very effective program to bring those individuals in and to help and assist those individuals.

So the idea that we are going to put this in as a requirement is another way of saying to those individuals, look, we might like other provisions of the legislation, but this is a way of effectively barring you from being able to participate in this program. That undermines the object of a very important aspect of this whole endeavor. Therefore, I hope the amendment will be defeated.

As I understand from the Chair, the last several minutes are supposed to be for the Senator from South Carolina; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't see him in the Chamber. I think we ought to reserve that time for the Senator. As I understand, under the previous agreement, we have agreed to vote at 2 p.m.; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I would like to speak on my amendment that is up for a vote.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. At the present time, all time has expired.

Mr. DEMINT. I ask unanimous consent that I have 2 minutes to speak on my amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on this amendment. I think all of us would agree that we would like to design an immigration program that benefited America, that actually brightened the future for Americans, for our children, and that we do not want an immigration system that is going to invite people from all over the world who will come here and be a burden to the American taxpayers.

Unfortunately, the way this bill is written, the Z visas we offer all the illegal immigrants in this country do not require that these illegals have health insurance before they are given these legal passes. That means they will continue to be a heavy burden on the American health care system.

Senator KENNEDY has said the $500 one-time fee they have to pay is enough to cover these costs. I know every American wishes they could pay $500 and have free health insurance for life but, unfortunately, it is more expensive than that. Also, Senator KENNEDY has said these types of minimum policies cost well over $2,000 a year, which is, frankly, not true. Many of us have policies that cost less than $1,000 a year for a high-deductible policy, which is the minimum level we ask for.

The least we can ask of these immigrants we are granting permanent legal status in this country is not to be a burden on Americans for their health care. To have a minimum level of health insurance is the least we can ask. This amendment would require Z visa holders to have that minimum level, and I ask all of my colleagues to support it.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the DeMint amendment No. 1197.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHN-SON) is necessarily absent.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

NOT VOTING—1

Johnson

The amendment (No. 1197) was rejected.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the Senator from New Mexico has an important amendment. He was over here yesterday afternoon and evening and spoke well about it. He came over here during the lunch hour. It is a very important amendment. He deserves to be heard.

AMENDMENT NO. 1267

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided on the Bingaman amendment No. 1267, as modified.

The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator LANDRIEU be added as a cosponsor to amendment 1267.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, this amendment tries to eliminate the 2-1-2-1-2 provisions in this bill. The underlying bill says if a guest worker comes here, they can work for 2 years, they are kicked out for a year, they can come back, work for two more, they are kicked out for a year, they can come back work for two more, then they are kicked out for good.

What my amendment does is to say: Let's bring them here for 2 years, allow them to renew their visa twice, so that they would be here a maximum of 6 years. This makes a lot more sense for employers, for American workers who are competing for these jobs, for the guest workers themselves.

This has the support of the business community, the unions, the Catholic bishops. Everybody interested in this bill supports this. This is commonsense legislation. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, earlier this afternoon the Senator from New Mexico criticized the bill as being the "politics of compromise," as opposed to sound public policy. I told him, had he participated in the negotiations, he would have seen quintessential politics of compromise. You could not begin to make any progress at all on this legislation unless it was the politics of compromise. I suggest that is an art form frequently practiced in this body. I reminded the Senator from New Mexico of our cosponsorship of global warming. I am glad to hear there is nothing in the bill which he is the principal sponsor of that is a factor of the politics of compromise. I am glad our bill is pure.

I have not seen the bill, in the short time I have been in the Senate, that doesn't have compromise in it. If it did not have any compromise, it would not have gotten here. If it did get here, it would not be passed.

The principle of this bill is to make it temporary so people do not establish roots. If you dealt with Senator KYL on this matter, you would understand how important he is to this bill and how important this provision is to his continued support.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I come to the floor today to speak in favor of the Bingaman-Obama Y-1 guest worker amendment.

The Bingaman-Obama amendment removes the requirement that Y-1 visa holders under the new guest worker program leave the United States for at least 1 year before renewing their visas. Designing a worker program where people are supposed to come to the U.S. for 2 years, leave for a year, return for 2 years, leave for a year, and then return for 2 years is a recipe for creating a new undocumented population.

Our amendment does not modify the overall number of permissible work years, which would still be limited to a total of 6 years, and it doesn't change the term of the visa, which would still be 2 years. In order to renew their visa, applicants would still have to demonstrate that they are eligible to meet the requirements of the program. The amendment maintains the general structure of the program, but revises it in a manner that makes the program more workable.

We need to pass this amendment because the process in the underlying bill is costly and burdensome on employers, especially small businesses. Requiring employers to rehire and retrain workers every 2 years imposes unnecessary costs and creates instability in the workforce.

The underlying language is also harmful to American workers. The 1-year absence requirement would ensure that guest workers are always at the lowest end of the pay scale, which would depress overall wages. And the system as now designed provides an additional incentive for guest workers to overstay the term of their visas. Rather than returning to their home countries after their 2-year visas expire, many workers will just remain in the United States and become undocumented immigrants.

In short, the temporary worker design in the bill is unworkable and difficult to enforce. It is unlikely that the government will be able to sufficiently track the entry and exit of these workers to ensure that they comply with the 1-year absence requirement. By removing the 1-year requirement to leave the country between renewals we would at least be making the program workable.

Our amendment has the support of a variety of labor, business, immigration, and religious groups. Specifically, the Service Employees Union International, SEIU, the National Association of Homebuilders, NAHB, the Associated Builders and Contractors, ABC, the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, USCCB, the American Immigration Lawyers Association, AILA, U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, and the National Immigration Forum, NIF, have voiced their strong support of this amendment.

Johnson

The amendment (No. 1267), as modified, was rejected.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time until 6:45 p.m. today be for debate prior to a vote in relation to the following amendments; and that the time until then be equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees, with the time to run concurrently; that no amendments be in order to any of the amendments covered in this agreement prior to the vote; that at 6:45 the Senate proceed to vote in relation to the amendments in the order listed; and that there be 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to each vote, with the votes after the first being 10 minutes in duration; that if an amendment on this list is not pending, it is to be called up now. These amendments are Cornyn, No. 1250; Reid, No. 1331; Sessions, No. 1234; Menendez, No. 1194; Kyl, No. 1460; Lieberman, No. 1191; and that a half hour of the minority's time on these amendments be allocated to Senator SESSIONS, and another half hour allocated to Senator CORNYN.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, is this an exclusive list?

Mr. REID. No.

Mr. STEVENS. No objection.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I wish to inquire of the majority leader: I have an amendment that is a change in the amendment by which we proposed to sunset the guest worker provision. That amendment failed by one vote. I have made a modification to that amendment and would intend to reoffer the amendment and have another debate on it and a vote on that amendment. I wonder if I could inquire of the Senator—

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say to my friend, at this time tentatively there are three Democratic amendments pending. There are no Republican amendments to match those. When we finish this tranche of votes, we are going to try to complete tonight at least these six more. I understand the Senator has or will refile his amendment, and we will be happy to take that into consideration as we try to move this bill along.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I have no objection.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, could the leader tell us when amendments can be called up which were not on the list he just read, that have not been allowed to be called up today?

Mr. REID. We are working on that now. We are making progress. There are going to be three called up as soon as we get this vote started. That will be the next agreement we will enter into, and there will be three Republican amendments. So if you have something you care about, work with your colleagues over there to see if that can be one of the next three.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 1331 AND 1460 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1150

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report two amendments.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. REID] proposes an amendment numbered 1331 to amendment No. 1150.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To clarify the application of the earned income tax credit)

At the end of subtitle F of title VII, add the following:

SEC. ____ . EARNED INCOME TAX CREDIT.

Nothing is this Act, or the amendments made by this Act, may be construed to modify any provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 which prohibits illegal aliens from qualifying for the earned income tax credit under section 32 of such Code.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. REID], for Mr. KYL, for himself and Mr. SPECTER, proposes an amendment numbered 1460 to amendment No. 1150.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To modify the allocation of visas with respect to the backlog of family-based visa petitions)

Beginning on page 270, strike lines 31 and 32, and insert the following:

“(3) FAMILY-BASED VISA PETITIONS FILED BEFORE JANUARY 1, 2007, FOR WHICH VISAS WILL BE AVAILABLE BEFORE JANUARY 1, 2027.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The allocation of immigrant visas described in paragraph (4) shall apply to an alien for whom—

“(i) a family-based visa petition was filed on or before January 1, 2007; and

“(ii) as of January 1, 2007, the Secretary of Homeland Security calculates under subparagraph (B) that a visa can reasonably be expected to become available before January 1, 2027.

“(B) REASONABLE EXPECTATION OF AVAILABILITY OF VISAS.—In calculating the date on which a family-based visa can reasonably be expected to become available for an alien described in subparagraph (A), the Secretary of Homeland Security shall take into account—

“(i) the number of visas allocated annually for the family preference class under which the alien’s petition was filed;

“(ii) the effect of any per country ceilings applicable to the alien’s petition;

“(iii) the number of petitions filed before the alien’s petition was filed that were filed under the same family preference class; and “(iv) the rate at which visas made available in the family preference class under which the alien’s petition was filed were unclaimed in previous years.

“(4) ALLOCATION OF FAMILY-BASED IMMIGRANT VISAS.—”.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who yields time?

The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WEBB. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business and the time to be charged to the majority side.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1313

Mr. WEBB. Mr. President, I wish to discuss amendment No. 1313, an amendment I will offer to the immigration reform bill, which will address what I believe are two important, crucial flaws in this legislation. The first flaw relates to what many are calling amnesty, wherein the bill legalizes almost everyone who entered this country by the beginning of this year. The second flaw relates to an unworkable set of procedures that is applicable to those who are properly being offered legal status. It is important to the health and practicality of our system, in my view, that these two flaws be addressed.

My amendment would achieve three critically important goals. It creates a fair and workable path to legalization for those who have truly put roots down in America; it protects the legitimate interests of all working Americans; and it accords honor and dignity to the concept of true American justice. If one accepts the premises of these three goals, then I strongly believe this amendment is the best way forward for our country.

As a general matter, I agree with my colleagues that the time has come for fair and balanced reform of our broken immigration system. When I say “fairness,” I mean a system of laws that is fair to everyone in the United States, and especially our wage earners.

I strongly support the provisions in this immigration bill that strengthen our Nation’s borders. Our porous borders are a threat to our national security, and we have wasted far too long to fix this problem.

I also support the sections of the bill that create tough civil and criminal penalties for employers who unfairly hire illegal immigrants, creating both a second-class population and undercutting American workers. This bill’s employment verification system will help ensure that illegal workers cannot get employment in the United States and would, therefore, face no choice but to return to their homelands.

As a point of reference, I did not support this bill’s creation of a massive new temporary worker program. Two weeks ago, I supported Senator DORGAN’s two amendments to strike and sunset that program, and I find it regrettable the Senate did not adopt those amendments. We have seen a good bit of analysis on the Senate floor in recent days to the effect that the temporary worker program will be largely unworkable. To the extent it would work, it would create a wage-based underclass and a bureaucratic nightmare. Furthermore, as I stated on the floor 2 weeks ago, I believe guest worker programs—aside from purely temporary, seasonal work—drive down the wages of hard-working Americans, and of those who came here by following the law.

With those points in mind, I wish to now turn to my amendment, which regards the other major component of this bill: the legalization program.

My amendment reflects a proposal I have been discussing with Virginians ever since I began my campaign for the Senate last year. I have always supported tough border security and cracking down on large employers who hire illegal workers. I also have always supported a path to legalization for those who came here during a time of extremely lax immigration laws but who have laid down strong roots in our communities. I do not, however, favor this path to citizenship for all undocumented persons. Under the provisions of the immigration bill we are now debating, virtually all undocumented persons living in the United States would be eligible to legalize their status and ultimately become citizens. Estimates are that this number totals 12 million to 20 million people. This is legislative overkill. It is one of the reasons this bill has aroused the passions of ordinary Americans who have no opposition to reasonable immigration policies but who see this as an issue that goes against the grain of true fairness, which is the very foundation of our society.

My amendment would allow a smaller percentage of undocumented persons to remain in the United States and legalize their status based on the depth of a person’s roots in their community. Under my proposal, undocumented persons who have lived in the United States at least 4 years prior to the enactment of the bill could apply to legalize their status. I note that this 4-year period is even more generous than the 5-year threshold that was contained in several bills the past few Congresses addressed—bills that were supported by Senators from both parties and by immigrants’ rights groups.

After receiving the application, the Department of Homeland Security would evaluate a list of objective, measurable criteria to determine whether the applicant should receive a Z visa and thus be allowed to get on the path to citizenship.

Among the statutory criteria would be an individual’s work history; payment of Federal or State income taxes; property ownership and business ownership in the United States; knowledge of English; attendance, successfully, at American schools; immediate family members living in the United States; whether the applicant has a criminal record; and, very importantly, whether the applicant wants to become an American citizen.

Like the underlying bill, applicants would be given probationary status while the DHS considers their Z visa application and could lawfully work during this probationary period.

I believe these provisions are fair to our immigrant population, and also that they will help us avoid the mistakes this Congress made in 1986 with the Simpson-Mazzoli amnesty bill, which resulted in a tidal wave of illegal immigration.

My amendment would also make the underlying bill more practical. It strikes the bill’s unrealistic “touchback” requirement. Few immigrants would have the money or the ability to return to their home countries on other continents. Most of these persons would lose their American jobs. They would leave their families in turmoil and place further strain on our community services. Basic fairness and common sense dictates that these persons be allowed to apply for a green card from within the United States.

I believe my amendment sets forth an equitable system that not only recognizes the contributions of immigrants to our society but also introduces practical measures that will help us avoid the same mistakes our country made in 1986 with the Simpson-Mazzoli amnesty bill.

I have heard loudly and clearly from Virginians, and I have talked with people on all sides of these issues. What I hear over and over again is that Congress should find a fair system that both protects American workers and respects the rule of law. This amendment represents the fairest method I know to do so, and to do so realistically.

I ask my colleagues to support amendment No. 1313 when it comes to a vote in the Senate.

With that, Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WEBB. Mr. President, I gladly yield to my colleague.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SANDERS). The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I was listening to the description of the amendment by Senator WEBB. I think it is a good amendment, and I intend to be prepared to support it. This amendment is about the treatment of those who have come here without legal authorization. The underlying bill, by the way, was cobbled together by a group of people, including the White House, I guess, and they said anybody who shows up in this country without legal authorization by December 31 is deemed to then have been legal and will be given a work permit.

I think Senator WEBB's approach is much more sensitive and much more realistic to our people who have been here 10, 15, 20 years without legal authorization but they have been model citizens, they raised families, have had jobs, have done things that would commend them to us for the future. He is suggesting a much more sensible way of dealing with that. I think that amendment makes a lot of sense.

I did want to say we had a vote on the guest worker or temporary worker provisions, and I offered an amendment, or 2 amendments, and the second amendment was to sunset that after 5 years. I lost that vote by one vote in the Senate, and I have filed an amendment at the desk and will attempt to have another vote on that. I have modified section 2 just a bit. But my hope is that the Senate would reconsider and pass the amendment that would sunset this temporary worker provision after 5 years. Again, the vote was 49 to 48 against my amendment, and we will have another opportunity to vote on it.

The reason I mention it is the Senator from Virginia mentioned that amendment and the other amendment I offered as well. I ask the Senator from Virginia if he doesn't think this piece of legislation, in addition to legalizing those who have come here as of December 31st of last year, saying you now have legal status—in addition to that—saying we believe there are millions of people who don't live here at this point whom we want to be able to invite in to take American jobs—I ask the Senator from Virginia whether that makes much sense in the scheme of trying to create economic opportunity for Americans at the lower economic scale in this country. There are a lot of people working at the bottom of the ladder here who want jobs, who can't find jobs, and find downward pressure on their income. I ask whether the Senator doesn't believe this temporary worker program displaces people in this country who need these jobs.

Mr. WEBB. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from North Dakota I was very pleased to support both his amendments for those reasons and reasons similar to them. I hope the Senator can get a vote on his revised amendment. I think it is important we deal with this immigration issue in a very realistic and practical manner, with the focus being the well-being of individuals who are here legally and who are citizens whose wages and salaries are in many ways being held down by these types of programs. The guest worker programs are classic examples of that.

I also would like to say that with respect to the timeline in the present bill and the cutoff for full legalization being anyone who came here before December 31 of last year, or before January 1 of this year, one of the questions that has been raised on my amendment is: Well, what do we do with these people who haven't been here 4 years? Some questions have been raised saying this would create an unfairness in this amendment. But the answer to that—the obvious answer to that is: What do we do with people who came here after December 31? They are here. What are we going to do with the people who are here next year? They are going to be here.

There is always going to be some leakage in our system. What we are looking for is a measure of fairness for people who have truly put down roots in their community and to allow them to assimilate and become American citizens. That is a separate thing from the guest worker program that the Senator from North Dakota is talking about, and I hope I get another chance to vote for his amendment.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, if the Senator would yield further for a question, there are some in this Chamber who say to us: The choice on immigration is between doing the wrong thing and doing nothing. That is not the choice at all. That is a false choice. They bring the wrong thing to the floor of the Senate and say: If you oppose this, then you are for nothing.

One of the things we are for is enforcing the law. We have a law in this country about employer sanctions, about illegal immigration, trying to stop it. All one would have to do would be to enforce the law. In 2004, there were four cases in the entire United States of America that were brought by the U.S. Justice Department against employers who were employing illegal workers, illegal aliens—four. What does that tell us? That tells us that the administration says: We surrender on the issue. We surrender.

The other point I wished to make is there is no discussion on the floor of the Senate in the construct of this bill, within the debate on this bill, about the American worker. I understand we have an immigration issue. I fully understand that, and we need to deal with that. But part and parcel of that, in my judgment, ought to be some discussion on the floor of the Senate about how this affects the American worker. We have a lot of workers in this country who aren't doing very well. It has been a long time since they have seen any increase in their income, despite their productivity rising. Where is the debate about the impact on the American worker? It is not selfish for us to believe that ought to be a part of this discussion.

So I ask the Senator from Virginia whether he believes as well that when you bring an immigration bill to the floor, you ought to have some discussion about what is the impact of this issue on the American worker, on the people who have a high school education or perhaps don't even have a high school education and who are at the bottom of the ladder, got up this morning and went to work and are working at minimum wage, struggling to get by to raise a family to do the best they can and discover at the end of the day: Oh, by the way, there is more downward pressure on your income because the employer can bring somebody through the back door that is able to be paid lower wages, they will work for less money, even as the bigger employers are exporting jobs out the front door to China and Sri Lanka and Bangladesh.

So I ask whether the American worker shouldn't play a bigger role in the debate on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. WEBB. Mr. President, I would say that an enormous amount of work has gone into this piece of legislation, as we all know. I appreciate all the energy that the Senator from North Dakota has placed for years on the interests of the American worker. I share those interests. This amendment that I offer is based on two things. One is fairness to everyone, including the American worker, and the other is the practicality that is this particular part of the legislation.

Mr. DORGAN. I thank my colleague.

Mr. WEBB. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Texas is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1250

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I have an amendment that is scheduled for a vote later on this evening, and I would like to spend a few minutes explaining it. This is—well, let me put it this way: If the definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over and over again and expecting a different outcome, the provisions in the underlying bill that my amendment will correct represents insanity in action because it repeats a mistake made in the 1986 immigration laws that is within our power to correct. I believe the amendment I am offering will allow that correction to take place, and I offer it in that spirit.

At the very least, the American people expect we will not intentionally repeat mistakes. They don't expect us to be perfect. They do expect us to do our best, and we owe them that much. But in this case, doing our best means not repeating a mistake.

Quite simply, the Department of Homeland Security is, under the current bill, prohibited from using internally all information from Z visa applications, as well as sharing information with the relevant law enforcement agencies. That is right. You can actually apply for a Z visa if you are 1 of the 12 million or so people here in the country already in violation of our immigration laws, whether it is entering without a visa or once having entered with a visa, overstaying that visa, and if you are seeking the benefits of this underlying bill which are mainly represented in the form of a Z visa, the information contained in that application by those 12 million individuals is effectively shielded from law enforcement authorities. For example, if an applicant comes forward and is denied a Z visa, this legislation currently pending prohibits the Immigration and Customs Enforcement Service from using that information in order to apprehend that person who is not legally present in the country.

What we learned about the 1986 amnesty was that the New York Times said it created the largest immigration fraud in the history of the United States. That same view is shared by the general counsel of the Immigration and Naturalization Service under President Clinton with regard to statutory restrictions on sharing and using information. That general counsel, Paul Virtue, noted that this prohibition greatly contributed to this fraud.

At this point, I ask unanimous consent that the New York Times article be printed in the Record and I refer my colleagues to the testimony of Paul Virtue before the House Immigration and Claims Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee at judiciary.house.gov/judiciary/106-52.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CORNYN. In addition to questions of why we would want to put out of bounds to law enforcement agencies information which they could use to investigate and identify fraud and criminal conduct, you might ask: Why the double standard? For example, we don't afford these kinds of robust confidentiality provisions for other classes of immigrants such as asylees or battered women or those who fall under the temporary protected status provisions. So why would we have a double standard? When an asylum seeker applies for legal status, that asylum seeker must submit an application and return at a later date for the decision. If that asylum seeker's application is denied, then he or she is taken into custody on the spot, based on information contained in the application.

Now, the proponents of this bill will tell us that without these guarantees of confidentiality, those who are already here in the country in violation of our immigration laws will not come forward and seek the benefits of the Z visa provided for under the bill, which leads me to ask: Aren't we granting the biggest benefit that can ever be given to anybody in the world—legal status and a path to American citizenship—even though these individuals have violated our laws?

And to be clear, we are talking about those who cannot even establish that they meet the minimum requirements to get this valuable benefit. Even worse, they have continually flouted our immigration and criminal laws. Why would we consciously give these individuals broad privacy protections by the mere filing of their application for Z status, and why would they be treated differently from other immigrants?

The proponents say they do exempt from confidentiality those who commit fraud or are a part of some other scheme in connection with their application. Of course, that is the very least we should do. But this bill does not go nearly far enough to effectively enforce our immigration laws and protect the American people from those who could and would and might do us harm.

For example, on page 311 of the bill, in section 604(b) labeled "Exceptions to Confidentiality," the drafters of this bill have chosen to protect aliens who are criminal absconders who have not been removed from the United States; that is, people who are under orders of deportation but who have not yet been removed. This is, in fact, a felony offense under 8 U.S.C. 1253, which is punishable for up to 4 years in prison. Yet the underlying bill would provide confidentiality for that individual.

We all know that hundreds of thousands of individuals come across our borders each year in violation of our immigration laws. But what most Americans would be shocked to realize is that, according to recent estimates, almost 700,000 aliens who have immigrated illegally or overstayed who have been ordered deported have simply failed to comply with that court order. How many Americans think that it is OK to ignore a court order? How many Americans, after receiving a subpoena from a court, ignore it and simply skip that court date?

Let me give two examples of what I am talking about. In section 604(b), the drafters claim they allow law enforcement to go after information for those denied Z status because of felonies and serious criminal offenses, but what is missing are those aliens who have actually committed those felony offenses but who have not yet been actually convicted. In section 604, the drafters further claim they resolve the problem by allowing law enforcement access to those who commit fraud or misrepresentations in their Z applications. But again, what is missing is law enforcement's ability to reach third-party fraud: Where the alien, him or herself may not be complicit but to prosecute the third party, the Government needs the information from the Z application filed by such individuals in order to make the case. Simply stated and summarized, fraud by third parties involved in a Z application; crimes that have not yet resulted in a conviction; absconders—people who have ignored a valid court order and who have yet to be physically removed—as well as those Z visa applicants who are denied on noncriminal grounds, all of those categories of information are rendered confidential and kept from law enforcement authorities when it comes to investigating crime and other wrongful conduct.

As I said earlier today, in fact, if we were more interested in regaining the public's confidence that we were actually serious about passing an immigration law that could be and would be vigorously enforced, I don't think I would be up here offering this amendment because it would be agreed to without the necessity of a vote. But strangely, to me, this commonsense sort of amendment is being resisted. In a way, it helps merely confirm what most people across the country—particularly in my State—seem to suspect, which is that Congress cannot be trusted and is not serious about creating an immigration law system that can be adequately enforced.

As my colleagues know, I offered a separate amendment that would categorically bar fugitive aliens from receiving the benefits under this bill. I believe this is an issue of fundamental fairness and integrity of the system. In exchange for what has been offered to this population, which is the largest legalization program in our Nation's history, we should be able to say that for any person who applies for and receives benefits under this program, we will authorize the Immigration and Customs Enforcement Service to look at that application and to, if necessary, if warranted under law, arrest that individual who made that application and deport them, in accordance with our laws that Congress has already passed.

But the bill the Senate is considering today turns a blind eye to those who apply for the benefits under this bill and are denied. This bill would allow them simply to slide back into the shadows—the precise problem we are being told we are trying to fix.

I daresay if you ask a random taxpayer on the street this simple question: Assume an alien comes forward to apply for legal status under this bill. Because the applicant doesn't satisfy one of the criteria for being awarded legal status, the applicant is denied benefits under the bill. What happens to that individual under the Senate immigration bill? If you were to ask that question to a man or woman on the street, I bet you that 100 out of 100 times people would say: Well, they ought to go home, they ought not to be granted benefits under the bill. Certainly, they would say you ought not to hide evidence of fraud or criminality or wrongdoing that could be investigated and prosecuted.

Yet the so-called confidentiality provisions my amendment addresses, under the current bill, would prevent law enforcement officials from using information on the application to locate and remove a significant population of those who don't qualify for legalization but have applied for it.

To be clear, this is for individuals who have actually applied for a Z visa, or benefits under the program, and have been denied, not those whose Z visa status has been granted.

This is, in essence, providing an opportunity—to significant categories of individuals whose applications are considered and rejected—to slide back into the shadows, which is the very problem we are told this solution is designed to solve.

The whole point of this exercise, we continue to be told, is to enhance U.S. security by bringing people out of the shadows. But this bill would draw people out, only to allow them to slide back in if they demonstrate they are disqualified for the benefits under the bill—the very people we ought to be focusing on and having deported in accordance with our laws.

I remind my colleagues of our Nation's recent history with mass legalization and the consequences of prohibitions on Federal agencies sharing information.

As I have stated, reasonable observers have concluded that the 1986 amnesty was rife with fraud. That is the conclusion of the New York Times in the article that will be part of this record, dated November 12, 1989. The title is "Migrants' False Claims: Fraud on a Huge Scale."

We also note, for example, from the 9/11 Commission staff statements, that Mohamed and Mahmud Abouhalima, conspirators in the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, were granted green cards, or legal permanent resident status, under the Special Agricultural Workers Program, which was an amnesty program created by the 1986 bill.

Under this Special Agricultural Workers Program, a key component of the 1986 amnesty, these applicants had to provide evidence they had worked on perishable crops for at least 90 days between May 1, 1985, and May 1, 1986; their residence did not have to be "continuous" or "unlawful." Nearly 1 million illegal aliens received legal permanent resident status under this amnesty—"twice the number of foreigners normally employed in agriculture" at that time, according to the 9/11 Commission staff statements.

In other words, the inference is incapable that there was fraud on a huge scale, based on the very kind of confidentiality provisions this bill includes and which my amendment would remove.

I wish to make one other point about this ill-conceived confidentiality provision. Under this bill we are considering, Congress would even prohibit the use of information from sworn third-party affidavits that are one of the documents that can prove eligibility. Who could not, with a little bit of creativity and initiative, get some third party to provide an affidavit that says: Yes, you were present on June 1, 2007; thus, you are eligible for the benefits under this program.

If you designed a program to welcome and invite and embrace fraud more, I cannot imagine what it would be. Yet that very same sort of affidavit could be rendered confidential and could not be shared with law enforcement personnel, unless my amendment is passed.

We already know from well-documented prosecutions of document vendors and other legalization cases that the type of documents submitted—especially sworn affidavits from third parties, not even relatives—no qualification, just third parties—have been used routinely to further fraud.

At the very least, we should not repeat the mistakes of 1986 by allowing the continued use of sworn affidavits by applicants to establish eligibility for the Z visa. My amendment takes care of these concerns.

We know one thing: Criminals and terrorists have abused—and will continue to seek ways to abuse—our immigration system in order to enter and remain in this country.

I regret this bill we are debating fails to give law enforcement the common-sense tools they need in order to prevent terrorists and others from exploiting the vulnerabilities inherent in any massive legalization.

My colleagues may tell you there is a confidentiality exception for national security and for fraud. But to rely solely on these exceptions is simply wishful thinking; it is not going to happen. It doesn't go nearly far enough to reach the kinds of fraud and criminal conduct and other wrongful conduct I have mentioned.

This kind of information law enforcement needs may provide valuable leads of which they were previously unaware. Failure to allow law enforcement to connect the dots is a deadly mistake I have heard my colleagues promise they would "never allow to happen again." So I urge those who are truly serious about the commitment to make sure this kind of fraud and the danger associated with it doesn't ever happen again to support my amendment and make a crucial improvement to this legislation.

I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of my time.

MIGRANTS' FALSE CLAIMS: FRAUD ON A HUGE SCALE

(By Roberto Suro)

In one of the most extensive immigration frauds ever perpetrated against the United States Government, thousands of people who falsified amnesty applications will begin to acquire permanent resident status next month under the 1986 immigration law.

More than 1.3 million illegal aliens applied to become legal immigrants under a one-time amnesty for farm workers. The program was expected to accommodate only 250,000 aliens when Congress enacted it as a politically critical part of a sweeping package of changes in immigration law.

Now a variety of estimates by Federal officials and immigration experts place the number of fraudulent applications at somewhere between 250,000 and 650,000.

LACK OF MANPOWER AND MONEY

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has identified 398,000 cases of possible fraud in the program, but the agency admits that it lacks both the manpower and the money to prosecute individual applicants. The agency is to begin issuing permanent resident status to amnesty applicants on Dec. 1, and officials said they were approving 94 percent of the applicants over all.

Evidence of vast abuse of the farm worker amnesty program has already led to important changes in the way immigration policies are conceived in Congress. For example, recent legislation to aid immigration by refugees from the Soviet Union was modified specifically to avoid the uncontrolled influx that has occurred under the agricultural amnesty program.

Supporters of the farm worker amnesty argue that it accomplished its principal aim of insuring the nation a cheap, reliable and legal supply of farm workers and that it made an inadvertent but important contribution in legitimizing a large part of the nation's illegal alien population. #1,000 Workers, 30 Acres Critics point to cases like that of Larry and Sharon Marval of Newark. Last year they pleaded guilty to immigration fraud charges after immigration service investigators alleged that the Marvals were part of an operation that helped about 1,000 aliens acquire amnesty with falsified documents showing they had all worked on a mere 30 acres of farmland.

The amnesty for farm workers was a last-minute addition to the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, which sought to halt illegal immigration with a two-part strategy. Under a general amnesty, illegal aliens who could prove they had lived in the United States since before Jan. 1, 1982, were given the chance to leave their underground existence and begin a process leading to permanent resident status. And to stem further illegal immigration, the employment of illegal aliens was made a crime.

The agricultural amnesty program was adopted at the insistence of politically powerful fruit and vegetable growers in California and Texas who wanted to protect their labor force. In several respects, the provisions for the program were much less strict than the general amnesty program, which drew 1.7 million applicants. Instead of having to document nearly five years of continuous residence, most agricultural worker applicants had to show only that they had done 90 days of farm work between May 1, 1985, and May 1, 1986.

Representative Charles E. Schumer, a Brooklyn Democrat who was an author of this Special Agricultural Worker provision, said that in retrospect the program seemed "too open" and susceptible to fraud. But he argued that budget decisions had made the battle to combat fraud more difficult.

"There has not been enough diligence in tracking down the fraud," he said, "because funding for the I.N.S. has been cut by the White House in each of the last three budgets, even though everyone agreed when the bill passed that greater I.N.S. manpower was essential to make it work."

Congress rarely raises the immigration service budget above Administration requests.

Aside from its budget problems, the immigration service has repeatedly come under fire this year in Congress and in an audit by the Justice Department for what was termed mismanagement and administrative inefficiency.

John F. Shaw, Assistant Immigration Commissioner, agreed that "manpower restrictions" at the agency were a major factor in the fraud in the agricultural amnesty program. He said much of the fraud "shot through a window of opportunity" when the agency was frantically trying to deal with many new burdens of the 1986 immigration law.

PEOPLE WHO SOLD FALSE DOCUMENTS

Mr. Shaw said law-enforcement efforts had been limited to the people who sold false documents to applicants for the farm worker amnesty. The immigration service has made 844 arrests and won 413 convictions in cases alleging fraud in the amnesty program. The people involved ranged from notaries public to field crew leaders. "It was a cottage industry," Mr. Shaw said.

The immigration service can revoke legal status if it finds the applicant committed fraud, but even this effort is limited. Only applications that appear linked to a fraud conspiracy are held for review, as when an unusually large number of applicants assert that they have worked in the same place. Some 398,000 aliens have fallen into this category since the application period ended last Nov. 30, but it is likely that many of them will get resident status.

Mr. Shaw said the fraud conspiracies often involved farms that actually did employ some migrant labor. So it is frequently impossible to separate legitimate from illicit claims.

Given the limited law-enforcement effort, no precise count of fraud in the agricultural amnesty program is possible. But some rough estimates are possible based on information from the aliens themselves. An extensive survey conducted in three rural Mexican communities by the Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies at the University of California in San Diego found that only 72 percent of those who identified themselves as applicants for farm worker amnesty had work histories that qualified them for the program. A similar survey conducted by Mexican researchers in Jalisco in central Mexico found that only 59 percent qualified.

But fraud alone does not explain why the program produced more than five times the applicants Congress expected. Frank D. Bean, co-director of the Program for Research on Immigration Policy at the Urban Institute in Washington, said the miscalculation in the Special Agricultural Worker program reflected longstanding difficulties in tracking the number of temporary illegal migrants from Mexico.

"It is at least plausible that a very large percentage of the S.A.W. applicants had done agricultural work in the U.S. even if they did not meet the specific time requirements of the amnesty," Mr. Bean said. "It Was a Weak Program".

Mr. Shaw of the immigration service, and other critics of the law, believe there were more fundamental flaws. "It was a weak program and it was poorly articulated in the law," he said.

Unlike almost all other immigration programs, which put the burden of proof on the applicant, the farm amnesty put the burden on the Government. Consequently, aliens with even the most rudimentary documentation cannot be rejected unless the Government can prove their claims are false.

Stephen Rosenbaum, staff attorney for California Rural Legal Assistance, a non-profit service organization for farm workers, argued that there was no other way to structure an immigration program for an occupation "that does not produce a paper trail." He noted that farm workers are paid in cash and neither the employers nor the workers keep detailed records. "Immense Logistical Problems."

"You can argue the wisdom of a farm worker amnesty, but if you have one, you have to recognize the immense logistical problems involved in producing evidence," he said.

The immigration service at first tried to apply the stringent practices common to other immigration programs, like rejecting applicants with little explanation when their documents were suspect. But three lawsuits brought in Florida, Texas and California over the last two years forced the agency to follow the broader standards mandated by Congress.

The burden-of-proof issue arose again earlier this year when the House of Representatives approved legislation that would have made any person who could prove Soviet citizenship eligible for political refugee status.

A legislator with a powerful role on immigration policy, Senator Alan K. Simpson, Republican of Wyoming, eliminated the provision because of concerns raised by the farm worker amnesty program, an aide said. Mr. Simpson, who is on the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration and Refugee Affairs, substituted a series of specific circumstances that had to be met for a Soviet citizen to be considered a refugee, like denial of a particular job because of religious beliefs.

Immigration experts believe that the agricultural amnesty program will probably color policy debates over other categories of aliens whose qualifications will be difficult to document, like the anti-Sandinista rebels of Nicaragua.

"One certain product" of the agricultural amnesty program, Representative Schumer said, "is that in developing immigration policies in the future, Congress will be much more wary of the potential for fraud and will do more to stop it."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

(The remarks of Mr. DEMINT pertaining to the submission of S. Con. Res. 35 are located in today's RECORD under "Submission of Concurrent and Senate Resolutions.")

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, so I understand, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 hour 42 minutes remaining.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield such time as I might use.

On the Cornyn amendment, the issue is basically confidentiality. Why is confidentiality important? What we are trying to do with this proposal is to say to the 12.5 million who are living here, the undocumented as well as those in agricultural jobs: Come out of the shadows, and if you are going to meet the other requirements of the bill—paying fines, go to the end of the line, demonstrate solid work achievement and accomplishment—you will eventually be able to get in line after the backlog is completed for a green card and citizenship. We are saying to the individuals: If you are undocumented today, we want you to register.

There is a question with regard to people who are undocumented today. If I go down and say my name is—maybe an undocumented Irish person, say his name is Halloran, and he goes in and says: I am Halloran and live on Linden Street. I am undocumented, my wife is undocumented, and my children are undocumented. We want these people to come out of the shadows and register to begin this process, right? Right. We have to make sure those people are going to have a certain amount of confidentiality, that they are not thinking they are just going to sign in and register and report to be deported. That is what the Cornyn amendment effectively does, is report to deport because he eliminates all kinds of protections of confidentiality.

We provide levels of protection of confidentiality for individuals, but not if they have been involved in any criminal activity and any fraudulent activity.

The Senator from Texas mentions the 1986 act. He has been mentioning the 1986 act time and time again. I responded that President Reagan signed that act. Republicans were in charge at that time, and they administered that act from 1986 to 1992. I voted against that legislation for many of the reasons that have been outlined. That is a different time.

If they want to talk about what President Reagan and what the Republicans did at that time, they can be my guest. But the fact is, as we do know, there were incidents where fraud was committed during that program in the submission of various agricultural documents, and fraud was committed. That is all outlined in a 1988 report which has been quoted here. But that has been the document. We have not seen other documents about similar kinds of fraudulent activities.

As a result, what did we do with this legislation? We did a number of things because of what happened in 1986.

We provide additional protections and requirements in these areas of identification. We provide a number of protections in this legislation, and I will include those at the conclusion of my statement.

Secondly, we have included in this legislation that if the DHS believes fraud has been committed, they can move ahead and deport. Do my colleagues understand? If the Department of Homeland Security thinks fraud has been committed by these individuals, they can move ahead and deport. That has been included. We have also included random audits of these various programs.

The point that has been made that in 1986 there were irregularities we accept and agree. The fact that the 1986 act was not well managed, we agree. Was there fraud in a number of these affidavits? We say, yes, and that is why we took action in this legislation to address it. And I will include those particular citations.

I will run through these points very quickly. If the applicant is inadmissible for criminal reasons or an alien smuggler, that information is turned over to the local law enforcement and police. If there has been a conviction of a crime, criminal activity, smuggling, marriage fraud, all of that information is turned over to the police. If there is any indication of any kind of intelligence activity, it is turned over to the Department of Homeland Security.

We have written into this legislation protections so we are not going to have abuses of confidentiality. But—but, Mr. President—when we are talking about other kinds of activities—for example, if they fail the English test, or because there is a certain amount of work requirement time, there is an issue as to whether they completed the work requirement, we protect their confidentiality. If they fail the English test, we protect their confidentiality. If there is a technical registration issue, we protect their confidentiality.

This is enormously important because if we do not protect their confidentiality, they are not going to register. It is as clear and simple as that.

This represents a very careful balance that was worked out. I respect the Senator from Texas on this issue, but it is important that we have guarantees for individuals if we expect them to register as this system is being set up because it is going to transition. We know parts of this system are not going to go into effect until we have border security, and if we expect individuals to participate in that system, we have to guarantee their confidentiality. We do so. It is enormously important. This system isn't going to function unless we do.

If the Cornyn amendment is adopted, the bottom line is this system will not function, and it will not work because as individuals in this community are wondering whether they ought to sign up for this system, by and large they are going to check with perhaps their local parish, maybe their local priest, maybe a nonprofit organization, social service organizations, community organizations in which they have confidence and trust, and those individuals are going to know whether there is confidentiality or not. Those individuals upon whom they rely in the local community, extended members of their family, nonprofit organizations, church organizations, unless they are able to give the assurance to these individuals that their confidentiality is going to be protected, we are not going to have people involved, and we are not going to have success with this legislation.

As I mentioned, in the incidence of fraud, we have addressed those extensively with provisions in the legislation. If there are incidents of fraud, criminal activity, terrorist activity, any of the other kinds of issues that involve criminality, of course, that protection is effectively out the window. We provide confidentiality, but limited in a very important way. It is enormously important to the success of the program.

Mr. President, I anticipate that we are going to have presentations by my friend and colleague from Alabama sometime with regard to the earned-income tax credit. I have comments in response to that amendment. I know there will be an alternative amendment that will be offered in that area. I will address the Senate when we have that particular proposal.

Eventually, we are going to have the Lieberman amendment, which is a very thoughtful amendment. We will have opportunity to address it at that time.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I ask that the time during the quorum call be equally divided between both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I appreciate the tremendous effort that has been made on both sides of the aisle to try to address the immigration dilemma facing our country. In my view, other than the war in Iraq, the war on terror, there is nothing more important before us, and we should leave the bill on this floor for as long as it takes to get it right because as difficult as it is to get it right, it seems to me that failure is not an option. If we fail, then what we have done is admitted that we have just simply allowed a situation to continue where perhaps a million new illegal persons will come into our country each year. That contravenes the rule of law upon which this country is founded, it works against our ability to be a country that lives by the motto that is engraved up there on the wall, "one from many," to assimilate into our country the number of people who are coming, and it is a poor example for the rest of the world when we suggest to them that they create governments that rely upon the rule of law. It also absolutely enrages the American citizens, who look at Washington and say that the Government has done a horrible job for the last 10, 15, 20 years in enforcing our immigration laws. Americans have, in many cases, lost faith that we even have the ability to fix the mess. I used to feel that way myself before I came here. I haven't been here that long—just 4 years.

Twelve years ago, I was a candidate for President of the United States. I was in those debates which we watched on television last night, or those kinds of debates. One of my proposals was that we should create a new branch of the military in order to secure the border. In 1994, 1995, and 1996, Americans were upset about our inability to distinguish between legal immigration, which is the lifeblood of our country, and illegal immigration, which is an affront to the rule of law and the principles of what it means to be an American. So this has been going on year after year after year.

When I was home last week in Tennessee, I spent a lot of time listening and talking to Tennesseans. In fact, I just left a group of homebuilders from Tennessee in my office who were talking to me about the immigration bill and about some concerns they have. But of all the concerns that came through to me last week in my conversations with Tennesseans, it boils down to this: We don't really trust you guys in Washington, DC, to fix this problem. You don't seem to be willing to do it.

So I have a suggestion today that I will make, an amendment that I intend to offer. I won't call it up at this moment, but I want my colleagues to know about it and the country to know about it because I think if this bill were to become law, it would increase the level of trust the American people would have in the ability of this Government to enforce whatever law we pass. I am not suggesting it would solve everything or that we would regain trust overnight, but I am suggesting it would be a step forward. I will describe the legislation in just a moment, but it boils down to this: We would involve the Governors of the border States between the United States and Mexico in determining whether the new border control system we put in place is actually operational.

Right now, particularly amendment offered by my distinguished colleague from New Hampshire (Senator GREGG) the other day, the proposed bill has been strengthened in the following way: He said that his amendment would require the Department of Homeland Security to certify that it has established and demonstrated operational control over the entire U.S.-Mexico land border before other parts of the bill involving legal status could go into effect. We call this the trigger.

Senator ISAKSON from Georgia suggested this last year. It is a wise idea. It says, first we secure the border, and then, when it is secure, we do the other things about legalization of people already here, to the extent we decide to do that. But the question still remains: Who is going to say when the border is secure? The people out across the country—at least those in Tennessee—don't trust us, don't trust the Government in Washington, because of this poor record of 20 years. It doesn't matter that I just got here 4 years ago. They look up here and see the Government and they say: You didn't do it last year, you didn't do it 3 years ago, you didn't do it 10 years ago or 15 years ago, so how do we know you are ever going to do it, even if you pass the law?

Well, the three things I can think of that would make a difference are, No. 1, to pass a bill with teeth in it. For example, the Gregg amendment says there will be 20,000 Border Patrol agents. That is more than we currently have. Today, there are 13,000. There will be four unmanned aerial vehicles. There will be 300 miles of vehicle barriers. Currently, there are about 78. There will have to be at least 370 miles of fencing already built. Now, there are 700 already authorized by the Secure Fence Act of 2006, and that hasn't changed, but 370 miles would have to be built. There would have to be 70 ground-based radar and camera towers on the southwest border. There would have to be a permanent end to catch and release. There would have to be an employment verification system that requires employers to electronically verify new hires within 18 months and all existing employees within 3 years. All of those things would have to be in place. The words are they would have to be "established and demonstrated, that the Federal Government had operational control over the entire U.S.-Mexico land border."

The amendment that is already part of the bill, the Gregg amendment, said the Director of Homeland Security would certify that. What I add with my amendment is it has to be concurred in, agreed with, signed off on by three of the four Governors on the United States-Mexico border. In other words, we pass the law with teeth—the teeth of the Gregg amendment and maybe more. I have suggested, and others seem to have agreed, what we ought to do is then fund the law. Either the President challenges us to pass an appropriations bill within 30 days after we pass the law, we do it ourselves, or we set up a trust fund—the way we do for highways and the way we do for Social Security, the way we do for anything else—and we say that money goes to secure the border, to fund these things. We pass a law with teeth. Then we provide the money. Then the Director of Homeland Security says the border is secure. That is the trigger. My amendment would say: The Governors of the border States, three out of four, have to agree.

The Governors of the border States are not in Washington, DC. They have not been infected with whatever is up here. They have not even been vaccinated. I have been up here long enough to be vaccinated with whatever disease is up here, and for that reason more Tennesseans trust the Governors than they do the Washington officials to solve this problem. If the Governors of California, Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas say yes, the border is secure, we agree with the certification of the Department of Homeland Security, I think that would be good enough for most Americans. That is the point of my amendment.

We need to put together a good bill that secures the border first. After border security, the other biggest problem is what to do about those already here illegally. I think that issue is less of an issue if most Americans believe we would pass a law that permitted the Border Patrol agents and the verification system to be done, that we would fund it and we would actually do it as certified by the Director of Homeland Security and the Governors on the border. Then I think they would be willing to accept different solutions for those already here.

But the week before last I voted for the amendment offered by Senator VITTER that would have sent the bill's drafters back to the drawing board on the question of what to do about the 12 million illegal persons, more or less, who are already here.

Senator HUTCHISON and Senator CORKER have done some very important work on this issue, which I intend to support and to cosponsor. That amendment would require illegal immigrants, who want to work here, to return to their home countries and reenter through legal channels in addition to paying a fine and passing the criminal background check.

In addition to that, this bill should be about another subject about which we hear almost nothing, and that is the number of people who come here legally every year. A little more than a million people come into the United States each year legally. Today, if I remember the figures right, most are family members. Some come here as students. Some come here as researchers, to create jobs for us. Some come here as refugees. For those Americans who come here legally and who are prospective citizens, especially given the large number of people coming from overseas, we need to do everything we can to help those persons become Americans.

I have filed several amendments. They seek to promote learning English, our common language, and what it means to become an American through an understanding of history and civics. For example, one of these amendments will help these legal immigrants learn English and what it means to be an American, to codify the oath of allegiance, and to make English our national language.

Another amendment would ask the Government Accountability Office to provide a comprehensive report on the costs imposed on the public and private sector by having millions of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents who are not proficient in English. So far in this debate the Senate has already passed my amendment to establish a Presidential award to recognize companies who have taken extraordinary efforts to help their employees learn English and American history and civics.

Some may say that is not so important, we all agree with that. It is awfully important. If you take a look at Europe today and you see the difficulty France has helping immigrants become French, and that Germany has helping immigrant workers become German, and that Japan has—because no one has an idea of what it might mean to become Japanese if you are not born

Japanese—you can see how fortunate we are in this country to have literally invented the concept of becoming American. We say it does not matter what your race is, it doesn't matter who your grandfather is, you come here, you take the oath George Washington gave his officers at Valley Forge and you say: I am not whatever I was. I pledge allegiance to America. I learned the language, I learned the history, and we have a few principles we agree on, and I am an American. I am proud of where I came from, but I am prouder to be an American. Race doesn't matter. Religion doesn't matter. We pride ourselves on that. It is a tremendous advantage we have, so we ought not lose sight of the importance of helping legal citizens learn English and what it means to be an American.

I have heard some talk that encouraging people to learn English is somehow divisive. I can't imagine that. In fact, it is the reverse. It is our unifier. It unifies us, to have a common language. It unifies us to know that the rule of law and equal opportunity are common principles.

We debate what that means, and often they collide and conflict and we have to work that out as legislators, but we all agree on the same common principles and we enjoy the fact we have a common language, so I can speak to the President, and I can argue with the Senator from Colorado or I can agree with him as we are doing on an Iraq piece of legislation right now. We have a common language.

So, common language, what it means to be an American, finding many different ways to honor these new citizens who come here legally—that ought to be as important a part of this bill as securing the border and creating a verification system in dealing with the people who already got here illegally.

Primarily I came to the floor this afternoon to let my colleagues know I have a suggestion for how to begin to regain the trust of the American people on this issue, and that is this bill should pass with strong new provisions for border security, with funding to pay for it, and with a trigger that says the legalization parts of the bill don't take effect for 2, 3, 4, maybe even 5 years, until the border is secure.

Then the question is how are we going to know if the border is secure? The bill says trust the Director of Homeland Security. I say ask him, pay attention to him or her, but also trust the Governors of the border States. Let three out of the four Governors, of California, Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas concur with the Director of Homeland Security that the border is secure before we begin the legalization process, and I think the American people might buy it, they might believe that, and we might begin to regain their trust, after 20 years of mismanagement, that we are willing to take seriously securing the border and establishing respect again so we can have a rule of law.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WHITEHOUSE). The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. SALAZAR. I thank my friend from Tennessee for his comments on the importance of immigration reform. I would say there is agreement in this Chamber among both Democrats and Republicans that what we need to do is secure our borders. The legislation before us today and the legislation we have been working on is, in fact, intended to secure our borders. We all recognize we need to move from a system of lawlessness and broken borders that create a wake of victims, to a system of law and order and a system of immigration reform that works for our country. We have been making significant progress as we move forward with this legislation. At this point we have already had 15 rollcall votes on this legislation. We expect to have another seven rollcall votes on this legislation as we move forward today. That gets us up to 22 rollcall votes. Last year before cloture was invoked on the immigration bill that was before the Senate, there were, at that time, 23 rollcall votes. So by the end of tonight we should be at a point where we would have equaled at least the number of votes we had last year.

We have some difficult amendments still coming up that we will be voting on, both today and tomorrow, but it seems to me we are making significant progress, and I appreciate the hard work that is going on today on the Democratic side as well as the Republican side.

Again, I appreciate the leadership of Senator REID. What he did is say: I am going to take the time of the Senate, 100 Senators. All of us here in the Chamber know how important our time is. We get a 6-year license to serve as Senators, so how we spend our time and how our time is allocated is at a very high premium. What Senator REID did was to say a long time ago we would spend the latter part of May, and now we are into June, dealing with this huge issue of immigration reform. At the end of the day it is a national security issue that goes to the heart of what Senator ALEXANDER was saying, which is we have to secure the borders of this country, we have to deal with the economic realities that have created the immigration issues we are facing here today, we have to deal with the reality of 12 million undocumented workers who live here in the shadows of America's society, and we have to create a system for immigration that is going to work into the future.

The people who have worked on this, including President Bush in the White House, have helped us move this debate forward—hopefully closer to conclusion.

I see my friend from New Jersey, who is I think ready to speak, so I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, first, I ask unanimous consent that Senator REID be added as a cosponsor of the Menendez-Hagel amendment, No. 1194.

AMENDMENT NO. 1194

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, let me first commend my distinguished colleague from Colorado, who has been a voice of reason throughout this whole process. He has been a leader in trying to fashion a comprehensive immigration reform that is tough and smart. We need immigration reform that is tough as it relates to making sure our borders are protected. We have not only the right but the obligation to secure those borders and ensure that we have the wherewithal and the resources to make sure only those who cross, cross in a fashion that is safe, legal and orderly. At the same time, we need immigration reform that deals with our economy, fueling that economy, and finally finds justice for individuals who are often subject to human trafficking as well as exploitation.

To my distinguished colleague from Colorado, I tip my hat for the tremendous effort he has made—and that brings us to where we are today. But I do want to go toward one of the pending amendments that will be voted on in the next block. It is the amendment I have offered with Senator HAGEL and many others that goes to the core of one of the great issues the Senate will decide as it relates to this immigration bill, and that is whether families and the reunification of families is still a value to the Senate, is still a value in our family, whether families who come together and are strengthened by being together and helping each other and working with each other and nurturing each other and by so doing strengthening communities in the process are to be preserved, or are they, in terms of that battle, likely to be eliminated and struck, at least in our immigration context?

I certainly hope when the Senate comes to vote, it will be voting in a way that is in line with the many speeches I have heard here, that I have heard in committee hearings, that I have heard in the other body, in the House of Representatives, where I served before coming here, about family values, family reunification is going to be preserved. It is time to put our votes where our values are. The Menendez-Hagel amendment offers that opportunity.

Now, I do wish to wave my saber to the managers of the bill. I have heard some suggestion that there may be an attempt to offer a budget point of order which would require a higher vote total. I would simply say that there are also budget points of order on the underlying substitute. If in fact we are going to go down that slippery slope, then I would have the expectation myself to be offering budget points of order against the substitute. I think what is fair is to have a vote up or down on the amendment as it relates to the majority of the Senate's will. We will see what the majority will of the Senate is.

But if we are going to move down that road, I would acknowledge that there is a budget point of order as it relates to the underlying substitute. So I hope we will not move to that type of tactic as we pursue the vote on this amendment.

Now, it seems to me that under the existing bill, people who apply under the existing rule, under the law as it is today, who observe the law, who follow the rules, who said to their family member: No, no, do not come to the United States, wait your turn, follow the law, obey the rules, who filed an application as is a right of a U.S. citizen to file for a petition for their immediate relative, who paid their application fee, whose Government took their application fee, whose Government went ahead and made an analysis of that petition to see if it was a petition that was lawfully entitled to be approved, and who approved the very essence of that petition saying: Yes, this person, as a U.S. citizen, has the right—the right—to go ahead and apply for their family member, their brother or sister, their mother or father, their son or daughter—that is the universe that we are talking about—and says: Having approved my documentation and having approved of that petition, then you must wait your turn to the time that ultimately the priority date will invoke the possibility for you to come to the United States.

That is the law. That is obeying the law. That is the rule of law. So you would think that in the legislation we are debating, those who have obeyed the law, followed the rules, and those who are U.S. citizens and have done the right thing, that we would not extinguish, eliminate their right for having done the right thing—for having done the right thing.

But that is the very essence of what this bill does, unless we adopt our amendment. Under the bill, not only does, of course, the Senate bill propose a radical change to who and how you can come to this country, but it also cancels the applications that are pending—pending—of many people who have been waiting patiently in line for family-based visas. If you are a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident, you filed after May of 2005, the date that arbitrarily was taken and put into the bill to bring in a relative to the family immigration system, your application is gone. It is voided. You are told: Get to the back of the line—the back of the line, by the way, which is the back of the line with people who violated the law, who violated the law. Imagine that.

Whose right is being extinguished here? Not the family member who is waiting abroad. No. The right of the individual that is being extinguished is the U.S. citizen. That is where the right accrues. It is that person who has the right to make this claim under existing law.

So we take away their right after they filed the petition, paid their fees, and told their family members to wait. They are told to get in the back of the line. The back of the line is after those individuals who did not follow the law and obey the rules.

It boggles the mind. Under the Senate bill, employment-based immigrants are allowed to continue their applications as long as they are pending after the date of enactment. Employment-based verification. What about those families who have done everything right? It is only fair, in my mind, that family-based immigrants be given the same treatment.

The Menendez-Hagel amendment goes a long way to restoring fairness to this situation by doing what? We simply take the cutoff date that is in the bill, May 2005, and we say: Do not treat American citizens any worse than you are going to treat those who came into the country in an undocumented fashion. You are going to give them a benefit, January 1, 2007. They had to be here by January 1, 2007. Well, then, let those who followed the law, obeyed the rules, paid their fees, told their families to wait, they have the same benefit: January 1, 2007.

It is not outside the "grand bargain." It is within the same context. You want to clear out a backlog? Fine, clear out a backlog but be fair in the process. Do not extinguish the rights of U.S. citizens.

It is important to understand, as we talk about this, the stringent requirements that exist under the law today governing family sponsorship for immigration. They would continue to apply in these cases. Any U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident wishing to sponsor a family member, as part of the approval of that petition, must demonstrate that he or she earns at least 125 percent of the Federal poverty level and must sign a legally enforceable "affidavit of support," pledging to ensure his or her relative will not become a public charge.

On top of that, based upon the welfare reform legislation that was passed several years ago, legal immigrants are barred, barred from accessing most Federal means-tested public benefits for the first 5 years in the United States and are thereafter subject to further limitations until they have worked 40 quarters in this country, which is the equivalent of 10 years—10 years. Five years first, in terms of being barred from any public benefit because you came in on the affidavit of a family member who said: I am going to be responsible for this individual, and then 10 years after, in terms of being subject to further limitations of their necessity to have worked 40 quarters, 10 years.

Now, I have heard a lot about the rule of law. I am for the rule of law. But how does the rule of law get promoted, how does the rule of law get promoted when we say to a U.S. citizen who has applied for their family member waiting abroad, waiting their time, following the rules, obeying the rule of law, that, in fact, they have an inferior right to someone who did not follow the rules, who did not obey the law, and who ultimately will receive a benefit superior, superior to that U.S. citizen who is claiming their family member and waiting under the law and pursuing the law?

In my mind, it sends out totally the wrong message. The message should have been: No, no. Come across. Come however you can. Then, by the way, you know we are going to give you a benefit. Do not stay out there waiting. Yes, it breaks our heart that we are not together. Yes, you are going to have to wait a period of time. But you know that is the law. We are going to do this right.

Oh, no. Instead of honoring and rewarding that and sending a message that when you observe the law there is a benefit, you know, we do the opposite. We do the opposite under this bill. Our amendment very simply says: A U.S. citizen claiming their family member, waiting under the legal process, waiting to proceed, that their right should not be snuffed out like that, under this bill, in May of 2005, when those who have crossed the borders of our country through a process that is unchecked, undocumented, get a benefit—January of 2007.

Because here is the message we send under this bill: Break the law, you get a benefit—January of 2007. Follow the law, follow the rule of law, obey it, your right is snuffed out in May of 2005. So I think if we want to send a message about the rule of law, what we want to do is to ensure we put on an equal footing the rights of a U.S. citizen claiming their family member, obeying the law, to give them the same opportunity that those who have not. That is what our amendment is all about.

Now, as we approach moving toward a vote on this amendment, I wish to remind our colleagues about whose rights they are snuffing out. Rights of individuals good enough to wear the uniform of the United States, good enough to serve their country, good enough to fight for their country but not good enough to observe their right to claim their family member.

Under this bill, both U.S. citizens and U.S. legal permanent residents' rights are snuffed out. These men in different branches of the armed services of the United States, they were good enough to fight for their country, but they were not good enough, under this bill, to have their rights preserved to claim their family member.

That does not make sense to me. Now, I have heard about this killer amendment—killer amendment. One of our colleagues has tried to describe our amendment on family reunification as a killer amendment. What is a killer amendment? A killer amendment is an amendment that is proposed by a sponsor who does not want to see comprehensive immigration reform pass the Senate.

Now, the ironic part of that is many who used that language last year when I was in the Senate voting for comprehensive immigration reform, that was used against me in my election last year. They were voting against comprehensive immigration reform. Killer amendment? When did family reunification—family reunification—strengthening of families, preserving the rights of U.S. citizens, including those who wear the uniform of the United States, when did that become a killer amendment?

Now, I have heard a lot about family values in my 15 years in Congress. You know, when you want to move away from the human aspect, when you want to forget, for example, the face of Marine LCpl Jose Antonio Gutierrez, a legal permanent resident of the United States who gave his life, the first soldier to die in Iraq, under this bill, had he survived, you would have extinguished his right to claim his family. He was good enough to die for his country, not good enough to have his rights preserved. When you don't want to see the human faces, you dehumanize it so you can deal with it abstractly. So what have we heard about? We have heard about chain migration. We can treat it like an inanimate object; we have to stop that chain migration.

This is much more than chain migration. This chain my colleagues so abstractly refer to, the top of this chain is someone who is a mother or a father. When did that become such a horrible thing? I thought we wanted to strengthen families, honor our parents, honor their ability to perform and to be strengthened. But that is chain migration. We can't let a U.S. citizen be able to claim their family. No, that is chain migration. We can't do that.

When did we decide our brothers and sisters are nonnuclear? But they are part of the chain, brothers and sisters. Then our children—this is a good one—if they are under the age of 21, they are part of our nuclear family. If they are over the age of 21, they are no longer part of our nuclear family, just a little part of this chain.

I have two children. One is 21; the other is 23. I have never for a moment, because they changed from 20 to 21, believed they were not part of my nuclear family. I don't view them as part of a chain. I don't love them any less. I couldn't live without them any less. The mere passage of a year, some numerical figure makes them part of a chain, nonnuclear. I guess we can do away with our children. I guess we can do without the right of U.S. citizens to claim their children. We can just discard them. I guess when you become 21, you really don't matter anymore. As a matter of fact, all of that family values stuff doesn't matter anymore. Unless we adopt this amendment, that is what we are talking about.

Imagine if we couldn't have such a set of circumstances be preserved by virtue of this amendment. I have shown some of these pictures before, but as we move to the vote, I hope people understand what I am talking about. Under the bill, family reunification that I believe is so critical, we wouldn't have a lot of people in our country who have made enormous contributions. Ultimately, we ended up thriving because of their contributions. We ended up thriving on the contributions of a Colin Powell whose parents, under this bill, would not have been eligible to come to this country and, therefore, unlikely that he would have been born here and had the opportunity to become chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff or Secretary of State. He has made a good contribution to this country.

Right now in Iraq our leadership comes from GEN David Petraeus. The reality is, under this bill his parents would have been unlikely to come to this country, and he would not be a United States general and leading the best efforts we can have in Iraq.

Under this bill, the inventor of the polio vaccine, Jonas Salk, would not have made it to this country. Yet he saved the lives of millions and millions of people here and across the world. Under this bill, at least, America wouldn't have been the place in which electricity and the light bulb would have been found. Thomas Edison, from my home State of New Jersey, likely would not have made it because his parents weren't rocket scientists.

The list goes on and on. We have a gentleman who did a great service to our service men and women across the globe, Bob Hope. Under this bill his parents wouldn't have made it, and we wouldn't have had an incredible ambassador for our country and an incredible sponsor of goodwill for the men and women who served us over decades around the globe.

What do we say? This came out recently in one of the newspapers. What are our priorities? Stopping terrorists, stopping drugs at the border? No. Drugs or explosives? No. We are just checking to make sure you don't take any loved ones with you.

Under this bill, it doesn't matter because even when you obey the law and follow the rules, you ultimately have your right extinguished.

It seems to me we have our values wrong. It is not about chain migration, not about just looking at the ability to say that family reunification should not happen, especially when the burden is on the family member who happens to be a U.S. citizen. I simply believe the question before the Senate will be, are you willing to vote to eliminate the right that exists today of a U.S. citizen who filed his papers, the Government took his money, he obeyed the law, followed the rules, you are going to take away his or her right? But you are going to give a right to individuals who didn't follow the law and obey the rules. I certainly don't believe that ultimately is in pursuit of the rule of law.

There are many organizations that have joined us. I ask unanimous consent to have this list printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ASIAN AMERICAN

JUSTICE CENTER,

Washington, DC, June 5, 2007.

DEAR SENATORS: We, the undersigned organizations, write to urge you to vote yes on the Menendez-Hagel Amendment to ensure fairness for U.S. citizens and their families. Without this amendment, U.S. citizens will be punished for playing by the rules and waiting in line to be reunited with their family members.

The current immigration bill being considered by the Senate contains a provision that would address the current family backlog of people that have applied for lawful permanent residence, but only for those who applied before May 1, 2005. Applications that were filed by U.S. citizens to sponsor their adult children or siblings after this cut-off date—an estimated 833,000—would be thrown out. Not only does this send the wrong message to people who are citizens and obey the law, the government will be severely taxed with the administrative cost of returning application fees for the past two years.

Senators Robert Menendez (D-NJ) and Chuck Hagel (R-NE) have introduced an amendment, co-sponsored by Senators Daniel Akaka (D-HI), Hillary Clinton (D-NY), Christopher Dodd (D-CT), Richard Durbin (D-IL), Daniel Inouye (D-HI), Frank Lautenberg (D-NJ), and Barack Obama (D-IL), to the current Senate bill that would correct this grave injustice by changing the cut-off date for legal immigrant applicants from May 1, 2005 to January 1, 2007—the same cut-off date that is currently set for the legalization of undocumented immigrants—and adding 110,000 green cards a year for a meaningful backlog reduction so as to not lengthen the 8-year deadline for clearing the adult children and sibling backlog.

By voting for the Menendez-Hagel Amendment, you will help immigrants who have gone through the long and sometimes arduous process of learning English and becoming citizens. These Americans have filed applications and paid fees to the U.S. government so that they can bring in their adult children or siblings. They have made life choices based on the very reasonable expectation that they would be eventually reuniting with their family members. Our country can't tell people who have been waiting patiently in line for visas that we are now retroactively re-writing the rules and effectively forcing them to start from scratch.

We urge you to vote yes on the Menendez-Hagel Amendment and ensure our immigration system is fair for United States citizens.

Very truly yours,

Mr. MENENDEZ. There are 80 of them. I will not read them all, but I want to give a sense of some who have moral authority behind them, as it relates to saying the Senate should adopt this amendment: The Church World Service; the Hebrew Immigrant Aids Society; the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service; the Mennonite Central Committee; NETWORK, a National Catholic Social Justice Lobby; the Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations; the United Methodist Church; the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops; and a whole host of organizations that are not religious in nature but clearly are advocates from all of the different sectors of society: For example, the Asian American Justice Center, the Asian and Pacific Islander American Health Forum, the Federation of Indo-American Seniors' Association of North America, the Friends Committee on National Legislation, the National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials, the National Council of La Raza, the National Korean American Service & Education Consortium, to mention a few. They all believe this Senate should be putting its votes where its values are, into the reunification of families.

Finally, I know there will be an attempt to offer what we call a side-by-side, something to try to produce a figleaf for those who don't want to be seen as casting a vote against family reunification, a vote against snuffing out the rights of U.S. citizens. And that figleaf actually would do absolutely nothing. What it would do is guarantee the underlying bill. It would guarantee that a U.S. citizen who obeyed the law, followed the rules, did everything right, had their family member waiting, it would guarantee that their right would be snuffed out. It would guarantee that they would go to the back of the line, a line in which there are people who didn't follow the law, obey the rules, violated the law, and they will be in the back of the line with them.

That amendment that is going to be offered clearly is a figleaf. It clearly is poorly constructed. It doesn't deal with the present realities of undermining that right of a U.S. citizen. It does nothing to preserve the right of those people who filed and who are now being snuffed out, being cut out in terms of the rights of those U.S. citizens because of the underlying bill.

There is only one way to make this right. There is only one way to preserve family reunification. There is only one way to preserve the rights of these individuals who wore the uniform of the United States, who were good enough to wear the uniform, serve their country, and should have the right, which this bill snuffs out, to claim family members. There is only one way of making sure we don't turn this into an abstract object of chain migration, but that we understand the core values of family; that we understand a child who turns 21 is no less a child you love dearly and want to be with and who doesn't stop being part of your nuclear family because they magically turned 21 and are now non-nuclear. That is what is at stake in this amendment.

I urge my colleagues to support the Menendez-Hagel, and others, amendment so that, in fact, we can still stay within the "grand bargain" but we can do what is right on family reunification.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. As we noted earlier, we are going to have a series of votes at 6:45. I wanted to address the amendment which has been offered by my friend, Senator SESSIONS from Alabama, which relates to the earned-income tax credit.

I see the Senator from Alabama has just arrived, so I will be glad to let him make his presentation and then respond. If that is what the Senator would like to do, I will withhold.

Mr. SESSIONS. I think I am ready, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1235

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I thank Senator KENNEDY for his courtesy, and I would just like to make some general comments about the earned-income tax credit and why I think this is important. I ask that I be notified in 20 minutes if I have gone that far.

The earned-income tax credit is one of the major—the major, in fact—transfer programs in the Federal Government. It is a payment of monies, in reality. It doesn't work the way it was intended, but in reality, it provides a substantial check every year to persons who are low-wage workers. It is for people who are trying to do well but are not making much money, so they give them a check to encourage work. I have felt for some time—and maybe I will talk with Senator KENNEDY one day about it, and we might reach an agreement on this—I think it would be much better if tax credit were paid along with your paycheck. It is designed to increase—it is allowed, under the EITC, but we don't do it that way. You file a return, and the next year, after you have completed your year's work, they send you a large check. On average, the recipient receives a benefit of almost $1,800 a year; that is, the people who qualify receive that amount. Again, the people who qualify are individuals who are working in lower wage jobs, which, in fact, are the types of jobs most of the 12 million illegal aliens are doing. They are working at low-wage jobs. Therefore, we can expect there will be a disproportionate number of persons who will qualify for this tax credit.

Now, the tax credit was designed to encourage Americans to work—American citizens. When it started in the 1970s under President Nixon, they thought there had to be some incentive so that you would get more money by working than by drawing welfare, or else you would just stay home and draw welfare. There still is a problem with that, in reality. But this bill was supposed to incentivize work, and that is why it was drafted the way it was and has continued to grow and become quite substantial. But, again, it was designed to take care of American citizens, our own people.

Now, we are into an immigration reform bill where we have 12 million people here who came into our country illegally. They are being considered for amnesty. They are going to be allowed to stay in this country and be given that right. Maybe some didn't want it or didn't expect it, but they will be given the right to stay here. But under present law, because they are not legally here, they are certainly not entitled to the earned-income tax credit. Unless they file fraudulent documents and receive it fraudulently, they don't get an earned-income tax credit.

So we say we are going to have a $1,000 fine that people must pay as part of a punishment for being in the country illegally, and it is not really amnesty because they pay a fine, but in reality, the fine can be paid on the installment plan, and only $200 has to be paid the first year when you apply for the Z visa. So under the bill, as I understand it—I think there is little dispute about it—as soon as this bill passes, everybody can come in and get a probationary legal status in America, and then before long, they are entitled to apply for and receive a Z visa that is good for 4 years. It can be renewed indefinitely. At some point, they can apply, if they so choose, for legal permanent residency.

What I want to tell my colleagues is that not only will we be providing amnesty to the persons who came into our country illegally for a $200 payment, we will be giving them—even for the temporary probationary status and the

Z visa, prior to legal permanent residency, the earned-income tax credit. I think that is quite a step. Indeed, you pay $200 for your fine, and you file your tax return next year and get a $1,800 check from Uncle Sam.

Don't be mistaken, the earned-income tax credit is for people who don't pay income tax. It is a gift from Uncle Sam. It is meant to encourage Americans to get out and work, not to encourage people to come into our country illegally to gain this benefit. So I just would say to my colleagues, this is an important principle.

According to the Congressional Budget Office—and they run the numbers on this—it is the largest single benefit program and cost of this bill in the first 10 years—not in the outyears; there are some big costs that aren't being calculated. But in the first 10 years, this is the largest direct single benefit.

Over the 2008 to 2017 period—

the Joint Tax Committee estimates that S.A. 1150 would increase outlays for refundable tax credits by about $13 billion, the largest direct spending effect of the legislation. Enacting 1150 would increase the amount of refundable tax credits mainly by increasing the number of resident aliens for income tax purposes.

In other words, it would increase the number of people eligible.

Resident aliens are taxed in the same manner as U.S. citizens and thus could qualify for the refundable tax credit.

They are taxed, but they are not going to be paying high taxes because many of them are lower income people, but they will get the tax credit.

So my amendment would reduce the bill's direct spending cost, the cost to the American taxpayer. Who pays the big check they get every year? Who pays the check they get every year? They are not paying it. It is the taxpayers, the American taxpayers. It is an additional reward on top of the amnesty that is provided. So my amendment would reduce the estimated cost of this legislation by nearly half, No. 1, and it is right, and it is fair.

Now, last year, my amendment—which I believed was justified, but this Congress didn't agree—said you would not receive the earned-income tax credit until you became a citizen. Why not? How is an illegal alien able to come here, not expecting the earned-income tax credit, and then be rewarded with it by our government? That never made sense to me.

But in this legislation—because I think it is important, and we can make a big difference here—in this legislation I have offered, it would simply say that during the time you have a probationary visa or a Z visa up until the time you become a legal permanent resident, you wouldn't get the earned-income tax credit. How much simpler is it than that?

I hope my colleagues will see that this is a perfectly logical amendment, and I would suggest it reflects on our mindset, our approach to this entire process, if we are not able to draw this kind of line as we go through passing—or attempting to pass—this historic piece of legislation. I really think we should give thought to that and ask ourselves what right does somebody who came into our country illegally, who has been here maybe for a number of years, expect to receive this benefit, where we say: OK, we are just going to give up; we are not going to make you go home; we will let you stay; you can have amnesty. By the way, you start receiving the earned-income tax credit of $2,000. How much sense does that make? I don't think that is good public policy. It raises questions about how serious we are about defining our immigration system in a way that works, that has bright lines, and carries out a logical policy. But I understand that people are determined to see that this goes forward.

Now, Senator REID has offered an amendment that is going to be a side-by-side. This amendment is very short, and basically all the amendment says is—I don't have it before me. Our majority leader, our Democratic majority leader, is offering an amendment that says: Well, we will comply with all the current laws of the IRS, and you don't get the earned-income tax credit if you are illegal. Well, of course. That means zero—nothing. I have to tell my colleagues, I am amazed at that amendment, unless I have missed something entirely, because that is what it is all about. They won't be illegal when they are given the probationary status or the Z visa status. They become legal and would get it. I was going to meet with some of the White House people to discuss this issue. I don't think they understood it that way, and I am not sure the President understood that this was actually going to happen under the legislation. But if this bill becomes law, they would get it.

So you say: Well, maybe they wouldn't get it. Well, if they don't get it, why wouldn't you vote for my amendment, which quite plainly assures that they don't get it? Follow me?

So I don't understand this cover amendment. It is not even a fig leaf, I say to my colleagues. I don't think you are going to be able to hide behind the Reid amendment because it is not going to do anything but guarantee that persons who are here and are given this amnesty will pay $200 and then they will get to draw nearly $2,000 a year under the earned-income tax credit.

The amendment being offered by Senator REID makes no sense to me. Maybe I missed something, but I don't think so. I would be delighted to hear what is in play. It is what you call a cover amendment. So what I say to my colleagues is, let's get realistic about what we are doing. Let's understand the cost this legislation is going to have. The Congressional Budget Office has found in their report—although it was written so that it is a little hard to find, but it is perfectly plain—the bill, over 10 years, will cost the American taxpayers $32 billion. A substantial chunk of that amount is the earned-income tax credit. They say the earned-income tax credit is for children. It is not for children, it is for American workers. You may get more if you have children, but it is not for children, it is for American workers.

I thank the Chair and reserve the remainder of my time on this issue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. OBAMA). Who yields time?

The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I see the Senator from Arizona on the Senate floor. I was going to respond at some time to the Senator from Alabama. I am glad to wait until the Senator from Arizona is finished.

AMENDMENT NO. 1150

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Massachusetts, since it is important that, prior to a meeting we have at 5:30, to speak to an amendment offered by Senator MENENDEZ.

I want to be clear that we have a side-by-side amendment that we will also be voting on, which I think goes to the heart of what Senator MENENDEZ is trying to get at here, but it does so in a way that will not upset the bipartisan consensus that has been worked out on the legislation.

I think the Menendez amendment has been discussed in the past. It is an amendment that would, in significant ways, change the basic agreement that has been made by some of the Senators. Therefore, it would be very problematic were it to pass. There is a budget point of order against the Menendez amendment, and that point of order will be raised. Because of the extra cost that would be imposed by additional immigrants being permitted to come into the country over time, in fact, I think there is more than one budget point of order because of those increased costs. The general proposition is that some have said the bill is not family friendly and that we need to do more for families. I want to try to dispel that, Mr. President.

We start out with the proposition that somewhere between 12 million and who knows how many million illegal immigrants who are in the United States, for the most part, are going to be able to stay. If everything that can be expected of them is accomplished, they have the ability to apply for a green card and eventually potentially become citizens of the United States of America. That is a tremendous benefit for people who came illegally.

One of the reasons some of us have been willing to accommodate that is people have come here with families or have created families here, and we do not want to disrupt those families.

Secondly, there are family visas that historically have been issued by the United States. This bill doesn't in any way affect the ability of any legal permanent resident or citizen to bring into the United States their spouse or minor children. That is the so-called nuclear family.

In addition, 40,000 parents per year can be brought into the United States, and there are extraordinarily liberal visitations for parents beyond that 40,000 number. We have said the so-called nonnuclear family—the extended family—in the future is going to compete the same as workers are going to compete, so that we can get in balance with some of our competitors in the global economy, where more of the visas are reserved for work purposes and fewer for family purposes. But in the meantime, some 4 million people, roughly, who have applied for a family visa—extended or nonnuclear family—are going to be allowed to immigrate to the United States, and instead of taking 30 or 40 years, in some cases, it is going to all happen within an 8-year period of time. That is extraordinarily helpful to families and family reunification.

Now, it is true, if somebody has come here illegally and their family is still outside the country, we don't permit that family to come. But the object, obviously, is to try to encourage that individual to go back with his family. That would be family reunification.

But the problem the Menendez amendment poses is, instead of allowing those people who have applied for visas for extended families who have a reasonable expectation to come to the United States, he would change the date that measures their eligibility in such a way as to allow a lot of people—thousands, hundreds of thousands, actually—to immigrate to the United States who, today, under current law, have no reasonable expectation they would ever make it to the United States. What we have tried to do is to be fair and say, if you have a reasonable expectation you will be permitted to immigrate to the United States, we will allow you to come in, and we will do it within a very short period of time—8 years, or perhaps less than that period of time, as opposed to the perhaps 20 or 30 years it may have otherwise taken. If you didn't have a reasonable expectation to get in, then you are not going to come.

The reason the date was drawn where it was in May 2005 is that represented a compromise. I believe the original date was March or July of 2004—the time when people who were in line but had no reasonable expectation—that their application was going to be processed and were notified by the U.S. Government. Basically, the Government said: For the time, we are not going to be processing these numbers anymore because the backlog is too long. The backlog numbers are truly astounding. There are people in Mexico, for example, who have no reasonable expectation of getting here. For example, if you are the brother or sister of a U.S. citizen, and if you are a Mexican national and you recently filed to become a legal permanent resident of the United States, you have an expected wait of about 80 years. So even if you are 21 years of age, at the time when you can expect to get here you would be 101 years of age. That is not a reasonable expectation you will be allowed into the United States.

I went to Senator MENENDEZ and said: I think you have a point because we have drawn an arbitrary deadline. Remember, the date at which they were told we were no longer going to be processing, temporarily, these applications was in 2004. But in order to be more liberal, we moved the date to May 2005. His argument was, there may be some people who still had an expectation because they filed last year, and maybe they had an expectation they could make it.

I said: You know, there may be some such people, so let's take a look at it and see if we can redo this so everybody who had a reasonable expectation they could get here will be allowed to be here, no matter when they applied—whether it was 2 years ago, last year, 2 months ago, or 10 or 12 years ago—if they had a reasonable expectation of getting in.

We have crafted an amendment that I offered to Senator MENENDEZ, but he preferred to go forward with his amendment. But the side-by-side that I will be proposing is an amendment that stretches the date out to 2027. It says: If you had a reasonable expectation, based upon your category of immigration, the country you are from, the lines that currently exist with that country, if you had a reasonable expectation within the next 20 years you could have made it into the United States, then you get to come in under a family visa. That is extraordinarily liberal—everybody who really had an expectation that they could make it. Like I said, if you are this Mexican national, and you are the brother of an American citizen, and you were 21 years of age when you applied, you would be over 100 years old today. That is not a reasonable expectation. So you would not be permitted to come into the United States. You never had a reasonable expectation that you could make it.

The effect of my amendment and the Menendez amendment is almost identical in terms of the number of people who would be allowed to come to the United States. There is only a 3,000 difference out of about 600,000 people. So we are not reducing the number of people. We are making it accurate as to who can actually come.

There is also a general notion that somehow we are being unfair to families. As Senator KENNEDY has frequently pointed out, after this legislation is passed, for a period of 8 years, the total family percentage coming into the United States will be 74 percent. And you add another 15 percent for humanitarian visas, and there is only 11 left for the employment visas. Today, 65 percent are family visas. In subsequent years, families will still be the majority of immigrants to the United States—51 percent. Then you add to that another 17 percent for asylum seekers and other humanitarian visas; 17 percent of the total is a very humane number for the United States. We can still be very proud of our tradition of allowing the poor, hungry, and downtrodden to come to this country, and we will still have a majority of family-based visas in this country.

Mr. GRAHAM. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. KYL. Yes.

Mr. GRAHAM. For those who are worried about this, on the issue of families, you should be worried about this. Is it not true that in this bill, in terms of family reunification, the way we have accomplished or dealt with the bill, families will be reunified decades earlier, and those who are waiting to join their families under this bill—those who have done it right—will be together no later than 8 years; is that correct?

Mr. KYL. That is exactly correct. Instead of waiting 20, 30 years, they will have to wait no longer than 8 years.

Mr. GRAHAM. So if you want to be the person who keeps families apart, bring this bill down. I assure families will not be reunified under the current system like they are here, that we will have a dramatic increase in green cards to get these families reunited. We go up to 74 percent. If you want to keep families apart, bring this bill down and let the current system survive.

Secondly, when it comes to families, there are 12 million people here illegally. Is it not true that their families, under this bill—if they will do the right thing—will never live in fear again?

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, to me, that is one of the main features of the bill. Today, we have people who are being exploited, people against whom crimes are being committed, but they are afraid to report it to the law enforcement authorities. They are not being paid adequate wages and their working conditions are poor. Frankly, they are being taken advantage of. As long as they are in this gray status, that will continue.

This bill offers them immediately an opportunity to begin a process by which they are playing by the rules and, as a result of that, they can have the freedom and the assurance of being protected by the laws of the United States.

Mr. GRAHAM. To my good friend from Arizona, I say this: If you are concerned about the 12 million people who are living in fear, subject to exploitation, then this is the best chance you will ever have in my political lifetime to fix it. If you want to bring this bill down, the one thing I can assure you is that the 12 million, or however many there may be, will not only live in fear, they are going to live in more fear because we have stirred up a hornets nest in this country.

I argue, if you care about people who have families not being afraid anymore, if they get themselves right with the law, help us pass this bill. In the future, after everybody has been accommodated who has a reasonable expectation, we are going to allow families to be part of the new immigration system.

Could the Senator tell me again, in the future, what percentage of visas will be given to families?

Mr. KYL. The answer I give the Senator is that family visas alone are 51 percent—a majority—and another 17 percent is humanitarian.

Mr. GRAHAM. Would the Senator acknowledge that is twice the family component of other nations with whom we are competing?

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, that is almost exactly right. I know in the case of—in fact, I will give you the exact number. In Canada, it is 24 percent. If we have 51 percent, obviously, that is close to twice that number. In Australia, it is 27 percent. And, again, if we are at 51 percent in the future, that is almost exactly twice. But remember, that is only after 8 years. For the next 8 years, it is 74 percent because of what the Senator from South Carolina was pointing out.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, the bottom line, I say to my good friend from Arizona, is we would have no bill without him. He stepped to the plate and said I am willing to look at the 12 million anew; I don't believe we are going to deport them, and I don't believe we are going to put them in jail; So I am going to give them a chance to identify themselves, come out of the shadows and do things that will make them valuable to our country and will be fair and humane.

We have accomplished that. We couldn't do it last year. We are going to reunite families who have been waiting for decades to get into this country. We are going to expedite family reunions in an 8-year period for some people because they would not live long enough to get back with their families.

In the future, we are going to have a new system. There is going to be a strong family component, but I make no apologies about this, in the future we are going to have immigration based on the global economy and merit. We need to start looking at where we are in the world and making sure people come into our country under a merit-based system. Neither one of my parents graduated high school. There is a way forward for the semiskilled and low-skilled workers to come into our country in the future. But the family component in the future will be spouses and minor children, freeing up thousands of green cards for merit-based employment. They are not going to bring in their adult children unless they have a way to get in on their own. They are not going to bring in their third cousin. Nobody else does that. They are going to come in as a nuclear family, and we are going to do it based on merit, and merit is not a degree.

Under this bill, if you come in with a strong back and a strong heart and a desire to get ahead, you get points for getting a GED, you get points for an apprenticeship, you get points for doing the things that make you a better person. So I reject completely the idea that the merit-based system excludes hard-working people.

I end with this one thought. If we don't get it right now and correct the flaws in our system which led to the 12 million which will make us globally noncompetitive, then who will? When will they do it? There are a million reasons to say no to something this hard, there are 12 million reasons to say yes, and there are many reasons in the future to say yes because our country cannot survive with a broken immigration system that makes us noncompetitive.

This is a national security issue. This is a global economic issue. Now is the time to understand we will never have a perfect bill but to do something that will be good for America.

I thank my good friend, JON KYL, and Senator KENNEDY for getting us this far.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I appreciate that from the Senator from South Carolina.

Let me make one final point. I know Senator KENNEDY wishes to speak.

It was not easy for some people to agree to allow at least 12 million immigrants who came to this country illegally to stay here and eventually become citizens. That was not easy. One of the bases upon which we were able to do that was to respond to an argument that had frequently been made: Why should we let all those people, is the way it is described, become U.S. citizens and then chain migrate all their family—their uncles, cousins, grandparents, and so on? The answer to that question is we probably shouldn't. So that was ended in this legislation. That is what was stopped. That is part of the agreement that was reached, the consensus that was reached.

The adoption of the Menendez amendment would undo that. You can imagine how someone like me feels. I have taken a lot of heat for agreeing that the people who are here illegally should stay here, but I knew one of the reasons that was more palatable was because we had at least stopped the chain migration that would occur for anybody subsequently in the future, after we cleared the backlog of people who already applied.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arizona yield?

Mr. KYL. Yes, I will be happy to yield. I was going to conclude and turn to Senator KENNEDY. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. MENENDEZ. One point. Remember how the Senator from Arizona said how all “those people” would be able to claim their families. The Menendez amendment has nothing to do with “those people.” The Menendez amendment has everything to do with U.S. citizens today who have a right under the law. So I hope we do not confuse both of those.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from New Jersey that what he said, as far as he said it, is, of course, exactly correct. What I was talking about was the tradeoff that existed between the accommodation to the 12 million people and—by the way, I don't use that phrase “those people.” I hope the Senator understands that I was referring to the criticism of those who say we shouldn't allow the illegal immigrants in the country, especially if we chain migrate their families. We ended the chain migration.

We had to draw a time when applicants would be able to apply and their applications would be considered. We had it at one point. We agreed to move that date to accommodate the people on the Democratic side of the aisle. The Menendez amendment would move it to January 1 of this year, bringing in, I think, a total of well over 800,000 people. That, obviously, would undo the rather delicate balance of agreements that was reached that deals with this subject.

Recognizing, however, we wanted to make sure anybody who had a reasonable expectation of being able to immigrate should be able to do so, we have prepared an amendment that would, in fact, allow anybody with a reasonable expectation to be able to immigrate here. We put the date way back to 2027, and we say that if you could have reasonably expected to get here by 2027, you are in and you are in within an 8-year period from now.

I think that is very fair. The person who is excluded under our proposal is the person who, as I said, is the sibling of a Mexican national who is a sibling of a U.S. citizen who might be 101 years old when he gets to the United States of America. That is not a reasonable expectation.

I think our approach is reasonable. It is consistent with the underlying agreement we reached. I regret to say—and I appreciate the Senator from New Jersey has every right to raise a budget point of order on the underlying bill—we fully expected there would be points of order at the conclusion presumably of the consideration of the bill and we would have to vote on those. Obviously, it is a 60-vote point of order. We expected to have 60 people who would support the legislation, and we believe that to be the case. But if the Senator wants to bring the bill down, as the Senator from South Carolina said, by raising an amendment such as that which has been proposed or at this time trying to conclude the budget point of order, I don't think that is the best way forward.

As the Senator from South Carolina said, we have one good chance to get legislation passed. I don't think we want to blow that chance. Now is our time. We were sent here to do difficult jobs. I hope, in the bipartisan spirit that has so far characterized our debate, we can move forward and continue to keep this bill as literally a beacon of hope for a lot of people who are counting on us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I know the Senator from Vermont is looking for some time to speak. I believe there is 30 minutes I have remaining; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 30 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. The Senator from Connecticut, Mr. LIEBERMAN, wants time. I yield 10 minutes to Senator LIEBERMAN. I will use probably 6 or 7 minutes. I will be more than glad to give 10 minutes to the Senator from Vermont if not, we will try and extend that if we can.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, if I might interrupt the Senator for a question. Would it be possible also to make sure Senator DOMENICI will be able to speak after the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. KENNEDY. I will take 5 minutes of the 30 minutes; Senator DOMENICI can have 5 minutes; 10 minutes to the Senator from Connecticut, Mr. LIEBERMAN; and 10 minutes to the Senator from Vermont, Mr. SANDERS. I think that takes up 30 minutes. I ask unanimous consent that another minute be given to each of us, 33 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1234

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I will be brief in response to the Sessions amendment. We are talking about the earned-income tax credit. That was developed in the 1970s. Why was the earned-income tax credit developed? Because of the increased number of children living in poverty.

We have, as this chart shows, in the United States more children who live in poverty than any other country in the world. This amendment would say to legal immigrants that you are not eligible for the earned-income tax credit that benefits children.

If we look at the report from the CRS, it shows that over 98 percent of the earned-income tax credit goes to families with children. That was its purpose, that is where it is focused, that was the reason for it, and this is the need.

Why in the world would we want to take benefits away from needy children? Who are the workers of the earned-income tax credit? Their average income is less than $20,000 a year. This is phased out at about $30,000 to $33,000 a year. This is the low-income individuals who are, what? Are they on welfare or are they out working? They are working. They have children. They are legal. Why take the benefits away from the children, the neediest children, most of whom are living in poverty?

We don't take the earned-income tax credit away from people who go to jail and commit murder. We don't take away the earned-income tax credit from people who have defrauded the Government. We don't take the earned tax credit away from burglars, child molesters, and the rest of the individuals who commit crimes. But this amendment wants to take it from one particular group and that is legal workers.

Who are those legal workers? They are trying to provide for their families, pay the penalties, show that they are working, and go to the end of the line. Many of these children are American children. They are not undocumented. They are American children because they were born here.

I find it difficult to understand, when we are talking about individuals who are working, who want to work, will work, are trying to make a better future for themselves and their families and particularly for their children, why they should be the only class of working people in the United States who ought to be penalized. That is what the Sessions amendment would do. That is wrong and it is not fair and it should not be accepted.

Mr. President, I yield the time as I have indicated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. President, I thank Senator KENNEDY for yielding me time.

As I think we all know, this is a long and complicated bill. An important part of this bill deals with illegal immigration—how do we make sure we stop the flow of illegal immigrants into this country; how do we finally begin to deal with employers who are knowingly hiring illegal immigrants; what do we do with 12 million people who are in this country who, in my view, we are not going to simply, in the middle of the night, throw out of this country. These are difficult and important issues.

On those issues I am in general agreement with the thrust of this legislation. But, Mr. President, I wish to tell you there are areas in this bill where I have strong disagreement, and one is the issue of legal immigration, what we are doing in terms of bringing people into this country who, in my view, will end up lowering wages for American workers right now.

Senator KENNEDY a moment ago made a very important point. He talked about the truth that in our country today we have the highest rate of child poverty of any major country on Earth. That is a national disgrace. But on top of that, we have the highest rate of poverty of any major country on Earth. In fact, since President Bush has been in office, 5 million more Americans have slipped into poverty.

Today, in our country, as many people know, the middle class is shrinking. Millions of American workers are working longer hours for lower wages. In my State of Vermont, it is not uncommon for people to work two jobs, even three jobs, to make enough income to pay their bills. According to a recent Pew-Brookings Institute study, men in their 30s earned, on average, 12 percent less in 2004 than their fathers did in 1974, after adjusting for inflation. In other words, in America, we are moving in the wrong direction. Our standard of living, in many ways, is going down. If we don't reverse trends, our kids will have a lower standard of living than we have.

Now, in the midst of all of that, we are finding many large corporations, both those who employ skilled workers—professional workers—and those who employ low-wage workers, that are coming to this body and are saying, my goodness, yes, we are outsourcing millions of decent-paying jobs; yes, we have opposed vigorously raising the minimum wage; yes, we have done everything we can to make sure workers can't form unions, but what we want to do now, because we love the American people so much and we are so concerned about the American worker, what we want to do now is bring millions of new workers into this country, both low-wage workers and professional workers.

The argument there is Americans don't want to do the work. They say: We can't find American workers to do the work. That is a crock, in many instances. It is not true. One of the groups that has come to Congress to tell us how much they are concerned about the need to find workers because they can't find Americans to do the jobs is our old friends at Wal-Mart.

As many Americans know, Wal-Mart pays low wages. They often hire people for 30 hours a week rather than 40 hours a week, and they provide minimal health care benefits. Yet Wal-Mart has come in and said: Well, we can't find the workers. Bring us in more low-wage workers.

Well, guess what. Two years ago, when Wal-Mart announced the opening of a new store in Oakland, CA, guess how many people showed up for that job in Oakland, CA, at a Wal-Mart. Eleven thousand people showed up—11,000 people showed up in Oakland—filled out applications for a job when only 400 jobs were available. Eleven thousand people for 400 jobs.

Wal-Mart says they need more low-wage workers coming in from around the world because they can't find workers. Well, that was a couple of years ago. So you might say: Well, that doesn't happen today. In January of 2006, when Wal-Mart announced the opening of a store in Evergreen Park, just outside of Chicago, in your home State, Mr. President, 24,500 people applied for 2,325 jobs. Yet Wal-Mart and their friends are coming in here saying we can't find Americans who want to work.

Let us be clear. Wal-Mart does not provide good wages, does not provide good benefits, does not provide good health care, yet we are finding many people who want to do that because people in this country are desperate, because people in this country want to work at almost any job.

Some of the people at the other end of the economic spectrum, the people who are hiring professionals, make the same argument. There are organizations out there, including companies such as Motorola, Dell, IBM, Microsoft, Intel, and Boeing, that say the same thing: We can't find professionals to do the jobs. I find it interesting that while these companies claim they can't find workers in the United States, some of these very same companies have recently announced major layoffs of thousands of American workers.

Let me repeat that. These companies are saying we desperately need to bring workers from other countries into America because we can't find people in the United States to do these skilled jobs. Yet, at the same time, they are laying off tens of thousands of American workers.

Let me give a few examples. A few days ago, the Los Angeles Times reported Dell would be eliminating 10 percent of its workforce, slashing 8,800 jobs. Dell is part of the group saying we need to bring more professionals into America. Meanwhile, as Dell has eliminated decent-paying jobs in the U.S., it applied for nearly 400 H-1B visas last year.

But Dell is not alone. On May 31, the Financial Times reported Motorola would be cutting 4,000 jobs on top of an earlier 3,500-job reduction designed to generate savings of some $400 million. This is nothing new. Motorola has cut jobs in this country year after year after year. But guess what, Motorola, part of a group saying they can't find American workers, recently received 760 H-1B visas. That was last year.

On May 30, Reuters reported IBM would be laying off more than 1,500 American workers, bringing total layoffs to that company of 3,700 last year. In April, CBS MarketWatch reported Citigroup announced it would be laying off 17,000 workers, yet Citigroup received over 330 H-1B visas.

Here is the point, and this is not a complicated point. Many of the largest corporations in this country are supporting this legislation. And you know why? It is not because they are staying up late at night worrying about some Mexican kid in Detroit or Chicago and what will be the future of that kid. They are not worrying about that. What they want to see is a continued influx into this country of cheap labor. They are not content with outsourcing millions of good-paying jobs. They are not content with fighting against working people who want to form unions. They are not content with their opposition, successful until recently, of keeping the minimum wage at $5.15 an hour for 10 years. That is not good enough. Now they are saying: Gee, we can't move Wal-Mart from America to China, we can't move hotels to China, we can't move restaurants to China, so what is the best way to continue keeping wages low for those workers?

When I was a kid, I worked in a hotel. I was a busboy. There is nothing wrong with that job. Millions of people do that job. I resent very much the fact that many of these large corporations are continuing their war against the middle class and against the American worker. I think it is high time the Senate begins to stand up for the American worker rather than the large multinational corporations who have so much sway over what we do in this body. I would hope before an immigration bill is passed, it will respect the rights of American workers, both low-wage workers and professional workers, and say that is our major responsibility, to make sure our kids—

Mr. SESSIONS. Will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 additional minute to yield to my friend.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. My question, I guess, Mr. President, would be something like this: Perhaps it could be true that the large number of job applications received by Wal-Mart facilities is because even though Wal-Mart does not pay great wages, they do have health care benefits and job security, as opposed to construction work. Would the Senator agree that if businesses raised wages at the construction sites, if they had jobs that had a more permanent status to them, and actually offered a retirement plan and health care benefits, they might get more people willing to work at the construction sites?

Mr. SANDERS. Reclaiming my time, Mr. President, the Senator makes an important point, and that is we have all been educated that economics is about supply and demand. If you don't get the workers you want, you raise wages and you raise benefits. You don't simply open the door and bring in other workers at low wages.

The Senator makes an important point.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I came to the floor tonight for a few moments to talk about the significance of the bill that is before us and the work that has been done by Senators and a couple of Cabinet members and great staff.

The American people have been telling us for many years that we are confronted with a problem that is apt to destroy our land, destroy our country, destroy our values, and that problem is that we have an inability to control our borders. We have illegal immigrants who come across our borders by the thousands who are, for the most part, interested in jobs. But after some of them get here and their jobs are procured, there are other things they bring with them or do here that make the American people very worried about our future.

I, for one, as a Senator of long standing, grow more worried every year as to whether we will ever be able to control our borders and thus control who comes in and who goes out so that we know who they are. We have heard the American people tell us this is our biggest responsibility; that if we don't secure our borders, something bad is going to happen to our country. We have heard them tell us of the horror stories that happen when some of these immigrants come here without authority, without the law on their side; they sneak in, in the dark of the night, or however they have been able to come, and then they form gangs. We have heard about how they have scared our people, hurt them, killed them, and how they fight amongst each other. Of course, I am not talking about all of them. I am saying the American people see this and say to us, can't you ever control our borders?

I want to say I think a terrific job has been done with this bill. It is not finished—there are a few more amendments that need to be considered and some time taken to review the final bill—but I believe the bipartisan group that wrote this bill under the leadership of Senator JON KYL on the Republican side and Senator TED KENNEDY on the other side, working with their best staff for months, and then both day and night for the last 2 months, have put together a piece of legislation that shows how you can work out practical differences if in fact your goal is significant and you forget about politics, you forget about party, and you begin to write a law you can be proud of.

I think we are close to that. I don't think you get there very often. Rarely do you get the opportunity to be part of such a law as a Senator. So for those who are going to vote against this bill, tonight they are saying to themselves, I think I am going to vote against it, I ask you and urge you to think of when you are going to be given an opportunity to vote on a bill, a piece of legislation that is more important than this. If we don't do it now, with your vote, when will we do it?

If for some reason this bill fails, those who cause it to fail have to ask themselves, when will we get a bill we can rely on, that we can trust, which is put together by good, practical people who resolved issues in a practical manner by working on the issues that are now confronting us, which are that our borders are wide open and we have no control over what is happening.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 additional minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. I am certain if, after we pass legislation such as this, we provide the resources that are needed—and that is very important, and I think we are providing a means and a manner for resources to go to the border in this bill—and, secondly, if we annually make sure the resources and manpower are there to implement this law—because it will require much by way of manpower, much by way of technology—if we give this law that, we will return to say this was a historic event. Indeed, we will have done something good for America and good for our children. Something good for the families of existing immigrants, good for immigrants who are coming in the future and their families, who will also be permitted. We will also look for merit in those who are coming to help America, which is competing in a very difficult world.

I am very proud to be on the side of those who are trying to maintain the measure intact, or practically intact, because you can't do much better than was done by this hard-working bipartisan group. The more you try to change it, the more you risk losing it. When you end up thinking what did you lose it for, you end up really wondering whether you did right for your country.

I urge that we move as fast as we can, giving Senators an opportunity, those who need it, and, yes, saying we are going to pass it soon—I don't know about tomorrow or the next day but certainly send to our leader a message that if you will give us an opportunity to call up a few more amendments, it will get accomplished.

I look forward to more debate, more amendments.

Mr. MENENDEZ addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? Who yields to the Senator? If no Senator yields time, then the time will be divided equally between both sides.

The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. MENENDEZ. I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that it be equally charged.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. DOLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Ms. CANTWELL). Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1345

Mrs. DOLE. Madam President, I ask that at the conclusion of the consented time and the stacked votes, I be recognized to call up my amendment No. 1345 and that after 2 minutes of consideration, the amendment be laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Who yields time to the Senator? At this time, the Senator from Alabama controls 17 minutes and the Senator from Texas 12.

Mr. SESSIONS. Is there any other time left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is not at this time.

Mr. SESSIONS. I will be pleased to yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized.

Mrs. DOLE. Madam President, I am very concerned that amendments to this bill are being limited because there are many issues that deserve attention in this debate. For instance, in my home State of North Carolina, we have had a number of fatal automobile accidents caused by an intoxicated person who was in the United States illegally. Sadly, just yesterday morning on Interstate 40 near Raleigh, a man was killed on his way to work when his vehicle was struck by an SUV barreling across the median. The SUV driver, according to initial news reports, is an illegal alien, who now faces a number of criminal charges, including DWI.

In several of these incidents, the illegal alien driver has a record of DWI, sometimes repeated offenses, but has been caught and released. Just this past March, in Johnston County, NC, a 9-year-old boy and his father lost their lives in an accident caused by an intoxicated driver who had been convicted twice of drunken driving and had an outstanding warrant stemming from a probation violation—and he was in the United States illegally. Another tragic case was the death of Scott Gardner, a Gaston County school teacher, who was killed in 2005 by a drunk driver—a driver who was an illegal alien with five previous DWI charges. I want to thank my colleague RICHARD BURR who introduced the Scott Gardner Act to deal with this serious issue, and on the House side, my good friend SUE MYRICK has been a true leader on this front.

I hear from many North Carolinians who ask me what is Washington doing to stop this from happening. When are we going to take action to make our communities safer.

Such senseless tragedies are not unique to North Carolina. Automobile accidents caused by intoxicated illegal aliens are occurring around the Nation—too often killing innocent people who are just going about their daily lives, or leaving the victims with crippling, disabling injuries.

It is a privilege, not a right, for an immigrant to receive legal status to live in the United States of America. My amendment would ensure that this privilege is not granted to an illegal alien with a DWI conviction.

No question, our DWI laws should be vigorously enforced, regardless of the offender's immigration or citizenship status.

My amendment addresses an all too prevalent problem and should be considered. There are a number of other amendments that deserve a place in this debate. The bill we are considering would have enormous ramifications for nearly every American, as well as those who want to work in this country or become American citizens. We must do our due diligence and not rush this bill through. The majority in this body must not stifle the voice of the minority Members. More amendments must be considered.

I yield back my remaining time to Senator SESSIONS, the Republican manager.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank Senator DOLE for her insight, sharing that important information, and for offering an amendment and demonstrating once again that good amendments dealing with very important issues are not being allowed to be considered. This is not a free and open debate. This is not a free opportunity to amend. The majority leader is controlling his machinery, the train is moving down the track, and very few amendments are being approved.

I have offered and filed quite a number. I have only gotten two amendments, and I said at the beginning that only one would be voted on. We are having the first vote on one I have offered.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent—I see my colleague, Senator KENNEDY, here—I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be set aside and I be allowed to call up amendment No. 1253.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. LIEBERMAN. On behalf of Senator KENNEDY, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam President, we have quite a number of other amendments. That is what we are going to hear when we offer any of them because we now have a cloture motion filed. If cloture is obtained and you don't have an amendment pending, you can't get a vote on it. We know what the game is, and it is not a free, open debate on one of the most important bills in the time that I have been in the Senate that we are considering today.

I would like to share a few more thoughts. Maybe I will have a few minutes left for Senator LIEBERMAN. I know he wants more time than he has gotten so far. Senator KENNEDY is maneuvering for me to give him some of my time and maybe I will be able to do that.

The earned-income tax credit will not be taken away from people who are illegally in the country today if my amendment is passed. The earned-income tax credit is a credit given to working individuals who have lower incomes to encourage people to work. That is what it is all about. It is for Americans and people legally here.

So what I propose is that we do not provide this, on average, almost $2,000-per-year paycheck from the U.S. Government, to people who came into the country illegally and were given this probationary card status through their Z card status.

I am not offering an amendment to take the earned-income tax credit away after they become legal permanent residents. So if they become a legal permanent resident, they would be entitled to have the earned-income tax credit.

Last year I offered an amendment that said that you would not get the earned-income tax credit until you became an actual citizen. That was voted down. Why? I still am not sure. I still don't think that was a good vote. But at least we ought not to give this credit to someone who was here illegally a few days ago, and now we give them some sort of probationary status and they immediately start getting paychecks from the Federal Government.

I don't think that is what this system is about. People would be given a great thing. They would be given amnesty, they would be able to stay in the country legally, continue to work, and any family gets to stay with them. All of this is in this piece of legislation.

A lot of people think that is too generous, but that is what this legislation does. The next question is: What else do they obtain by virtue of having this legal status bestowed on them when they were illegal? They are not receiving the earned-income tax credit now. It is not something that is being taken away from them. It is a question of when are we going to bestow that additional benefit on people who were in our country illegally and how much of an incentive does this payment to them create for other people who want to come into our country illegally?

That is some of the confusion we have. In my view, the first thing you do to reduce the flow of illegal immigration into the country is to quit rewarding it by Federal largesse. That is the first thing. If you cannot go out and arrest everybody—and that is not practical—and we are not going to do these other things, at least don't give people extra financial benefits as a reward to coming into our country illegally.

I am very concerned about that. I think that it is not a little bitty matter because the—Madam President, I would ask that I be notified when there is 5 minutes remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will be notified.

Mr. SESSIONS. So what I would say to my colleagues is, this is going to cost a lot of money. You do not have to be trained in economics to understand that money comes from somebody. Who does the money come from? It comes from American workers and taxpayers, many of whom are having their wages depressed as a result of this huge flow of illegal labor. They are being asked to pay an earned-income tax credit check of $1,800, on average, to individuals who were illegal a few months before and possibly still have not completed the full background check. They still may not have completed the process to go to even a Z visa. Then they may be in a Z visa status for some time.

I know it is said it is not amnesty because they have to pay a fine. How much is the fine? $1,000. They pay a $1,000 fine. Well, they do not actually pay a $1,000 fine. When they get this probationary status visa, they only pay $200. They pay the rest of it on an installment. Nobody has stated and set out how they are going to pay it. Presumably, they can pay it for 8 years or more.

So a person here illegally under the legislation that is now before us, that person would obtain legal status in the country, be able to work, and would then be entitled to receive an earned-income tax credit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. SESSIONS. So they would receive that earned-income tax credit, which would be, on average, almost $2,000, and they would pay only $200. Now, that is a pretty good deal, if you can get it, it seems to me. It is not necessary. It is not necessary as a matter of law, and it is not necessary as a matter of morality. It is certainly contrary to sound principles of Government. We should not do that.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment. It is an amendment that would impact our Treasury by perhaps, according to the Congressional Budget Office, $10 billion in the next 10 years—$10 billion. So it is quite a sizable chunk.

Madam President, I see my friend, Senator LIEBERMAN is here. I yield the remainder of the time I have left to him. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 3½ minutes.

The Senator from Connecticut.

AMENDMENT NO. 1191

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I thank my friend, Senator SESSIONS. I appreciate his kind gesture. That brings me back within 30 seconds of what I originally had. I appreciate that.

I am going to speak on amendment No. 1191, which is set down for a vote this evening. This is an amendment that would improve our Nation's treatment of asylum seekers, that is, people who come to our shores seeking refuge from persecution they have suffered in their home countries based on race, religion, nationality or political conviction.

As far as I know, this is the only amendment on the treatment of those seeking asylum that will be considered as part of this comprehensive immigration legislation. I offer this amendment because the Congressionally chartered Commission on International Religious Freedom has told us that our country, our Government, is failing in its historic duty to those "longing to breathe free" from the Statue of Liberty.

I believe, as the Commission outlined, we can address this serious challenge at very little expense, with no adverse affect on our Nation's security, and without impairing immigration enforcement operations. It is the right thing to do. It is consistent with our best values in our history. In fact, as you know, our Founding Fathers understood the Nation's role to be not just a haven for those seeking freedom but a haven for those seeking freedom from persecution.

Thomas Jefferson once likened the United States to a "New Canaan," the Biblical Canaan in mind, where victims of persecution, and I am quoting here, "will be received as brothers and secured against like oppressions by a participation in the right of self-government."

That is exactly what America has become. To the great benefit of this country, some of the greatest Americans in our history came here as refugees seeking asylum from persecution. Nobel Laureates Albert Einstein and Thomas Mann became neighbors in Princeton, NJ. Henry Kissinger and Madeline Albright came with their families to the United States, fleeing from the Nazis and Communists, respectively, and went on, of course, to become Secretaries of State.

If I might, on a point of personal privilege say, most special to me, on a day in 1949, then a child, my wife, Hadassah Freilich Lieberman, came here with her parents seeking asylum from Communist Czechoslovakia. This national duty to those fleeing persecution is emblazoned in a particular stanza on the Statue of Liberty that says:

Here at our sea-washed, sunset gates shall stand
A mighty woman with a torch, whose flame is the imprisoned lightning,
And her name . . . Mother of Exiles.

Yet despite that lofty sentiment, too often today we are apparently turning asylum seekers away without the proper hearings guaranteed them by law, or confining them in prison conditions alongside convicted criminals while their cases are pending. That is what the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom has reported to Congress. This group was established, I am proud to say, in 1998, pursuant to legislation I introduced along with then-Senator Nickles and still, fortunately, Senator SPECTER.

It was aimed at strengthening our Government advocacy on behalf of individuals around the world who were being persecuted for their faith. Congress in the year that we established the Commission on International Religious Freedom also expressed its concern that recently enacted expedited removal procedures might be causing our own Government to mistreat victims of oppression, religious oppression, who came to the United States seeking asylum.

To find out if this was happening, Congress directed the newly established Commission to study the treatment of asylum seekers. The Commission conducted a comprehensive investigation and released a report in February of 2005 that was quite critical of the procedures of the Department of Homeland Security.

The report's recommendations were reasonable and straightforward. Unfortunately, 2 years passed. I persistently asked officials at the Department of Homeland Security when it would respond to the report and was always told the same: The recommendations are under review.

It appeared that little or nothing was being done. In fact, this February, 2007, the Religious Freedom Commission itself issued a blistering report 2 years after its initial report in which it gave out grades. The Customs and Border Patrol Agency received an F with respect to its treatment of asylum seekers. The Immigration and Customs Enforcement Agency received mostly Fs, and an overall grade of D. The Department of Homeland Security itself generally received an overall grade of D as well in its treatment of those claiming to be coming to America to seek asylum from persecution—religious, racial, nationality or based on political conviction.

That is unacceptable. Remember it was Congress that originally expressed concern about the treatment of asylum seekers. It was Congress that directed the Commission it had created to study whether there is a problem, was a problem, and now, in this Congress, as part of this comprehensive immigration reform bill, it must be Congress that will fix the problems the Commission has found.

That is why I introduced separate legislation earlier this year and then filed this amendment. I am pleased to say it appears I have come to some agreement with the Department of Homeland Security on a modified version of the amendment which I hope will be broadly supported by my colleagues.

It implements the recommendations of the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom and will improve our treatment of those who come to our shores claiming they seek asylum from persecution.

We have made a number of changes to address the concerns the Department of Homeland Security brought to us. I am pleased to describe them briefly.

The Commission on Religious Freedom found that too often the Department of Homeland Security was returning asylum seekers to countries where they were persecuted without giving them a chance to adequately make their case that they had a credible basis for their claims of persecution. Often employees of the Department of Homeland Security were failing to even ask these asylum seekers if they feared persecution, as required by Department procedures, before they were removed. This amendment would require what might be called simple quality assurance procedures so that the Department of Homeland Security can ensure its practices comply with its policies.

Secondly, virtually all the defense facilities the Department of Homeland Security uses are run as maximum security prisons, and in many cases those seeking asylum in this country, because they claim to be fleeing countries that were persecuting them, those detainees are forced to share cells with convicted criminals in maximum security prisons, sometimes in county jails. This is not appropriate for asylum seekers and other detainees who are not criminals and are not being criminally prosecuted. This amendment would require better Department of Homeland Security standards for those detention facilities to make them more consistent with our best values and the words that are emblazoned on the Statue of Liberty. This amendment would also encourage the development of more appropriate facilities for asylum seekers and families with children. These would be modeled after two secure but less restrictive facilities that the Department of Homeland Security already operates, one in Florida and the other in Pennsylvania.

The amendment will also encourage the expansion of secure alternatives to detention such as supervised release programs. Congress has already funded programs of this kind, and they have been successful. The amendment ensures the Department of Homeland Security will conduct vigorous oversight of the detention facilities it uses so the facilities, in fact, are complying with Department standards.

It is time we put in place and enforce safeguards to ensure people fleeing persecution are treated humanely and in accordance not just with our Nation's laws but with our best values.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

SEC. 109. SECURE ALTERNATIVES PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall establish a secure alternatives program under which an alien who has been detained may be released under enhanced supervision to prevent the alien from absconding and to ensure that the alien makes appearances related to such detention.

(b) PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) NATIONWIDE IMPLEMENTATION.—The Secretary shall facilitate the development of the secure alternatives program on a nationwide basis, as a continuation of existing pilot programs such as the Intensive Supervision Appearance Program developed by the Department.

(2) UTILIZATION OF ALTERNATIVES.—In facilitating the development of the secure alternatives program, the Secretary shall have discretion to utilize a continuum of alternatives to a supervision of the alien, including placement of the alien with an individual or organizational sponsor, or in a supervised group home.

(3) ALIENS ELIGIBLE FOR SECURE ALTERNATIVES PROGRAM.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Aliens who would otherwise be subject to detention based on a consideration of the release criteria in section 236(b)(2), or who are released pursuant to section 236(c)(2), shall be considered for the secure alternatives program.

(B) DESIGN OF PROGRAMS.—In developing the secure alternatives program, the Secretary shall take into account the extent to which the program includes only those alternatives to detention that reasonably and reliably ensure—

(i) the alien's continued presence at all future immigration proceedings;

(ii) the alien's compliance with any future order or removal; and

(iii) the public safety or national security.

(C) CONTINUED EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall evaluate regularly the effectiveness of the program, including the effectiveness of the particular alternatives to detention used under the program, and make such modifications as the Secretary deems necessary to improve the program's effectiveness or to deter abuse.

(4) CONTRACTS AND OTHER CONSIDERATIONS.—The Secretary may enter into contracts with qualified nongovernmental entities to implement the secure alternatives program and, in designing such program, shall consult with relevant experts and consider programs that have proven successful in the past.

(C) detainees with special needs, including those who have experienced trauma or torture, have ready access to services and treatment addressing their needs;

(D) detainees have frequent access to programs and recreation;

(E) detainees are permitted contact visits with legal representatives and family members; and

(F) special facilities are provided to families with children.

(c) FACILITIES FOR FAMILIES WITH CHILDREN.—In any case in which release or secure alternatives programs are not a practicable option, the Secretary shall, to the extent practicable, ensure that special detention facilities for the purposes of long-term detention where detainees are held longer than 72 hours are specifically designed to house parents with their minor children, including ensuring that—

(1) procedures and conditions of detention are appropriate for families with minor children; and

(2) living and sleeping quarters for children under 14 years of age are not physically separated from at least 1 of the child's parents.

(d) PLACEMENT IN NONPUNITIVE FACILITIES.—Among the factors to be considered with respect to placing a detainee in a less restrictive facility is whether the detainee is—

(1) part of a family with minor children;

(2) a victim of persecution, torture, trafficking, or domestic violence; or

(3) a nonviolent, noncriminal detainee.

(e) PROCEDURES AND STANDARDS.—Where necessary, the Secretary shall promulgate new standards, or modify existing detention standards, to promote the development of less restrictive detention facilities.

(f) NO PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to create any right, benefit, trust, or responsibility, whether substantive or procedural, enforceable in law or equity by a party against the United States, its departments, agencies, instrumentalities, entities, officers, employees, or agents, or any person, nor does this section create any right of review in any administrative, judicial, or other proceeding.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, it is my understanding that based on the agreement we have reached after negotiation with the Department of Homeland Security, the Senate is prepared to agree to the amendment. I ask unanimous consent that occur.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, the amendment, as modified, is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1191), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote and to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. This will mean the amendment now listed as No. 6 of those to be voted upon would no longer have to be voted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas has the remainder of the time.

AMENDMENT NO. 1250

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I rise to speak in favor of my earlier amendment which would take the blinders off law enforcement personnel when it comes to investigating fraud and other wrongful and even criminal conduct on the part of those who are claiming an advantage under this legislation, as well as third parties who might be implicated in fraud or other criminality.

I would first like to respond to Senator KENNEDY's comments, and then I want to speak to the Menendez amendment briefly. Senator KENNEDY earlier claimed my amendment eliminated all kinds of protections of confidentiality. He said he provided a level of protection of confidentiality for individuals so it will encourage them to come forward and file their applications for Z visas, and he is worried if we allow law enforcement access to that information to investigate third party fraud or other criminality, the applicants for the Z visas will not be willing to come forward.

It should be noted that my amendment does not eliminate all protections. It simply ensures law enforcement has access to information for those who cannot qualify for Z status under the terms of the underlying bill, including those who are criminals and absconders who have reflected their prior disregard for our laws. Also, despite Senator KENNEDY's claim, their proposal still protects information for aliens who have committed crimes but have not been convicted and are denied Z status. My amendment would make that information available to law enforcement personnel in the discharge of their official duties.

Furthermore, the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts acknowledges there was fraud in sworn affidavits and claims.

He said he is now alluding to the 1986 fraud under the agricultural amnesty bill that I mentioned in my earlier remarks and which were the subject of a New York Times article dated November 12, 1989. He said we took action in this legislation to fix it.

First, let me express my appreciation to the Senator for acknowledging that the third party affidavits that were used to qualify for benefits in 1986 were a large source of fraud.

I see nothing in the bill that would ensure that fraudulent sworn affidavits, especially those provided by third parties, are accessible to law enforcement to prosecute the fraud.

This type of fraud remains protected and thus we haven't come very far from the problems we encountered in the 1986 amnesty.

Senator KENNEDY says we must guarantee confidentiality.

He said:

If we expect individuals to participate in that system, we have to guarantee their confidentiality. It's enormously important. This system isn't going to function and work unless we do.

What my esteemed colleague is essentially saying is, we need to protect those who have violated our laws, even committed felonies and other crimes for which they have not yet been convicted, because they would not come out of the shadows and register.

The point is, it is more than just coming out of the shadows. It is giving legal status to a person who has arguably violated our laws and put them on a path to citizenship, denying law enforcement the opportunity to investigate and to prosecute where appropriate.

Further, we are essentially binding the hands of law enforcement because even if they wanted to prosecute these individuals and remove them from the country, they couldn't get the evidence needed to make the case, nor could they remove the person because by merely applying for Z status, they get the protection from removal.

Is that really what we want to say to our country about who should be permitted to remain in the United States? I think not. Nothing in my amendment would affect the ability of those who have entered the country in violation of our immigration laws or who have simply overstayed their visa or even those who have produced false documents in order to gain access to work. My amendment would not even address any of those individuals. This present amendment would not do that.

But, surely, we want to remove the cloak of confidentiality, the blinders, from our law enforcement personnel that would allow them to investigate cases of fraud, wrongful conduct, and other criminality.

I remain flabbergasted that the proponents of this bill would embrace this sort of provision. I would think what they would want to do is restore public confidence that we are actually reestablishing the rule of law when it comes to this broken immigration system. If anything, this serves to confirm the worst fears of skeptics about this bill because, frankly, it does nothing but confirm their worst fears that this is a vehicle for perpetuating the same sort of mistakes we encountered in the 1986 legislation, but apparently those lessons were not learned.

AMENDMENT NO. 1194

I want to speak briefly about the amendment offered by Senator MENENDEZ while he is on the Senate floor regarding those who want to immigrate to our country, but particularly those who have respected our laws and who have waited patiently in line.

I am particularly troubled by the situation that his amendment is designed to remedy because the proponents of the underlying bill have said: We are not going to allow any line jumping. We are going to provide an opportunity for those who have violated the law to get right with the law, but we are not going to do so to the detriment of people who have followed the rules and waited patiently in line, expecting that their application for a visa or legal permanent residency would be acted on. As I said before the recess, this is a very important principle to me. It is a matter of fundamental fairness and crucial to the integrity of not only our immigration system but our entire legal system. It would be extremely unfair to allow someone who has not respected our laws to be able to obtain a green card before someone who has respected our laws and waited in line for a chance to enter the country legally.

I am not talking about the claim that those who wait in line legally have to do it in their home country while someone who is here illegally and obtains a Z card can wait in country. That certainly is an issue. Those who are here illegally are getting the advantage over and above those who have made the decision to obey our laws waiting patiently outside the country. Even Secretary Chertoff, a key negotiator of the compromise, admits in a USA Today article that there is a "fundamental unfairness" anytime illegal immigrants are permitted to stay in country, while those who have respected our laws wait patiently outside of the country. I am afraid we make what even Secretary Chertoff admits is a "fundamental unfairness" that much more unfair in the underlying bill. To their credit, proponents of this compromise have stated that the proposal would not allow anyone who came here illegally to obtain their green card until everyone who chose to follow the law gets their green card. That is a laudable goal, and that should be our goal. But to achieve this goal, the compromise arbitrarily sets the cutoff date for legally "being in line" at May 1, 2005, while setting the date for the end of the line for those illegally here at January 1, 2007.

As an illustration, this means someone who chose to respect our immigration laws, chose not to enter illegally, and filed the proper immigration paperwork on June 1, 2005, is not considered to be "in line" under the terms of this bill, while someone who decided not to respect the laws and enter illegally on the same date can obtain a Z status and ultimately secure American citizenship.

My staff has met with a number of groups who have focused on this particular problem. I know Senator MENENDEZ has been listening to their same concerns. The Asian American Justice Center in particular has made compelling arguments that declaring the end of the line for legal immigration as May 1, 2005, is unfair. Other groups, including the Interfaith Immigration Coalition, the Jewish Council for Public Affairs, the U.S. Conference of Bishops, the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund have written to my office to explain that those people who played by the rules and applied after May 1, 2005, will not be cleared as part of the family backlog pursuant to the terms of the bill and will lose their chance to immigrate under current rules and be placed in line behind Z visa applicants. Some of these groups report that more than 800,000 people who have patiently waited in line will in essence be kicked out of the line.

I understand the Menendez amendment will be voted on soon. It addresses an important issue, ensuring that those who decided to abide by the laws will not be disadvantaged simply because they chose not to come here illegally.

As I said, I have been struggling with this over the past couple weeks because this is a matter of fundamental fairness. So I continue to consider this amendment. I know others are likewise considering it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 1250

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will now be 2 minutes equally divided on amendment No. 1250.

Who yields time?

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I understand we have 2 minutes equally divided before the vote.

Simply stated for my colleagues, my amendment would remove the blinders that would prevent law enforcement from investigating and prosecuting wrongful conduct, including fraud and criminality.

I would think if there is one thing we learned from the 1986 amnesty, this type of confidentiality provision, if it protects any information to be gleaned from the applications of those who have actually been denied Z visas, it would be that we should pursue and support this kind of amendment which would help law enforcement and, even more importantly, help restore public confidence that we are not playing games with them but that we are actually serious about restoring the rule of law when it comes to our broken immigration system.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, the Cornyn amendment attacks the whole issue of confidentiality for these undocumented aliens. If the Cornyn amendment is adopted, there are no individuals who are going to register for any of these programs—none—because all their information will be available.

This is a report-to-deport amendment. How are you going to convince individuals to come in and register for the Z visa program or any of the programs if they know all of their information is going to go to the Immigration Service and every other agency?

With regard to criminality, with regard to terrorism, with regard to all the fraud and all the abuse, we have put in here careful protections. Those kinds of protections are supported by JON KYL, by other Republican Members, and by all of us here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. KENNEDY. If you accept the Cornyn amendment, it effectively undermines all confidentiality.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I appreciate everyone allowing me to say a few words before the vote starts. We have six votes that will take place. Any minute, the votes will start. We worked out an agreement—tentative in nature, but I think it is fairly firm—we will have six more votes tonight. I want to alert Members we will have more votes tonight. It could be a late night, for sure.

When that is all completed, we will have had—I do not know the exact number—35 votes, or something like that, and it is evenly divided between Democrats and Republicans. There is one vote difference as to who offered the amendment. But I think we have made a lot of progress.

I hope people feel they are having an opportunity to have their voices heard in this regard. Within a short few votes, we will certainly have had more votes than we had last year. I am not sure that is a good guide for anything, but that is at least what we will be able to show everyone. I hope people would be able to see that the end is in sight.

Remember, if cloture is invoked on this matter, we will have 30 hours more of amendments. As I have indicated to my friend, the distinguished junior Senator from Arizona and others, upon being asked the question whether all these postcloture votes would take place, the answer is, we are not going to be blocking any people from voting on germane amendments.

I hope everyone understands it will be a late night tonight, and we will start early in the morning.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the Cornyn amendment No. 1250.

The amendment (No. 1250) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1331

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will now be 2 minutes evenly divided on the Reid amendment, No. 1331.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the earned-income tax credit is an important program that benefits low-income workers with children who are legally working in this country. Those working illegally in this country are ineligible for the earned-income tax credit.

This amendment makes it perfectly clear that nothing in the bill changes the prohibition of an illegal alien's access to the earned-income tax credit. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, this is not a cover vote. It is not a cover vote at all. It leaves the bill exactly as it was. The problem with the legislation is that those people who are today illegal and would be made legal through the probationary status visa or the Z visa would be entitled to receive the earned-income tax credit, which is, on average, nearly $1,800 per recipient. That earned-income tax credit is a direct payment from the taxpayers of America.

This amendment—unlike the vote you cast last year when I raised it—would allow the earned-income tax credit when you get a green card but not when you are on a Z visa or probationary visa. So this is less far-reaching than the amendment I offered last year.

I urge that this amendment not be accepted.

NOT VOTING—2

Dodd Johnson

The amendment (No. 1331) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1234

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is now 2 minutes equally divided before the vote on the Sessions amendment No. 1234.

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, who is eligible for the earned-income tax credit? Legal workers. They work. Who are the beneficiaries of the earned-income tax credit? Ninety-eight percent of it goes to poor children. What country in the world has the greatest percent of poor children? The United States of America. Ninety-eight percent of the benefits of the earned tax credit go to poor children, and many of them are American children.

In the history of the Internal Revenue Code, we have never excluded a class. We have treated everyone equally. The Sessions amendment for the first time in the history of the United States of America is going to say: Workers who are here legally are going to be denied the earned-income tax credit that can benefit their children who are looking for a better future.

I hope the Sessions amendment will be defeated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, the earned-income tax credit was designed and has been in effect as a support for American workers. That is what it is. Four million people who do not have children receive it.

This amendment says those people who are here illegally today who are made legal under this bill through the Z visa or the probationary status who have not yet obtained legal permanent residence would not get this benefit. The people are supposed to pay a fine, $1,000. They only have to pay $200. They pay that $200 fine, sign up, and they get a $2,000 earned-income tax credit, which is basically a check from the United States Government.

The people who are here illegally would be, under this bill, made legal, be allowed to work. They are not receiving earned-income tax credit today. There is no moral, legal, or principled reason to give them that in the future until they become a legal permanent resident.

NOT VOTING—2

Dodd Johnson

The amendment (No. 1234) was agreed to.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. SESSIONS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1194

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is now 2 minutes evenly divided before the vote on the Menendez amendment, No. 1194.

The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, under the bill before us, U.S. citizens have less rights than an undocumented alien. The base bill says, you break the law, you get benefits up to January 1, 2007. You follow the rule of law, and your right as an American citizen to claim your family, for which you have already submitted a petition, is extinguished as of May 1, 2005. That is fundamentally wrong.

How do we promote the rule of law when we say to a U.S. citizen, who has already applied for their family member waiting abroad, paid their fees, the government has collected them, their application has been approved, they followed the rules and obeyed the law, that they have an inferior right—an inferior right—to someone who did not follow the rules and crossed the border and who will ultimately receive a benefit superior to that of a U.S. citizen who is claiming their family?

Why do we tell the family of the U.S. citizen to go to the back of the line behind people who violated the law? This is a vote about family values and family reunification. This is a vote about the rule of law. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, first of all, this is an amendment that would enable people to enter the United States and become immigrants, green card holders, and eventually citizens, who, under the current law, have no expectation of ever getting those rights because they are in categories or are from countries in which the waiting line is so long that they would never, ever be able, under existing law, to become a U.S. citizen.

In addition, because it would allow several hundred thousand immigrants to come into this country who would not otherwise be legal under existing law, there are three budget points of order, and, therefore, at the conclusion of these remarks, I will be making a budget point of order. I hope my colleagues agree that we should not waive the budget under these circumstances.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I make a point of order that the pending amendment, No. 1194, to S. 1348, violates section 201, the pay-as-you-go point of order of S. Con. Res. 21, the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2008.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, I regret that we have started down this road. I move to waive section 201 of the concurrent resolution for purposes of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, could we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I appreciate not waiving the budget in this last point of order. I will confess to you, I think that Senator MENENDEZ had a point in saying we should only allow people who had a reasonable expectation to be immigrants, and those who didn't should not. The bill itself drew an arbitrary deadline. Senator MENENDEZ drew a different arbitrary deadline. This side-by-side actually is constructed so that, under existing law, everyone who has a reasonable expectation of being allowed to immigrate under a family visa will be able to immigrate under a family visa. Only those people who never had any reasonable expectation would be denied.

What it does is to take it out to the year 2027, 20 years from now, and anyone who could have had a reasonable expectation of immigrating within that 20-year period would be allowed to immigrate under this amendment. It is a more precise and fair and just way to allow family members to come into the United States. The numbers are approximately identical to those who would be allowed to immigrate under the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to vote against this. It is not more than a figleaf. It sounds great, 2027. The definition of "reasonable expectation" means absolutely nothing. The majority of the Senate voted to have some form, although it did not pass a budget point of order, to have some form of family reunification of U.S. citizens waiting to go be reunited with their family abroad.

This does nothing. As a matter of fact, I have heard some of the children, family members of U.S. citizens, would have to wait 60 years. I have the State Department's report. None of them are more than 15 years. So the reality is, this is a figleaf for those who voted against the last one. It does absolutely nothing for family reunification.

Let's keep at least a strong message we do want to reunify families as we move this bill ahead and vote against the Kyl amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SALAZAR). The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. KYL. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. DODD) and the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON) are necessarily absent.

Mr. LOTT. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Georgia (Mr. CHAMBLISS).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from New York.

AMENDMENT NO. 1183, AS FURTHER MODIFIED

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 1183, as further modified, and ask unanimous consent for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is pending.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the majority leader, Senator REID, and Senator DODD be added as cosponsors to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I know there are very strongly held and honestly felt disagreements in this Chamber on the legislation before us. Many of these differences are mirrored across our country. The issue of immigration strikes deeply at our values and our concept of America and stirs our emotions. While we may reach different conclusions, we all have to begin at the same place. Our immigration system is in crisis. I have concerns about this underlying bill, but we all do. This is not the bill any of us individually would have written and produced for the Senate's consideration. But I commend the primary sponsors for bringing this to the floor of the Senate so we can debate the issues it raises and try to craft a solution that simultaneously honors our Nation's strong immigrant heritage and respects the rule of law.

As a nation, we place a premium on compassion, respect, and policies that help families. But our immigration laws don't reflect that. In fact, our current laws tear families apart. For lawful permanent residents and their spouses and minor children, this bill not only fails to help them, it actually makes matters worse. It is time to take all the rhetoric about family values and put it into action and show that we mean what we say when we talk about putting families first. That is what my amendment does.

This amendment is a bipartisan amendment offered with Senator HAGEL and Senator MENENDEZ. It is our view we must make reuniting families a priority in our immigration system, that we should show compassion for those living apart from their spouses and minor children, that we should reform immigration in a way that honors families and brings them together. Unfortunately, the compromise bill before us fails to help families and children stuck in a bureaucratic quagmire created by our tangled, broken immigration system. Spouses and minor children of lawful permanent residents applying for a green card are required to remain overseas while awaiting their new legal status. The problem is there is a huge backlog.

Despite what some have suggested this week, the visa backlog for spouses and minor children of lawful permanent residents is significant and substantial. According to the June 2007 State Department visa bulletin, the backlog is currently more than 5 years long. For some, that backlog could stretch even longer. What does that mean? In very human terms it means parents are forced apart from their children. Husbands are separated from their wives. Tax-paying, law-abiding, legal immigrants who are doing the right thing are treated as though their families don't matter at all.

If you are a lawful permanent resident and your spouse and minor children are caught in this long line, your family is not allowed to enter the United States even for a brief visit. You are limited in your ability to leave the United States to visit your spouse and children overseas. Under our current policies, lawful permanent residents are forced to choose between their newly adopted country and living with their spouse or children. Five years may not seem long to some of us. We serve 6 years in the Senate. It seems to go by very fast. But 5 years in the life of a young child or in a marriage is precious time indeed. For a 10-year-old child, it is half their life. It is time that can never be recaptured. Unfortunately, that 5-year timeframe is often much less than what actually happens to these families.

We are proposing that spouses and minor children of lawful permanent residents be exempt from the visa caps and that we finally allow these nuclear families who have been separated for far too long to be reunited. This amendment is necessary because the compromise bill does absolutely nothing to bring these families together. In fact, the compromise actually reduces the number of visas for spouses and minor children of lawful permanent residents. It does not allocate a single visa to address the existing backlog for these family members.

As I have said many times, we have a national interest in fostering strong families. This amendment is supported by more than 100 faith-based, family, and immigrant advocacy organizations and denominations. I thank all of these organizations that have endorsed and rallied support for the Clinton-Hagel-Menendez amendment. They do an invaluable service in speaking out for people whose voices would otherwise not be heard.

The amendment is not considered a bill killer. It is not considered an amendment everybody has to vote against who has agreed to the compromise, because many of us know these legal permanent residents. Many of us actually work with them. Some of them even contribute to the campaigns of people in this Chamber. These are people who are doing everything they can to play by the rules, except they are divided for years from their spouses and minor children. I hope the Chamber will endorse this act of compassion and common sense.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I certainly agree with the Senator from New York about the value of having family unity. A strong family is certainly a very important value that we ought to maintain to the maximum extent possible. I intend at the appropriate time, before the vote comes up, to raise a point of order under concurrent resolution 21, but for a few moments I will deal with the merits as to the issue advanced by the Senator from New York.

The effect of adoption of this amendment would mean those who are now legal permanent residents or green card holders would have an immediate right to bring in their spouse and children, and it is estimated there are some 800,000 of these green cards in existence at the present time. From many perspectives, it would be worthwhile to have that accomplished. That would certainly be a personal preference of mine, if it were not for many collateral constraining factors about the difficulty of allowing that many additional green cards all of a sudden. The 800,000 figure is the best estimate that is available at this late hour.

The effect of the amendment offered by the Senator from New York as to the approximately 12 million undocumented immigrants would be that as soon as the backlog is cleared after 8 years, then at that time they would be eligible to have green cards issued as green card holders or as legal permanent residents, after the backlog is cleared in 8 years. Under the amendment by the Senator from New York, they would have the right to bring in their spouse and minor children.

Again, if I were to devise an ideal system and there were not other limitations, I certainly would not disagree with that as a desirable way to proceed. But this compromise was constructed very carefully and very painfully by the dozen or so Senators from both the Democratic side of the aisle and the Republican side of the aisle who structured it. The Presiding Officer was a member of that group, the junior Senator from Colorado. In structuring the arrangement to not allow legal permanent residents or so-called green card holders from bringing in their spouse and minor children, there were many tradeoffs. As I have said on the floor earlier, many of the provisions which were excluded, rejected, were ones I personally would have favored. I have cast a fair number of votes here during the course of this debate that, given my preferences, I would have cast differently. But the overall objective of getting a bill passed is worth the compromises which have been made.

Earlier today, this amendment was characterized by the Senator from New Mexico as the politics of compromise. Well, that might sound bad, but that happens to be the reality of what goes on in the Senate all the time. It goes on in all political bodies. We don't have anyone who can structure a bill to his or her precise specifications. If I could structure a bill, it would be a very different bill. But my role, along with a number of other Senators, was to try to find accommodations to find a bill which we could agree to and bring to the floor and then, if the full Senate wanted to work its will to the contrary, that is the way the system works. But there is nothing inappropriate about the politics of compromise. That means we sacrifice the better for the good.

The overall good is to get a bill passed which will deal with 12 million undocumented immigrants in a constructive way. It gives them an opportunity to escape the fear they now have that they will be detected at any time. It gives us an opportunity to identify those who are not contributing, who have criminal records, who ought to be deported. We can't deport all 12 million, but for the balance to be on the path toward citizenship, that is a very worthwhile, commendable objective as to the greater picture. We have comprehensive reforms. We have securing the border and employer verification. I will not go through all of the details, but this bill is very important. This accommodation to reject the contentions of the Senator from New York is necessary if we are to attain the greater good.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, might I just interrupt with a question to the Senator?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, is it not true that under this amendment, this amendment would wipe out the difference between a citizen of the United States and a green card holder with respect to their right to immigrate the nuclear family? So there would be no distinction between a green card holder and a citizen's rights?

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the Senator from Arizona is correct. It is the citizen who has the right to bring a spouse and minor children, not legal permanent residents, so-called green card holders.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it was the intention of the majority leader to ask that there be 10 minutes on each amendment to be evenly divided. I think that was the desire in order to be fair to all of those who were going to offer amendments. I think those who are offering amendments were given that kind of assurance. So I ask unanimous consent that the remaining time be allocated equally between the amendments and equally in terms—well, I ask unanimous consent that there be 10 minutes on each amendment equally divided between those who favor the amendment and those who are opposed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New York.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, may I inquire, was a budget point of order or other point of order made against the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was not raised. It is not in order at this time.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, let me, just if I could, respond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I will take 2 minutes of my time on the following amendment and yield it to the Senator. She was not aware of the time limitation when she made her remarks. I think she ought to be entitled to make her comments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I thank the Senator.

I think it is important to recognize that there are many distinctions between a U.S. citizen and a foreigner living legally in the United States which uphold the value of citizenship, but the right to marry and to live with your family should not be one of them.

Denying legal permanent residents, who are on the pathway to pledging their allegiance to the United States, the right to marry and live together in our country is an obstacle to their becoming the kind of full-fledged citizens we want them to be.

Also, under current law, guest workers, students, and others can be with their spouses and minor children and then adjust to legal permanent resident status with them. Due to the backlogs, only lawful permanent residents are treated differently.

So, Mr. President, I understand that those who worked so hard on coming up with this compromise may not be able to find their way clear to support this at this time, but I do not believe we have a national interest in separating legal permanent residents from their spouses and minor children.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Oklahoma.

AMENDMENT NO. 1151

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, let me make an inquiry. It is my understanding that under the UC, all of the eight amendments that will be considered on the floor have been called up and are in order to be considered; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have not all been reported at this time.

The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, let me tell you something procedurally that is going to happen here in about an hour at 10 o'clock. There is a list of amendments. First, there are two of them, and then the Salazar amendment will be considered. After that, the Inhofe amendment will be considered.

Now, I want to get something understood procedurally because I think it is very important for everyone, particularly the occupant of the chair at this time, who has the Salazar amendment, to know what is going on.

A year ago, we debated the Inhofe amendment that would make English the national language for the United States of America. We debated it at length, hour after hour. We talked about that every President back to and including Theodore Roosevelt in 1916 made comments that English should be the official and should be the national language of the United States of America. We talked about the 50 countries that have English as a national language, one being in west Africa—Ghana—and one being in east Africa—Kenya—but not the United States of America.

Now, one of the things that happened a year ago is I had my amendment up, which is essentially the same amendment that will be up tonight. I would like to have you listen carefully. It is really a one-sentence amendment. All it says is:

Unless specifically provided by statute, no person has a right, entitlement, or claim to have the Government of the United States or any of its officials or representatives act, communicate, perform or provide services, or provide materials in any language other than English.

In other words, this is an entitlement.

Now, it has exceptions in there for laws that are on the books, such as laws protecting the sixth amendment, which would be the Court Interpreters Act and other such things. However, it was aimed—I don't want to act as if I am hiding this because we talked about this a year ago. One of the things has been very controversial: At the very end of the Clinton administration was when he passed Executive Order No. 13166, and 13166 essentially said that if you are a recipient of Federal funds, then your documentation can all be done in whatever language you desire, so it could be Swahili, it could be Spanish, or any other language.

Now, what happened a year ago was they passed my amendment—and my amendment was exactly the same as it is today—and it passed by a vote of 62 to 35. Does that sound right? So, 62 to 35. Then right after that, the Salazar amendment—and I see the Senator from Colorado is preparing to respond—was passed, which gutted my amendment, did away with it.

So those individuals who voted for my amendment and then voted for the Salazar amendment—and there are quite a few Democrats and Republicans who did that—voted to make English the official language and then, in the next vote, 3 minutes later, voted to take it away.

Now, I see that this is happening again tonight because, unfortunately, I have to offer my amendment first. I anticipate it will be adopted because it is very popular. Right now, the polling shows that 91 percent of the people in America want English as an official language, and 76 percent of Hispanics believe English should be an official language.

Now, I am prepared to go on and debate this issue. I should not have to do it since 62 Members of this body already voted in favor of it. What I am going to say now, though, is very significant because if you vote for the Inhofe amendment when it comes up tonight, then vote for the Salazar amendment, you are essentially saying you are gutting the Inhofe amendment and you do not want English to be the official or the national language of the United States of America.

The Salazar amendment is exactly the language in the underlying bill. I have it before me. I would be glad to read it. In fact, I am not sure how this time is going to work out. If we have time equally divided, I am going to run out of time. So I will just state that the language is precisely the same in the underlying bill. The underlying bill actually puts into law executive orders, and this specific executive order of 13166, which gives anyone an entitlement to any language he or she wants, will become law. That is the language which is in there right now.

I am attempting to change that language. If my amendment is adopted, it will change. However, the next vote is going to be on the Salazar amendment. I am just saying to you, as my friends out here, do not vote for both of us because if you vote for both of us, you are voting to make English the official language, and then, in the very next vote, you are taking it away and reinstating the original language in the bill.

So I hope no one is going to think it is going to go unnoticed if anyone votes for my amendment and then votes to kill the amendment they just supported. That is what is going to happen tonight. I look forward to the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KENNEDY). The Senator's time has expired. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I rise to speak in opposition to the proposed amendment by my good friend from Oklahoma. First and foremost, I want to say I believe all Members of this Chamber and the people in the United States understand that English is important and that people, in order to succeed in our society, need to learn English; that the ability to acquire the English language and to speak it well is something we all support, and we support a number of different programs that would assist people who have limited English proficiency to acquire the English language as a keystone to success. I think that goes without saying.

The amendment that is proposed by my friend from Oklahoma would, in fact, do a number of things that I think are problematical and should cause all of us to vote against the amendment.

The first and a very important reason to vote against his amendment is that it is contrary to the provisions of law that exist in many States. For example, in the State of New Mexico, you have in the Constitution—in the Constitution of the State of New Mexico—as my good friend, Senator DOMENICI, would articulate here, a provision that says that many of the documents within that State have to be provided in both English and Spanish. The same thing is true for the State of Hawaii. I believe this is a States rights issue, and those constitutions of those States ought to be respected. There are other States in our Union which have decided they are going to adopt English as their official language. I believe that is a matter the States ought to decide. I do not believe it is a matter we ought to be imposing here from Washington, DC, on the backs of the States of our Union.

Also, at the end of the day, what my good friend from Oklahoma is attempting to do with his amendment is to undo an executive order that has been long recognized by President George Bush, implemented by President George Bush, conceived by President Bill Clinton, and put into law with his signature.

President Clinton's executive order was signed on April 11, 2000, on October 26, 2001. That executive order was recognized by Ralph Boyd with the U.S. Department of Justice under the Bush administration. It was again recognized on January 11, 2002, and again on November 12, 2002, and then again on December 1 of 2003.

If I may take a moment to just read a portion of what was included in that communication that went out from the U.S. Department of Justice to all of the court administrators across the United States and all of the U.S. district courts. It said the following in the memorandum:

It is beyond question that America's courts discharge a wide range of important duties and offer critical services both inside and outside the courtroom. Examples range from contact with the clerk's office in pro se matters to testifying at trial. They include but are not limited to matters involving domestic violence, restraining orders, parental rights, and other family law matters, eviction actions, alternative dispute resolution or mediation programs. . . .

And on and on.

What both the Bush administration and the Clinton administration recognized in this executive order is that it is important to make sure people who have limited English proficiency receive the kinds of services so they can understand what is going on in terms of the interface between the Government and themselves.

Mr. President, I believe my friend from Oklahoma has an amendment in search of a problem, and I urge my colleagues to vote against it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I will take just a few minutes. I am sorry to interrupt the debate.

EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE THAT ATTORNEY GENERAL ALBERTO GONZALES NO LONGER HOLDS THE CONFIDENCE OF THE SENATE AND OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE—MOTION TO PROCEED

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I now move to proceed to H.R. 6, and I send a cloture motion to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to Calendar No. 9, H.R. 6, comprehensive energy legislation.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I withdraw my motion to proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I had alerted the distinguished Republican leader I was going to do this. I had to do it because we had to do it before the night's business ends.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado still has, I think, 1 minute 10 seconds.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry in terms of the time available with respect to the Inhofe amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has the remaining 45 seconds.

Mr. INHOFE. Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. INHOFE. Yes, I understand that. Parliamentary inquiry: Since we are talking about two amendments, the Salazar amendment and the Inhofe amendment, then I would assume there would be another 10 minutes equally divided later on this evening if it is the desire of the offerors; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. INHOFE. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If they wanted to use the time, obviously it would be respected.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry again: Just to be clear, then, on the Salazar amendment No. 1384, there will be 10 minutes for debate equally divided between the majority and the minority.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SALAZAR. And with respect to the Inhofe amendment, the minority time has expired, and there is 43 seconds left on the majority side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I conclude by urging my colleagues to vote no on the Inhofe amendment. At the end of the day, what the Inhofe amendment is proposing to do is to undo executive orders that have been signed by both the Clinton administration and the Bush administration. Those executive orders were created in order to be able to have people understand what is happening with respect to the courts, with respect to domestic violence, and with respect to other issues that our government provides services for where they need to be able to understand what is happening with respect to the communication they are receiving.

I urge my colleagues to vote no on the Inhofe amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1374

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside, and I call up amendment No. 1374.

Mr. President, this bill does a laudable job in setting up a new merit-based system for the future. That is the right thing to do for our country, but the bill misses the mark.

Our country needs an immigration system that recognizes we want to attract the best and the brightest from around the world. We have been doing that for many years because we recognize that people who are smart, who are talented, when they come to this country they actually create jobs in this country. They create opportunities for other people in this country.

The current bill unfortunately misses the mark on this merit system. The current bill is actually worse than current law. This bill today is worse than current law, and that is why the high-tech community across the country has come out in opposition to the provisions of the merit-based system in this bill. I want to tell a small anecdote that will illustrate the problems with our current system on attracting talent.

In my office today, a gentleman by the name of Bill Watkins from Seagate Corporation out of California just opened a new branch in Singapore and hired U.S. graduates, foreign students who graduated from MIT and other universities. The reason he hired them to go to Singapore, where he will pay them less money than he would have paid them in the United States, the reason he sent those jobs overseas is because of our immigration policy that basically will educate you in the United States, but then after we educate you, we will send you home.

The amendment I offer today says we are going to actually value people who are educated here, especially in the science and mathematics and engineering fields—we call those the stem fields—in the health sciences fields, we are going to give you even more points than the current bill does so that into the future we will attract the best and the brightest from around the world. It is the idea of being a brain drain to the rest of the world. People from all over the world want to come to America. We want the best and the brightest to come to America because of this fact—whether it is low-skilled or high-skilled workers, 4 percent of the jobs, 4 percent of the people who have jobs in the future will create the jobs for the other 96 percent of Americans. Those are the talented people we want to attract.

Over half of the start-ups in Silicon Valley in the last 10 years have come from immigrants. Those people, when they start up companies, create jobs in America. They create opportunities, some high skilled, some low skilled, but they are creating opportunities for people to pursue the American dream. So while the current bill is going in the right direction, it misses the mark.

So my amendment says we are going to reward those in the sciences, those in the technical fields, those who have a Ph.D. in electrical engineering. We are going to give you enough points to virtually guarantee entrance into this country. It is a good thing. It is why the high-tech community is supporting my amendment.

We also put in this amendment, if you are an immigrant, if you are one of these Z visa holders, we actually want you to be rewarded for doing military service. So we are going to offer another amendment to make sure they can do military service, and then when they do that, we want to reward them to come into this country. To serve in our military should be the greatest honor, and we should reward people with legal permanent status, the ability to get legal permanent status.

We have a shortage of nurses in this country. We give more rewards for people in the health sciences as well in our amendment.

I think this is a critical amendment to improve this bill. If we are going to do a comprehensive immigration reform bill, we certainly shouldn't make it worse than current law, and this bill is worse than current law when it comes to high-tech workers coming into this country. So I would urge all of our colleagues to support this amendment. I know it is a delicate balance that we have between the various people who have brought this bill together, but I truly believe this is an improvement on not only current law, but it is also a great improvement on the current bill.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, is there anyone who is going to speak on the other side on the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator could be recognized, and the person is free under the agreement to speak later during the course of the evening.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, in that case, I would like to use 4 minutes of my time and then reserve the remainder of my time for if there is opposition to my amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 1415

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside, and I call up amendment No. 1415.

Mr. President, will the Presiding Officer notify me at 4 minutes so that I may reserve the remainder of my time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will so advise.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, our Social Security system, we all know, is in a very precarious position. In fact, we are trying to pass Social Security reform that would extend the life of our Social Security system. We know we are facing impending insolvency. The trust fund has $2.4 trillion and is supporting 46 million beneficiaries. In 2017, the trust fund will begin paying out more in benefits than it receives in revenue. It is expected to be fully exhausted in 2041. If we pass the bill before us, we will be adding millions of new beneficiaries into the Social Security system, but we will also be allowing individuals who were not authorized to work in this country the opportunity to qualify from illegal work.

Under the current bill, Social Security credits for the time prior to getting a valid card would not be allowed. That is the good part of the bill. However, on a visa overstay or someone who has a card in their name, but they are working illegally, they would still be able to get quarters credited for that illegal work. My amendment would close that loophole.

According to the GAO, about 22 percent of the whole Social Security that an employee would pay over 40 quarters would be approximately $193.42 per month. What I meant to say is, if you take the example of an hourly worker making $9 an hour, they would, in a 40-hour workweek, contribute $193 to the system per month. However, after working 40 quarters, which is the minimum, the payout would be $405 per month for each overstay after the age of 65 and up to the expected life expectancy of 78. So 22 percent would be paid in, while 78 percent would come out. This means over the lifetime of the Social Security for that worker, the payout would be $81,922 but the input would be $23,210. So over the lifetime of that person, the deficit would be $58,712.

Now, it is estimated that 40 percent of the illegals in this country are visa overstays. So if you multiply the 40 percent, which is about 4.8 million people according to estimates, you would get $28 billion that would be a deficit in the Social Security system. That is if it were 1 year of overstay. We don't know how many years people overstay. That is impossible to know right now. But if it were 2 years, it would be $56 billion, and it goes on.

We asked for a scoring of this amendment, and we have a letter from the Chief Actuary of the Social Security Administration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used 4 minutes.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1384

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 1384.

Mr. President, I ask that the Chair let me know when I have 2 minutes remaining on my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will so notify.

Mr. SALAZAR. I ask unanimous consent that Senator PETE DOMENICI be added as a cosponsor to this amendment No. 1384.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I rise to speak on behalf of my amendment No. 1384 and to urge my colleagues to join me in support of this common-sense legislation that supports English as the common language for the United States of America.

Our amendment is a very simple amendment. It says that the Government of the United States—and here I am quoting:

The Government of the United States shall preserve and enhance the role of English as the language of the United States.

Again, it is:

The Government of the United States shall preserve and enhance the role of English as the language of the United States.

This is a simple and straightforward amendment that recognizes the reality of the United States of America, that we are a people who yearn to speak English, want to speak English, and have the vast majority of our people knowing how to speak English.

This language I have read is also part of a carefully crafted compromise. It is included in the underlying legislation that was worked upon by both Republican and Democratic Senators over a long period of time. It was agreed that this was the language that made the most sense in terms of including a provision relating to the English language in the underlying legislation.

As I said earlier in opposition to Senator INHOFE's amendment, this is in fact a States' rights issue. The States of America ought to decide whether they are going to call English the official language of their State, as they did in Colorado; or they should decide, as they did in New Mexico in their constitution in 1912, to recognize English and Spanish as part of the language within their State. That was their right as New Mexicans. It is their right in Hawaii to be able to recognize a language other than English. It is a matter that ought to be left to the States. It would be a Washingtonian kind of thing to require these mandates upon the States, and it is something that we as the Senate should reject. Our language in amendment No. 1384 preserves that ability of the States to be able to enact their own legislation with respect to the English language.

Finally, I only say that in my own personal history the native language in my home was Spanish. My family had lived along the banks of the Rio Grande River in southern Colorado for a period of 407 years. During all that time, they preserved their Spanish language, but they also honored and preserved the English language. My father and mother, who were veterans of World War II, had eight children who became college graduates. They understood the importance of English as something that would help them live the American dream, as all eight of their children have.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, if I am in order, I will speak in strong support of my amendment No. 1339 which will be voted on later tonight.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is so entitled.

AMENDMENT NO. 1339

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, there has been a lot of discussion in this debate on the immigration bill about enforcement provisions. There has been a lot of discussion about triggers in this bill to ensure that enforcement actions are taken, are paid for, and are enacted before other aspects of the bill, such as the Z visa program and the temporary worker program, go into effect.

My grave concern is that these triggers are wholly inadequate and represent thinking that is backward from where it needs to be. If you look at the triggers designed in the bill, they were arrived at, again, as I would put it, in a backward fashion.

The question was asked: Well, it is going to take about 18 months to be ready to enact the other provisions of the bill, so what enforcement are we teed up to do during the next 18 months anyway? We will define that as the enforcement trigger for the bill.

I simply think that is the wrong way to arrive at a trigger. The key question has to be: What needs to be done? What is the totality of significant measures that needs to be done in order to have real enforcement at the border and real enforcement at the workplace? Let's make that totality the trigger in the bill. Of course, the triggers are far less than that.

One perfect example is the subject of this amendment. The US-VISIT Program has been authorized since 1996, but it is not near operational. This is the program that would establish an entry and exit system so we know absolutely who comes into the country on visas and when those people leave, if they leave on time under their visa, or if they do not and are, therefore, overstaying their visa.

Without such a system, we cannot possibly know who is in the country and who is overstaying their visa. This is a very serious part of our illegal immigration problem. As of 2006, the illegal population, by most estimates, included 4 million to 5.5 million overstays. So visa overstays are a big part of the problem. We know from 9/11, that visa overstays accounted for many of the terrorists at the center of the 9/11 plot.

So how can we have meaningful enforcement without this US-VISIT system, including the exit portion of the system? We cannot. The simple answer is that we can't. My amendment No. 1339 would include full implementation of this exit system of the US-VISIT Program into the trigger of the bill. Therefore, the other significant portions of the bill, such as temporary workers, such as Z visas, et cetera, cannot take effect until the full trigger is pulled, including full implementation of the US-VISIT system.

If we are serious about enforcement, we have to pass this amendment. If we are serious about enforcement, we have to recognize that 4 million to 5.5 million illegals in this country are visa overstays, and we cannot get our hands around that visa overstay problem without full implementation of this system, which has been authorized but nowhere near implemented since 1996.

So I urge all my colleagues to come together and build up the trigger and enforcement provisions of this bill with the Vitter amendment No. 1339.

With that, I yield back my time.

(Mr. SALAZAR assumed the Chair.)

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1202

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I come to the floor tonight to speak about the new point system created in this bill—a proposal that will radically change the way we judge who is worthy of lawful entry into American society.

For decades, American citizens and legal permanent residents have been able to sponsor their family members for entry into our country. For decades, American businesses have been able to sponsor valued employees. The bill before us changes that policy—a policy that, while imperfect, has worked well, and this bill will now replace it with a new, untested, unexamined system to provide visas to immigrants who look good on paper but who may not have any familial or economic ties to our country.

I have serious concerns about this new experiment in social engineering, not only because of the lack of evidence that it will work but because the bill says the new point system cannot be changed for 14 years. For that reason, I come to the floor today, joined by Senators MENENDEZ and FEINGOLD, to offer amendment No. 1202 to sunset the point system after 5 years.

I am pleased that immigration experts, religious organizations, and immigrant advocacy organizations have all endorsed our amendment.

These groups have endorsed our amendment because the point system in this bill constitutes a radical shift in immigration policy, premised on the view that there is something wrong with family and employer-sponsored immigration. If this program were merely supplementing the current system rather than significantly replacing it, it would not have caused as much concern.

Religious organizations and immigrant advocacy groups have also endorsed my amendment because the decisions about what characteristics are deserving of points—and how points are allocated for those characteristics—were made without a single hearing or public examination.

They support the amendment because the new points system shifts us too far away from the value we place on family ties and moves us toward a class-based immigration system, where some people are welcome only as guest workers but never as full participants in our democracy. Indeed, the practical effect of the points system is to make it more difficult for Americans and legal permanent residents with family living in Latin America to bring them here.

Our current immigration system delivers the lion's share of green cards—about 63 percent—to family members of Americans and legal permanent residents, while roughly 16 percent of visas are allocated to employment-based categories. The bill before us would reduce visas allocated to the family system in order to dramatically increase the proportion of visas distributed based on economic points. Once implemented, these new economic points visas would then account for about 40 percent of all visas, while family visas would account for less than half of all visas, with the remainder going for humanitarian purposes.

Under the new system, just a few of the current family preferences would be retained in any recognizable form. Spouses and children of U.S. citizens would still be able to come, but parents of U.S. citizens would no longer be counted as immediate family. Thus, most parents seeking to join their children and grandchildren in the United States would be denied green cards.

The rest of the current family preferences—siblings, adult children, and many parents—would be eviscerated.

The new points system would also eliminate employment-based green cards altogether, forcing employers recruiting workers abroad to rely exclusively on short-term H-1B and Y visas. This proposal takes an admittedly problematic employment-based visa system and replaces it with a far more problematic temporary worker visa system.

The design of the points system leaves numerous questions unanswered. Beyond pushing workers from Latin America to the back of an endless line with no hope of ever reaching the front, the new points system leaves unspecified the crucial question of how migrants with sufficient points will be prioritized. Government bureaucrats would thus be left with unprecedented discretion to determine which immigrants have acceptable education, employment history, and work experience to merit admission into the country.

Taken together, the questionable design of this points program and the fundamental shift away from family preferences in the allocation of visas raises enough flags that we should not simply rubberstamp this proposal and allow it to go forward.

Let me be clear. Senators MENENDEZ, FEINGOLD, and myself are not proposing to strike the program from the bill, but this system should be revisited after a reasonable amount of time to determine whether it is working, how it can be improved, and whether we should return to the current family and employer-based system that has worked so well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I ask for 1 additional minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, we live in a global economy, and I do believe America will be strengthened if we welcome more immigrants who have mastered science and engineering. But we cannot weaken the very essence of what America is by turning our back on immigrants who want to reunite with their family members, or immigrants who have the willingness to work hard but might not have the right graduate degrees. That is not who we are as a country. Should those without graduate degrees who spoke Italian, Polish, or German instead of English have been turned back at Ellis Island, how many of our ancestors would have been able to enter the United States under this system?

Character and work ethic have long defined generations of immigrants to America. But these qualities are beyond the scope of this bill's points system. It tells us nothing about what people who have been without opportunity can achieve once they are here. It tells us nothing about the potential of their children to serve and to lead.

In short, the points system raises some serious concerns for me. I am willing to defer to those Senators who negotiated this provision and say we should give it a try, but I am not willing to say this untested system should be made virtually permanent. For that reason, I urge my colleagues to support to sunset this points system after 5 years so we can examine its effectiveness and necessity.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I think it is very appropriate you be occupying the Chair during this moment in this debate. My good friend from Illinois says to those who have worked so hard to get this bill to the point it is at: Nothing personal, but I can't live with this provision.

Bipartisanship is music to the American people's ears. When you are out there on the campaign trail, you are trying to bring us all together. You are trying to make America better. Why can't we work together? This is why we can't work together because some people, when it comes to the tough decisions, back away because when you talk about bipartisanship, some Americans on the left and the right consider it heresy, and we are giving in if we adopt this amendment.

The 12 million who have lived in fear for decades, my Republican colleagues and a majority have told our base we are not going to put them in jail and we are not going to deport them. No matter how much you yell, we are going to make them right with the law, we are going to punish them, but we are not going to play like they don't exist, and we are going to do things differently in the future.

If you care about families under this bill, people are united in 8 years who would be 30 years getting here. If you care about families wanting to wake up one morning and not be afraid, this bill does it.

This amendment in the name of making the bill better says that bipartisanship doesn't have the "bi" in it. It means everybody over here who has walked the plank and told our base you are wrong, you are going to destroy this deal. And that is exactly what it is, a deal—a deal to make America more secure, to give people a chance to start their lives over again and to have a new system that has a strong family component but will make us competitive with the world because some people don't want to say to the loud folks: No, you can't have your way all the time.

Let me tell you, this is about as bipartisan as you will get, Mr. President. Some of us on the Republican side have been beat up and some on the Democratic side have been beat up because we have tried to find a way forward on a problem nobody else wants to deal with.

To my friend, Senator KENNEDY, thank you for trying to find a way, as much as we are different, to make this country better, more secure, to treat 12 million people in a way they have never been treated and, in my opinion, deserve to be treated, to have a chance to start over.

What a sweet idea it is to have a second chance in life. Well, they are not going to get it if this is adopted, and America will be all the worse for it. What a great opportunity we have as a country not to repeat the mistakes of 1986, by having a merit-based immigration system that has a strong family component but frees up some green cards so we can be competitive.

So when you are out on the campaign trail, my friend, telling about why can't we come together, this is why.

Mr. OBAMA addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has no time.

Mr. OBAMA. I understand, but I wish to respond to my colleague from South Carolina since it appears to be directed at me.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 2 minutes of my time.

Mr. MCCAIN. I object unless the Senator from South Carolina has sufficient time as well.

Mr. OBAMA. I would like to give additional time. When the Senator from South Carolina addresses me directly, I feel it is appropriate for me to respond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts has the opportunity to yield time.

Mr. KENNEDY. I think I am entitled to yield time. I am in charge of the time on this side. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts yields 2 minutes to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I have a very simple response to what we just heard. I think it is important to consider the actual amendment before us as opposed to what appeared to be a broad-based discussion of the bill overall.

What this amendment specifically does is it says we will go forward with the proposal that has been advanced by this bipartisan group. It simply says we should examine after 5 years whether the program is working. The notion that somehow that guts the bill or destroys the bill is simply disingenuous and it is engaging in the sort of histrionics that is entirely inappropriate for this debate. This is a bill that says after 5 years, we will examine a point system in which we have had no hearings in the public. Nobody has had an opportunity to consider exactly how this was structured. It was structured behind closed doors. And the notion that after 5 years we can reexamine it to see if it is working properly, as opposed to locking it in for 14 years, that somehow destroys the bipartisan nature of this bill is simply untrue.

I ask all my colleagues to consider the nature of the actual amendment that is on the floor as opposed to the discussion that preceded mine.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

AMENDMENT NO. 1415

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I wish to use the final minute of my time on my amendment No. 1415 and say I want to make sure we are doing everything to be fair to the people who pay into our Social Security system. We know we will be adding more people in this bill, but we want to make sure they are people who have worked legally in the system. Therefore, I hope we will adopt my amendment No. 1415, cosponsored by Senator GRASSLEY.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the office of the Chief Actuary of the Social Security Administration in which he says the average annual savings in the bill from my amendment would be approximately $300 million this year, and over the 75-year period there will be more savings up front, fewer savings toward the end of the 75 years, but the average would be about $300 million per year. That is into our Social Security trust fund.

It is a matter of fairness to the people who have paid legally, and I hope everyone will support amendment No. 1415.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF ACTUARY,
Baltimore, MD, June 6, 2007.

Hon. KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HUTCHISON: Matthew Acock of your staff and Derek Kan of the Republican Policy Committee have requested that we produce preliminary estimates of the effect of two amendments to S. 1348, as amended with A. 1150, on the financial status of the Social Security program. They emphasized the need for at least preliminary estimates as quickly as possible. We have developed preliminary estimates for these amendments consistent with the analysis provided to Chairman Max Baucus on the current bill S. 1348/1150.

AMENDMENT 1301: OPTION TO REFUND PAYROLL TAXES FOR Y-VISA GUEST WORKERS

Your amendment number 1301 to S.1348 would provide Y-visa workers who have completed their time in this status and have returned to their home country the option to get a refund of employee payroll taxes from Social Security and Medicare. Exercising the option would preclude obtaining credit for these earnings toward Social Security or Medicare benefits. It would also preclude returning to the United States as a Y-visa guest worker in the future.

We assume that only those Y-visa workers who have no intention of returning to the U.S. would exercise the option. Such workers, without exercising the option, would often have made the payroll tax contributions with no expectation of receiving any benefits in the future because the limit of 6 years in Y-visa status is not sufficient to obtain insured status for most Social Security benefits (unless the U.S. and the worker's home country have an in-force totalization agreement). Thus, refunded payroll taxes under the amendment would represent a reduction in revenue for the OASDI program.

Of the 200,000 Y-visas granted each year we estimate that roughly two thirds would ultimately exercise the option to receive their employee payroll taxes back as a refund. Those not exercising the option would be individuals who either attain legal permanent resident status in the U.S. or overstay the Y-visa and continue residing in the U.S. on an unauthorized basis. We estimate that the reduction in revenue from this amendment, assuming it is enacted along with S. 1348/1150, would be a negligible worsening in the long-range OASDI actuarial balance. The average annual cost over the 75-year long-range projection period would be about equivalent to $200 million this year.

AMENDMENT 1302: WITHHOLDING OF SOCIAL SECURITY EARNINGS CREDITS FOR Z-VISA WORKERS WHEN NOT LEGALLY AUTHORIZED TO WORK

S. 1348/1150 provides for legalization of current undocumented immigrants who were working in the United States on January 1, 2007. This amendment would prohibit assigning credit toward OASDI benefits for years in which earnings were received but the worker was not legally authorized to work. The effect of the amendment would restrict the use of such earnings credits for Z-visa holders who obtained a legitimate Social Security number (SSN) before January 1, 2007. S. 1348/1150 already includes this restriction for workers who would first obtain a legitimate SSN after 2006.

We estimate that almost one half of the 6.5 million individuals expected to gain legal status under S. 1348/1150 (through Z-visas and agricultural visas) would be affected by this amendment. We estimate that the long-range actuarial balance would be improved by 0.01 percent of taxable payroll.

We are hopeful that these quick preliminary estimates will be helpful. We will be working on more detailed estimates and must caution that due to the preliminary nature of estimates mentioned here, the more detailed estimates could differ somewhat. We look forward to continuing to work with you on this important legislation.

Sincerely,

STEPHEN C. GOSS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

The Senator from Oklahoma.

AMENDMENT NO. 1151

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Colorado and I have each had 5 minutes on my amendment. I have not had 5 minutes in rebuttal of the amendment of the Senator from Colorado. Let me tell you what is going on. I know a lot of people in this Chamber are going to think no one is going to figure this out. I am going to say it over and over again after this is over if the outcome is as I anticipate it will be.

First, this is probably the first time in 20 years we have had an honest effort where we can make English our national language in the United States of America. This is something all the polling data shows is in the nineties—91 percent, 93 percent of the people in America who want to have this amendment adopted.

In fact, a Zogby poll last month in May showed 76 percent of the Hispanics in America want to have English as the national language.

The Salazar amendment is precisely what the underlying bill is. The underlying bill—and I can read it to my colleagues, but I have done it three times on the floor already—yes, it does put into law the controversial Executive Order 13166. My colleagues have heard a lot about this from their constituents.

It says you are entitled to have your information, if you receive Government money, in any language of your choosing—Swahili or any other language. That is what is in the underlying bill. That also is in the Salazar amendment.

This is what is going to be happening. My colleagues have a chance to change all of this when they vote on the Inhofe amendment, which is I believe the third amendment in line tonight. What I don't want my colleagues to do is vote for my amendment and then vote for the Salazar amendment.

All that does is put it right back where the bill is now. In other words, it would do away with my amendment and put it back as the language is in the underlying bill.

So there is no reason in the world to do it, unless someone is trying to cover up their true position. If my colleagues believe we should join the other 50 countries, such as Kenya, Ghana, and other countries around the world, that have English as their official language, then this is a chance to do it. If my colleagues do not believe it, then this is their chance to vote against the Inhofe amendment.

It is an act of hypocrisy if colleagues vote for the Inhofe amendment and then vote for the Salazar amendment to undo the Inhofe amendment. That happened a year ago. Democrats and Republicans did that. However, this time it will not go unnoticed.

It is interesting that every President back to and including Teddy Roosevelt in 1916 said very emphatically that we should have English as our official language, as our national language. It was said by President Clinton, it was said by the other President Roosevelt, by both President Bushes, and everyone has been for it.

I have a listing I wish to make part of the RECORD that shows all of the polling data in the last 5 years. It shows that between 85 and 95 percent of the American people want this amendment adopted. My colleagues can turn their backs on them or they can try the old trick they do around here all the time: Vote for the Inhofe amendment, and then turn around to vote to undo it if they want.

One thing that was stated by the Senator from Colorado was there are a lot of statutes this would negate. I remind my colleagues, if they read this bill, it says: Unless specifically provided by statute, no person has a right, entitlement, or claim to have the Government of the United States or any of its officials or representatives act, communicate, perform, or provide services or provide materials in any language other than English.

I have a list I also want to be made part of the RECORD that shows there are many statutes where they mandate languages other than English. A good example is the Court Interpreters Act. That is put in there to protect the sixth amendment to the Constitution, so people can be advised of their rights.

Again, my colleagues are going to have the opportunity to vote to make English our national language. I hope they will adopt this. They will certainly be serving their constituents well if they do. But if they do, they shouldn't turn around and undo what they just did because that is not going to go unnoticed.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the polling information and the list of selected Federal laws requiring the use of languages other than English be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL ENGLISH AMENDMENT POLLS

Polls: All types of pollsters of all groups, liberal and conservative, immigrant and nonimmigrant, with all wordings show consistently high levels of support for making English the official language of the United States:

1. A Zogby Poll conducted on May 17–20, 2007 showed that 83 percent of Americans favor official English legislation, including 76 percent of Hispanics, 94 percent of Republicans, 72 percent of Democrats, and 83 percent of Independents are favorable to official English legislation.

2. An April 2007 McLaughlin & Associates poll showed 80 percent of all Americans indicated that they would support a proposal to make English the official language.

3. A December 2006 Zogby International poll showed that 92 percent of Americans believe that preserving English as our common language is vital to maintaining our unity.

4. A June 2006 Rasmussen Reports poll showed that making English the nation's official language is favored by 85 percent of Americans; this figure includes 92 percent of Republicans, 79 percent of Democrats, and 86 percent of those not affiliated with either major political party.

5. A March 2006 Zogby International Poll showed 84 percent of likely voters support making English the official language of government operations with commonsense exceptions.

6. A 2004 Zogby poll showed 92 percent of Republicans, 76 of Democrats and 76 percent of Independents favor making English the official language.

7. In 2000, Public Opinion Strategies showed 84 percent favored English as the official language with only 12 percent opposed and 4 percent not sure.

8. A 1996 national survey by Luntz Research asked, "Do you think English should be made the Official Language of the United States?" 86 percent of Americans supported making English the official language with only 12 opposed and 2 percent not sure.

Latino immigrants support the concept of Official English:

1. An April 2007 McLaughlin & Associates poll showed that 80 percent of all Americans, including 62 percent of Latinos, would support a proposal to make English the official language.

2. A March 2006 Zogby poll found that 84 percent, of Americans, including 71 percent of Hispanics, believe English should be the official language of government operations.

3. My favorite poll is this one: In 2004 the National Council of LaRaza found that 97 percent strongly (86.4 percent or somewhat (10.9 percent) agreed that "The ability to speak English is important to succeed in this country."

Mr. INHOFE. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I think there are 2 minutes left on the discussion of this issue.

I hope our colleagues listened to the extraordinary history of the Salazar family. It is the living of the American dream. It is respect for the Spanish language and Spanish tradition, and the reverence that it has for English today.

I am disappointed in the Inhofe amendment because the Inhofe amendment doesn't add one nickel, it doesn't add 1 hour for those who want to learn English. To learn English in my home city of Boston, MA, immigrants have to wait 3 years in order to gain admission to a class to learn English. There are long waits in all parts of the country. If we had some effort to try and provide the opportunity for those who do not know English to learn English, I think we would be much better off.

Finally, as the Senator from Colorado has pointed out, the great civil rights protections of Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and Executive order 13,166 as well as protections dealing with public health and safety that we have found to be so important in terms of ensuring the health and the safety and the security of our people. Providing information needed to protect health and safety depend on communication—communication—and we have developed a process, a way of respecting different traditions in order to be able to do that.

The Salazar amendment retains and respects that tradition, and it is the way we should be proceeding and embracing this evening for the reasons he stated so well.

AMENDMENT NO. 1374

Mr. President, I wish to yield time on the Ensign amendment. I think I have 5 minutes on the Ensign amendment in opposition?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. The Senator has 5 minutes on the Ensign amendment.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the Ensign amendment basically rearranges what we call the merit-based system that has been included in this legislation. This was the subject of a good deal of debate: Do we want to develop a merit-based system that has been developed in some other countries. It has had some success in some areas, some challenges in others.

During the debate there was a question about how we would develop a merit-based system to take in the needs of the United States. There are important needs in high skills, but we also understand from the Department of Labor that 8 out of the 10 areas of occupations are basically low skill, what they call low skill. Those may be teachers, they may be managers, or professional people in some areas, but they are basically individuals who have very important skills that are essential to the American economy.

We had debate about how we were going to work out that merit system, and in that whole process we worked diligently to find a system that is going to respect the higher skilled but also provides some opportunity for the low skilled as well to be able to gain entry and then to gain what we call the sufficient points to move far forward and able to gain green cards and eventually citizenship.

The Ensign amendment absolutely emasculates that amendment and virtually closes out all of the low-skilled possibilities for people who might come on in as temporary workers or may come on in under other provisions of this legislation. Under the Ensign amendment, all of those individuals, the lower skilled, are effectively eliminated and closed out, make no mistake about it. Make no mistake about it.

Finally, we have provisions in the legislation dealing with the higher skills, called the H-1B provisions. That is directly related to higher skills. We have addressed that issue in other provisions of the legislation.

For those reasons, I would hope the Ensign amendment would not be accepted.

AMENDMENT NO. 1339

Mr. President, on the Vitter amendment, let me add some additional points to this debate. A great deal of time was spent listening to Secretary Chertoff, to making recommendations about what is going to be in the national security interest to preserve our borders. That was one of the most important parts of the development of this legislation.

Senator ISAKSON came forward with a very important suggestion and a proposal with regard to ensuring that we were going to have true national security, protection of our national security before other provisions were going to be set forth. We have had good chances during the period of these past months to work with Homeland Security and to work with all of the Members of this body to ensure we were going to have effective provisions to protect national security. We even accepted a Gregg amendment which we believed added to the provisions that were accepted.

It is our belief those provisions are sufficient, the allocations of resources for the border, the utilization of enhanced border patrols, the enhanced border security, which has been outlined time and again during the course of this debate. They are sufficient. So I would hope at the time that amendment is addressed it would not be accepted.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1316

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the Dorgan amendment. I was a little surprised to see it in order, but that happens quite often around here. This is the same amendment we voted on a couple of weeks ago. It was a close vote, I realize, but I didn't know we were going to have a practice of second chances on amendments after they were defeated.

It seems to me this is something that is very unnecessary. But if we get into the custom here with so many amendments that we vote again and again, I don't think that is good for this process. I think the process that has taken place so far has been very commendable. Both managers have done a great job, but this is another attempt to do away with the temporary worker program. It is another attempt to kill this legislation. That is what it will do. That is exactly what this amendment does.

We had vigorous debate on it once, with a long period of debate, and it was defeated. Now, basically, we are having another vote again. I don't think that is appropriate. But more important, one thing that hasn't changed, I say to my colleagues, if you pass this, it kills the bill. We have made too much progress with too much debate and with too much consensus to revisit the same issue over again and have it carry this time.

I am sure the sponsor of the amendment has some reason for bringing it up again, but I don't think there is a good reason, and I hope we will reject this amendment because it has already been rejected.

I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on the Dorgan amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I take the time on the Dorgan amendment myself. How much time remains on this?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts has 5 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I have opposed the Dorgan amendment each time for very important and basic reasons. We are attempting to secure our borders. We are going to secure our borders. We know, even when we secure our borders, we are going to have pressure on those borders to come through. People are either going to come through the front door or they are going to come through the back door.

What do I mean by that? If they are coming through the back door, they are going to be the undocumented and the exploited undocumented workers, such as we have seen in my own city of New Bedford, where they are arrested and exploited and are driving down wages. If they come through the front door, they are going to meet the needs of American industry when we find there are no existing options for American workers. There is going to be the requirement that you have to get American workers first. We have accepted that and restated that with the Durbin amendment. But if they are able to gain entry into the United States, they are going to have the kind of protections that are included in the legislation.

I have listened to those who have been opposed to the temporary workers, saying there are no rights and protections for these temporary workers. They ought to read the bill. They ought to read the bill, because any temporary worker who is going to be hired is going to be guaranteed the prevailing wage, they are going to be protected by the OSHA provisions, they are going to be protected by workmen's compensation, and they are going to have the opportunity, we believe, over a period of time, if they have come in, to try to improve themselves, to learn English, to involve themselves in an employment program to begin to go up the ladder in terms of getting a green card. So that is the choice.

If we act to eliminate the temporary worker program, we are going to find what we have at the present time, that hundreds of individuals die in the desert; that we are going to have those individuals who are able to gain entry in the United States and are undocumented and they are going to be exploited, as they are exploited today, and they will drive down wages, as happens today. That happens to be the situation.

Some like some temporary worker programs better than others, but we have the one we have in this bill and we have every intention to try and make it work. We have set up a careful system in the bill to accommodate the concerns about the size of the temporary worker program. There is, as well, a market-based adjustment that is crucial to the provision in the bill, and I think it would be a great mistake to effectively emasculate the temporary worker program. That is what the Dorgan amendment would do.

Mr. President, I believe that I am the only one who has time that is remaining. If that be the case, I would be glad to yield back the remaining time.

I ask if the Chair would be good enough to state the amendments, the first amendment that would be before the Senate at this time. We have a series of different votes, and I think we ought to have the opportunity to make sure all of us understand exactly what we are voting on.

I believe the hour of 10 o'clock has arrived, and I yield whatever time remains, and I think we expect yeas and nays votes on all of them.

AMENDMENT NO. 1183

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question occurs on the Clinton amendment, No. 1183.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I make a point of order that the pending Clinton amendment, No. 1183, to S. 1348, violates section 201, the pay-as-you-go point of order of S. Con. Res. 21, the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2008.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I move to waive the applicable provisions in the Budget Act and ask for the yeas and nays.

Dodd Johnson

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 44, the nays are 53. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The point of order is sustained and the amendment falls.

AMENDMENT NO. 1374

Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided on amendment No. 1374, offered by the junior Senator from Nevada, Mr. ENSIGN.

Who yields time? The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, my amendment goes to the merit-based system. We have a serious problem in this country where we are graduating incredible engineers from our high-tech universities. When they graduate, we say: You must go home.

I had a company in my office today from Silicon Valley. They are opening an office in Singapore, hiring American graduates, foreign-born graduates from American universities, opening in Singapore because they cannot hire them in this country. There are not enough visas.

My amendment fixes the merit-based system and says we want to attract the best and the brightest from around the world. The high-tech community supports my amendment because they think the underlying bill is flawed.

Mr. President, India and China will graduate 600,000 to 700,000 engineers. We will be graduating 65,000 to 70,000. Half of ours are foreign-born. We do not have enough of that brain power coming into this country like we have had in the past. Those who came here will come here and create opportunities for other people in the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the merit-based system that is included in this legislation as it exists at the present time is heavily skewed toward the high skills. I would say 75 to 80 percent of those who are going to qualify in the merit-based system are going to be for the highly skilled.

There is the reservation under the skill system, 25 or 30 percent for lower skills because our economy designed high skills, and the Department of Labor says 8 out of 10 occupations that our Nation needs are low skills: teacher's aides, home health aides, and others.

That has been worked out. That is the way it is. Under the Ensign amendment you would completely skew it to shortchange all of the low skills, all for the high skills. We are taking care of the high skills with the H-1B program. If we need to do something about that, then let's have amendments to do it.

But this way effectively is saying to millions of people who have come here and have been absolutely indispensable to our economy that they are never going to have a chance to be part of the American dream.

I hope the amendment will be defeated.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

AMENDMENT NO. 1384

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided on amendment No. 1384 offered by the Senator from Colorado, Mr. SALAZAR. Who yields time?

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I ask for a "yes" vote on Salazar 1384 and a "no" vote on Inhofe 1151, and the 2 minutes under that time I will yield to Senator DOMENICI from New Mexico.

Mr. INHOFE. Parliamentary inquiry, before the Senator speaks: Is the 2 minutes equally divided?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is 2 minutes equally divided. The senior Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. SALAZAR. Parliamentary inquiry: The senior Senator from New Mexico is recognized for 2 minutes to speak on both amendments?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We are now considering only the Salazar amendment. There are 2 minutes to be divided equally.

Mr. SALAZAR. I ask unanimous consent that the senior Senator from New Mexico be given 2 minutes to speak on both Salazar 1384 and Inhofe 1151.

Mr. INHOFE. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. SALAZAR. I yield 1 minute on Salazar 1384 and request a "yes" vote and yield the time to the Senator from New Mexico.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I, too, ask for a "yes" vote on the Salazar-Domenici amendment which everybody should understand says that the English language is the common language of the United States. I come from a State that is different from most of yours in that we have had a long history of trouble regarding what language we speak; this has been so from the very time New Mexico started to become a State. The legislature of the United States played around with New Mexico in an effort to see if there could be enough Anglos so there wouldn't be a majority of Spanish speakers at the State's infancy. We were told we had to wait for Statehood until there was a majority of English speakers in New Mexico, and the U.S. Supreme Court later said the Congress could not do that to New Mexico. New Mexico could do what they desired. We voted in a State constitution that still stands that says English and Spanish are common languages and you can speak both languages.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, this is very simple. I hope everyone understands and is listening. We are going to have an opportunity in a few minutes to vote on another amendment which we will describe at that time with 2 minutes equally divided.

If you are opposed to English as the national language of the United States, then vote for the Salazar amendment. That is exactly what it does. His amendment says anyone who receives Federal money is entitled—this is an entitlement—to have the documentation in any language he or she chooses. It could be in Swahili, French, any other language.

So if you are opposed to English as the national language, go ahead and vote for this amendment. But keep in mind, when you do, that 91 percent of Americans are on our side of this issue and want English to be the national language, and 76 percent of the Hispanics, as a result of a poll that was taken in May of this year—a Zogby poll—are for English as the national language.

I ask you to defeat the Salazar amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

AMENDMENT NO. 1151

Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided on amendment No. 1151 offered by the Senator from Oklahoma, Mr. INHOFE.

The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, last year, a year and a month ago, we had this same vote. Sixty-two people in this Chamber voted in favor of it, and I will ask them to do the same again. This, very simply—we talked about this many times—makes English the official, the national language of the United States as opposed to giving an entitlement to anyone, to any other language, which is in, of course, the amendment we passed.

If this amendment passes, it will go to conference, and we will have an opportunity to do something in conference to decide whether it is a combination of these or one or the other should prevail. So I ask that you do what 90 percent of your constituents want you to do and that is vote yes on the Inhofe amendment to make English the national language of the United States of America.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. The Senator from Colorado is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to vote no on 1151 for three reasons. First, it is in violation of the very delicate compromise, the bipartisan compromise that has been put together by both Republicans and Democrats. Second of all, it is an absolute transparent attempt to undo the Executive Orders of President Bush and President Clinton and the implementation memorandums from both of those Presidents. Third, this is a States' rights issue.

Fourth, for me, I remember having my mouth washed out with soap as a young man for speaking the Spanish language, which is my native language. I love English and we should encourage people to speak English.

This amendment is nothing but a divisive amendment among the people of the United States. I urge my colleagues to vote no on this amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 1415

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate, equally divided, on amendment No. 1415 offered by the Senator from Texas, Mrs. HUTCHISON.

The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator ALLARD be added as a cosponsor on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, the underlying bill does not allow Social Security credits for work done with a fraudulent card. However, it does allow credit for work done on visa overstay. We all know that is estimated to be about 40 percent of the 12 million estimated illegal immigrants.

Mr. President, if we don't pass this amendment, it could jeopardize the integrity of the Social Security system for all the hard-working people who are going to depend on that for their retirement. It would be a loss of about $28 billion per year. I urge adoption of my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Texas. She has worked with the managers of this legislation. We are prepared to accept this amendment. We thank her for the courtesy, and we hope the membership will support her amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Texas.

The amendment (No. 1415) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1339

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate, equally divided, on amendment No. 1339 offered by the Senator from Louisiana, Mr. VITTER.

The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, this amendment is very simple and straightforward. It would add to the enforcement trigger mechanism of the bill that the US-VISIT Program be fully operational. This is the entry/exit system program that has been authorized since 1996 but has never been put into operation.

As Senator HUTCHISON just mentioned, we all know a huge part of the illegal immigration problem is visa overstays. The latest estimate, in 2006, is that 4 million to 5.5 million visa overstays are illegal immigrants in this country. We cannot get a handle on that problem without the US-VISIT system knowing when people are leaving the country and, thus, whether they are overstaying their visa. Yet that is not part of the enforcement mechanism in the bill at all.

Let's vote for this amendment and make it part of the bill.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, there was no difference among all of us in trying to ensure that we were going to have a secure America. We worked very closely with Secretary Chertoff. In this legislation, we have increased it to 27,000 detention beds, 20,000 border guards, 375 miles of fencing, 275 vehicle barriers, 70 ground-based radars and cameras, sensors, and 4 unmanned aerial vehicles. We accepted the Isakson trigger, saying that the other aspects of this legislation will not go into effect until these are committed. Then we accepted the Gregg additions. We are in the process now of trying to negotiate with the administration to get mandatory spending to make sure all these are done, and done expeditiously.

The Secretary of Homeland Security thinks we have met our responsibilities. I hope the amendment will not be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana.

AMENDMENT NO. 1202

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there is 2 minutes of debate equally divided on amendment No. 1202 offered by the Senator from Illinois, Mr. OBAMA.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, this amendment is very simple. It sunsets after 5 years the points system that has been structured in this bill. I wish to emphasize that I think the authors of this legislation deserve credit for working diligently and coming up with a carefully balanced bill, but the points system we are transitioning to is a radical departure from the one we have had in the past. The question is, do we, after 5 years, take a look and see whether it is working properly? Is it one that is inhibiting families from unifying in this country? Is it something that is making it easier or harder for employers to operate effectively in a lawful fashion?

What this amendment simply says is that after 5 years, we will reexamine the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. OBAMA. I leave it there. I ask my colleagues to support the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time in opposition?

The Senator from South Carolina is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I say to my colleagues who worked to put this bill together, they know what this does. The deal is that in 8 years people will be reunited as families who never would have seen each other for maybe 30 years. We have united families in 8 years. The Z visa people have a chance to start over, but only after the backlog is cleared.

The merit-based system is the vehicle to be used after 8 years so they can come into our system and maybe one day be a citizen and get a green card. If we sunset the merit-based system at 5 years, there is no vehicle left, and to us over here, what would my colleagues say if we sunsetted the Z program in 5 years? My colleagues would walk, and they should.

This is not right. This does not help us as a country.

This destroys the vehicle to solve a problem that has been neglected for 20-something years.

I ask my colleagues to vote no for the sake of the country.

AMENDMENT NO. 1316

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 minutes of debate equally divided on amendment No. 1316 offered by the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. DORGAN.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, will this be the last vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This will be the last vote; that is correct.

The Senator from North Dakota is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, this is a sunset of the temporary worker program in 5 years. It is a new bill, a new program, with more questions than answers. It seems to me that we ought to ask some questions at the end of 5 years.

In the fifth year, we will have 600,000 jobs assumed by temporary workers coming in; in the fourth year, 400,000 jobs, and on and on. So the question is, How many of them are going to leave? What if they do not leave? Are we going to come back to the floor with a new immigration bill, talking about illegal immigration? Why don't we sunset after 5 years to see if this has worked?

Let me make a final point as we vote. We have had a lot of discussion about immigration, but no one on the floor of the Senate is talking about the impact on American workers. All of these jobs the temporary workers will assume are going to compete with people at the bottom of the economic ladder in this country. They are called American workers as well.

Let us sunset this and evaluate what we are doing, what kind of contribution to illegal immigration this will amount to, and what impact it has on American workers. Let us sunset this at the end of 5 years.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this is the third time we have dealt with this issue. As much as I respect the Senator from North Dakota, he doesn't care more about American workers than I do.

The fact is, if you have a secure border, workers are either going to come in through the front door or the back door. If they come in through the back door, as they are now doing, they are going to be exploited and humiliated. If they come through the front door, as a result of the fact that there is no American worker prepared to take that job, they are going to get labor protections, the prevailing wage, OSHA protections, workmen's compensation, and they are going to have those kinds of protections which they do not have now.

You may not like the temporary worker program, but we have to have predictability for a period of time. In the legislation are correcting mechanisms for this program. Let us at least give it a chance to work.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I know the hour is late and we have had a long day. I think it has been a very productive day. Due to the delay in getting amendments actually voted on, of course, the amendment I had voted on this morning had been pending for a full 2 weeks before we were able to secure an agreement to vote.

I ask unanimous consent to call up some of my pending amendments so we can get them pending. I ask unanimous consent that my amendment 1400, which is at the desk, be called up for immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I would have to object. We are in the process of attempting to clear up these. We have had a very full day. I want to thank the Senator from Texas for his cooperation. We will try to address these in an orderly way. We have been trying to process some of these back and forth. I think we have made extraordinary progress today. We are trying to make sure everyone's voice and interests positioned on those issues are going to have an opportunity to be heard. Now I have to object. I will work with the Senator and see if we cannot arrange time for consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I know it has been a long day. But the majority leader has filed a cloture motion which will be voted on tomorrow. There is concern that there are many amendments that have been filed which have not been allowed to be called up and be made pending.

While I think there have been some recent indications that there is more of a willingness to allow amendments to be considered, I am very concerned, because of the procedural posture we will find ourselves in very soon, that some of these amendments will not be allowed to be considered.

I am concerned as well that may very well affect how many of us are required to vote on cloture. I think there has been a recent spirit of cooperation which I hope continues. But if there is going to be an insistence on a vote on cloture, and at the same time a denial of the opportunity of many of us to call up amendments and actually have them considered and voted on, I do not think we will have any alternative but to vote against cloture.

I regret the reluctance to allow us to call up amendments continues at this time. If permitted, I want to call up at least four of my amendments: 1400, 1208, 1337, and 1399. But I understand there has been objection lodged. There likely will be objection lodged to additional unanimous consent requests.

I would note for the record here that there are a lot of other amendments that have not been allowed to be considered, and we have got a lot of work to do before we can consider that everybody has had the opportunity to call up amendments and have them voted on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I would state for the record that last year before cloture was successfully invoked on immigration, the Senate disposed of 30 amendments with 23 rollcall votes. This year, after votes just completed, the Senate has disposed of 41 amendments, with 27 rollcall votes, 11 amendments more than when we last considered this bill under the other party's control. Not counting side-by-side alternative amendments, there have been 18 Democratic amendments offered, compared to 21 Republican amendments. Counting side by sides, it is 21 Democrats, 22 Republicans. So I would say to my friend from Texas, by standards of the last debate on the immigration bill, we have considered 11 more amendments, we have had more rollcall votes, there have been more side by sides and other votes offered from the Republican side than the Democratic side.

So I say at this point this has been a fair and complete process. It is now 12:20 in the morning. We have worked a long day; probably have 2 long days ahead of us. But to argue that Members have not had their chance to express themselves through the amendment process is not reflected in the actual vote.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I do not dispute the numbers. They are what they are. But I would point out that this bill did not go through the Judiciary Committee. Last year when the McCain-Kennedy amendment and the bill considered in the Judiciary Committee, I believe there were 62 amendments filed. I think there were a lot more filed than that, but actually 62 amendments. So there was a process at the Judiciary Committee level last year which gave people an opportunity to have their positions heard. That has not been the case this year. I would point that out as an obvious point of distinction. I hope there is not going to be any attempt to try to force this bill through before Senators are ready to consider all or at least a reasonable number of amendments, because I do not think we will have any alternative but to vote against cloture, to allow debate to continue and allow additional amendments to be heard.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, in the interests of allowing Senator CORNYN and other Senators to offer amendments, I make a unanimous consent request that cloture votes be postponed tomorrow until 4 p.m. so Senator CORNYN and others who wish to can offer amendments before the cloture vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I believe a demonstration of willingness to allow us to call up amendments and have them debated and actually voted on would have been reflected in the last 2 weeks. As I have pointed out, I was denied for a full 2 weeks an opportunity to have the very first amendment I called up actually scheduled for a vote. I know the distinguished deputy majority leader is acting in good faith. But I think we need to have a vote on that cloture motion at the time it is currently scheduled. So I would respectfully object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I have offered amendments on a number of occasions and had asked those amendments be made pending, and set aside the pending business to make certain amendments pending. I have had objection.

At this time I once again ask that amendment No. 1323, which we referred to as the Charlie Norwood amendment, that deals with empowering State and local law enforcement officers to participate through the normal process, if they choose, be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DURBIN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, it is pretty clear what has been occurring is very few amendments have had the opportunity to get a real debate. This is an important amendment. It deals with whether local law enforcement can actually participate in any meaningful way in the enforcement of Federal immigration laws. I will tell you what the facts are, with the help from my fine staff chief counsel, Cindy Hayden.

We wrote a law review article for Stanford University Law School that dealt with this issue, and it is a very important issue. It is one well-understood by the legal professionals who have been behind the scenes crafting this legislation.

The ninth circuit has held that visa overstays, which make up 40, maybe 45 percent, and in the future, if this bill becomes law, maybe more than 50 percent of the people illegally in the country, would be visa overstays.

Those persons, if involved in some traffic accident, like many of the terrorists were before 9/11—they were stopped for traffic violations by local police officers, but because that is not a normal criminal violation, as is the case for people who have come across the border, they are not detainable under the ninth circuit ruling by local police officers.

So it is a weird thing. Several other circuits seem to have held differently. But the ninth circuit case was most on point. Lawyers for police departments all over America are telling their police departments: You may not have authority to hold anybody, so even if you apprehend someone you are concerned about who could even be a terrorist, like those people involved in 9/11, or like John Malvo, who was involved in those murders, was stopped for traffic violations, we do not have a system in place to even allow local police to detain them for even a short period of time until they are turned over to the Federal authorities.

That is the way the system ought to work. There are 600,000 to 800,000 State and local law enforcement officers in America. We are not trying to mandate that they do anything. But in the course of their business, their normal duties, if they come upon people in violation of the law, they ought to be able to hold them and turn them over to the Federal authorities.

I am disappointed we are not getting to move forward on that amendment, very disappointed. We had this matter sort of fixed in Judiciary Committee last year. Then an amendment came up—somebody figured out the significance of it, and that amendment took it out. Ever since, any effort to get that to be made a part of this fix has been undermined and blocked.

I say to my colleagues, I do not believe anybody can say they have a commitment to having an enforceable immigration system if they throw roadblocks up that undermine the ability of State and local law enforcement to participate in their normal course of their duties by detaining people they come upon who are here illegally. You would think that would be an easy thing to get done. I have said before, it seems when it comes to immigration, many things can be accepted, many things people approve of. But if you come up with something that actually is very effective, that is what gets objected to. This is something that is critical. It is a testament and a test of our will and our seriousness as a body.

If we are not prepared to pass legislation like the Norwood amendment, named after former House Member Charlie Norwood from Georgia, who died recently, if we are not prepared to do that, we are not serious about this.

I will say one more thing. Time and time and time again, I have heard Members of this body say: Oh, we cannot vote for this amendment, or you must vote against that amendment. Why? Because we have an agreement. A compromise. It violates our compromise. Well, who was in on that compromise? I am frankly getting tired of that. That is not satisfactory to me.

The question really should be, is this amendment good or not good for the legitimate interests of the Nation? No one small group of people have a right to meet in secret with special interest groups and write an immigration bill and ram it down the throat of this Senate. I oppose it. It is not right. You can agree or disagree on these amendments, but do so on the merits, whether or not it actually makes sense, not on some deal made by some advocacy group or some business interest. That is not what this Senate is all about.

I hope today the people will begin to see that a small group of Senators who meet in secret and plot out a bill, that if printed in actual bill language would be 1,000 pages, don't have the power to say we can't have amendments and we can't change it, and if you do get an amendment up, we are all going to stick together and vote it down because it doesn't comply with our little compromise.

The masters of the universe are playing a tough game here. I have called them that affectionately. I respect the Members who have attempted to do what maybe they thought was right. But when you look at the bill, it is a product of a political compromise. A group of politicians met in secret and wrote a bill that is exceedingly technical, exceedingly important.

Let me tell you who was not there in this meeting. The American people were not there. Who was advocating for the American people?

I will tell you another group who was not there. That is the law enforcement agencies that are charged with enforcing our laws at the border. They weren't there. As a matter of fact, they had a press conference a couple of days ago. They were at the national press club and made a presentation. These are senior retired officials who had many decades of experience in enforcing our laws at the border. They uniformly condemn this legislation, as do the Border Patrol Agents Association. They condemn it roundly. Hugh Brien, himself an immigrant, became chief of the Border Patrol from 1986 to 1989. I started making notes on C-SPAN the night before last. I just happened to turn it on. He said this bill is a "sell out, a complete betrayal of the nation, a slap in the face to millions coming here legally."

He referred to the people in 1986 who passed the 1986 act and promised it would do things as our masters and our mandarins, who said the bill was going to work and it never worked. He said:

Based on my experience, it's a disaster.

Kurt Lundgren, national chairman of the Association of Former Border Patrol Agents said this:

There are no meaningful criminal or terrorist checks in the bill.

He said:

Screening will not happen.

He said:

Congress is lying about it.

With regard to the proposal that record checks would be performed within 24 hours, he said:

There's no way records can be done in 24 hours. As to the proposal that Senator CORNYN tried to fix that allows gang members, MS-13 international gang organization groups to get amnesty by simply saying they renounce their allegiance to the gang, he said:

What planet are they from?

Jim Dorcy, an agent for 30 years and inspector general with the Department of Justice that handled investigations into all these areas involving the Border Patrol, internal investigations, he said:

The 24-hour check is a recipe for disaster.

Referring to the bill, Mr. Dorcy, 30 years with the Border Patrol said:

I call it the al-Qaida dream bill.

Roger Brandemuehl, chief of the Border Patrol from 1980 to 1986, second one I am calling on here that was chief of it, said:

We have fallen into a quagmire.

He said:

The so-called comprehensive reform is neither comprehensive nor reform.

He said:

It's flawed.

He set forth some principles that he thought would actually work. When asked had he been consulted by the masters of the universe who cobbled this bill together, a bunch of politicians who have never arrested anybody in their lives, they joked about it. They never have been consulted. Nobody wanted to know what they knew or cared about.

I will just wrap up and say I am not comfortable with the way this bill is going. I think we have been slow-walked in the way the majority leader and the group that is trying to move this bill forward is doing this. They are objecting to having amendments pending. So when cloture is filed, if an amendment is not pending, it fails. It can't be voted on postcloture. So this way they have been able to maintain control over the amendment process and will be able to maintain it, even if cloture is obtained tomorrow. I don't know what will happen tomorrow, but I know this: There are a lot of good amendments. I have seen some of the amendments Senator CORNYN has that are important. I know some of the amendments I have are important to having a good, lawful immigration system. There remain major flaws in this legislation. We should not pass it in its present form.

In rebuttal to the constant refrain that somehow this bill is going to end the lawlessness and create a lawful system, I point out that the Congressional Budget Office, just 2 years ago, issued their analysis of the bill and concluded there would only be a 25-percent reduction in the number of people coming into our country illegally. We have gone through all this, and we are only going to get a 25-percent reduction in the number of people who come here illegally, when we arrested last year over a million people. What kind of system is this?

I wish the principles and goals contained in the talking points that were bandied about early on in this process could have been achieved. I had hoped they would and said some good things about it because I thought some of the principles involved in this year's process were a bit better than last year, but the truth is, when you read the fine print, very little progress was made in those directions, and the major flaws continue. I just wish it weren't so. But that is my opinion of it. I don't think we are on the road to improving the bill. I don't think we are proceeding effectively to allow full debate and amendment.

I yield the floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 1311, AS MODIFIED, TO
AMENDMENT NO. 1150

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Good morning, Mr. President.

On behalf of Senator COBURN, I call up amendment No. 1311 and ask that the amendment be modified with the changes at the desk and then be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

(1) IN GENERAL.—If a Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement is made by the President under this section, subtitle A of title IV, title V, and subtitles A through C of title VI of this Act shall not be implemented unless, during the first 90-calendar day period of continuous session of the Congress after the date of the receipt by the Congress of such notice of Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement, the Congress passes a Resolution of Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement in accordance with this subsection, and such resolution is enacted into law.

(2) PROCEDURES APPLICABLE TO THE SENATE.—

(A) RULEMAKING AUTHORITY.—The provisions under this paragraph are enacted by Congress—

(i) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate, and as such they are deemed a part of the rules of the Senate, but applicable only with respect to the procedure to be followed in the Senate in the case of a Resolution of Immigration Enforcement, and such provisions supersede other rules of the Senate only to the extent that they are inconsistent with such other rules; and

(ii) with full recognition of the constitutional right of the Senate to change the rules (so far as relating to the procedure of the Senate) at any time, in the same manner, and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of the Senate.

(B) INTRODUCTION; REFERRAL.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Not later than the first day on which the Senate is in session following the day on which any notice of Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement is received by the Congress, a Resolution of Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement shall be introduced (by request) in the Senate by either the Majority Leader or Minority Leader. If such resolution is not introduced as provided in the preceding sentence, any Senator may introduce such resolution on the third day on which the Senate is in session after the date or receipt of the Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement.

(ii) REFERRAL.—Upon introduction, a Resolution of Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement shall be referred jointly to each of the committees having jurisdiction over the subject matter referenced in the Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement by the President of the Senate. Upon the expiration of 60 days of continuous session after the introduction of the Resolution of Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement, each committee to which such resolution was referred shall make its recommendations to the Senate.

(iii) DISCHARGE.—If any committee to which is referred a resolution introduced under paragraph (2)(A) has not reported such resolution at the end of 60 days of continuous session of the Congress after introduction of such resolution, such committee shall be discharged from further consideration of such resolution, and such resolution shall be placed on the legislative calendar of the Senate.

(C) CONSIDERATION.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—When each committee to which a resolution has been referred has reported, or has been discharged from further consideration of, a resolution described in paragraph (2)(C), it shall at any time thereafter be in order (even though a previous motion to the same effect has been disagreed to) for any Member of the Senate to move to proceed to the consideration of such resolution. Such motion shall not be debatable. If a motion to proceed to the consideration of such resolution is agreed to, such resolution shall remain the unfinished business of the Senate until the disposition of such resolution.

(ii) DEBATE.—Debate on a resolution, and on all debatable motions and appeals in connection with such resolution, shall be limited to not more than 30 hours, which shall be divided equally between Members favoring and Members opposing such resolution. A motion to further limit debate shall be in order and shall not be debatable. The resolution shall not be subject to amendment, to a motion to postpone, or to a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business. A motion to recommit such resolution shall not be in order.

(iii) FINAL VOTE.—Immediately following the conclusion of the debate on a resolution of approval, and a single quorum call at the conclusion of such debate if requested in accordance with the rules of the Senate, the vote on such resolution shall occur.

(iv) APPEALS.—Appeals from the decisions of the Chair relating to the application of the rules of the Senate to the procedure relating to a resolution of approval shall be limited to 1 hour of debate.

(D) RECEIPT OF A RESOLUTION FROM THE HOUSE.—If the Senate receives from the House of Representatives a Resolution of Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement, the following procedures shall apply:

(i) The resolution of the House of Representatives shall not be referred to a committee and shall be placed on the Senate calendar, except that it shall not be in order to consider such resolution on the calendar received by the House of Representatives until such time as the Committee reports such resolution or is discharged from further consideration of a resolution, pursuant to this title.

(ii) With respect to the disposition by the Senate with respect to such resolution, on any vote on final passage of a resolution of the Senate with respect to such approval, a resolution from the House of Representatives with respect to such measures shall be automatically substituted for the resolution of the Senate.

(3) PROCEDURES APPLICABLE TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—

(A) RULEMAKING AUTHORITY.—The provisions of this paragraph are enacted by Congress—

(i) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the House of Representatives, and as such they are deemed a part of the rules of the House of Representatives, but applicable only with respect to the procedure to be followed in the House of Representatives in the case of Resolutions of Certification Immigration Enforcement, and such provisions supersede other rules of the House of Representatives only to the extent that they are inconsistent with such other rules; and

(ii) with full recognition of the constitutional right of the House of Representatives to change the rules (so far as relating to the procedure of the House of Representatives) at any time, in the same manner, and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of the House of Representatives.

(B) INTRODUCTION; REFERRAL.—Resolutions of certification shall upon introduction, be immediately referred by the Speaker of the House of Representatives to the appropriate committee or committees of the House of Representatives. Any such resolution received from the Senate shall be held at the Speaker's table.

(C) DISCHARGE.—Upon the expiration of 60 days of continuous session after the introduction of the first resolution of certification with respect to any measure, each committee to which such resolution was referred shall be discharged from further consideration of such resolution, and such resolution shall be referred to the appropriate calendar, unless such resolution or an identical resolution was previously reported by each committee to which it was referred.

(D) CONSIDERATION.—It shall be in order for the Speaker to recognize a Member favoring a resolution to call up a resolution of certification after it has been on the appropriate calendar for 5 legislative days. When any such resolution is called up, the House of Representatives shall proceed to its immediate consideration and the Speaker shall recognize the Member calling up such resolution and a Member opposed to such resolution for 10 hours of debate in the House of Representatives, to be equally divided and controlled by such Members. When such time has expired, the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution to adoption without intervening motion. No amendment to any such resolution shall be in order, nor shall it be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which such resolution is agreed to or disagreed to.

(E) RECEIPT OF RESOLUTION FROM SENATE.—If the House of Representatives receives from the Senate a Resolution of Certification Immigration Enforcement, the following procedures shall apply:

(i) Such resolution shall not be referred to a committee.

(ii) With respect to the disposition of the House of Representatives with respect to such resolution—

(I) the procedure with respect to that or other resolutions of the House of Representatives shall be the same as if no resolution from the Senate with respect to such resolution had been received; but

(II) on any vote on final passage of a resolution of the House of Representatives with respect to such measures, a resolution from the Senate with respect to such resolution if the text is identical shall be automatically substituted for the resolution of the House of Representatives.

(i) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) PRESIDENTIAL CERTIFICATION OF IMMIGRATION ENFORCEMENT.—The term "Presidential Certification of Immigration Enforcement" means the certification required under this section, which is signed by the President, and reads as follows:

"Pursuant to the provisions set forth in section 1 of the Secure Borders, Economic Opportunity, and Immigration Reform Act of 2007 (the 'Act'), I do hereby transmit the Certification of Immigration Enforcement, certify that the borders of the United States are substantially secure, and certify that the following provisions of the Act have been fully implemented, and the border security measures set forth in this section are fully operational."

(1) U.S. CUSTOMS AND BORDER PROTECTION OFFICERS.—In each of the fiscal years 2008 through 2012, the Secretary shall, subject to the availability of appropriations, increase by not less than 501 the number of positions for full-time active duty CBP officers and provide appropriate training, equipment, and support to such additional CBP officers.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I rise to clarify the record of my vote on Binghamman amendment No. 1267. I intended to vote against the amendment. I do not support the amendment and I wish to explain why.

The Binghamman amendment No. 1267 would have allowed certain future legal temporary workers to renew their work visas from the United States, rather than being required to leave the country for a period of time to reapply. In order to have a true temporary worker program, workers must only come to the U.S. for a season and then return to their home country. If workers are instead permitted to stay in the U.S., they will likely establish economic and familial roots, and will not want to leave when their legal visa has expired. People who want to take part in our society should seek legal citizenship, rather than extending upon an agreement that was intended to be temporary. I encourage those who have respected our laws and want to live in our country to apply for a green card and become a U.S. citizen.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

63RD ANNIVERSARY OF D-DAY

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I stand before you to honor the memory of the heroes who sacrificed their lives on the beaches of Normandy 63 years ago today. It was these brave men who stared into the face of the stark unknown and forged on to military victory. Supreme Allied Commander and future President Dwight D. Eisenhower led the decisive invasion, now known as D-day, that brought liberation throughout Europe.

It was on June 6, 1944, at 6:30 a.m., that the first assault wave of a great armada rolled onto the beaches of Normandy, France. Operation Overlord commenced and everyone involved knew there was no turning back. And while the size and scope of the operation were colossal, so were the risks. The success of the battle hinged on the element of surprise, and with literally thousands of men involved in the planning, its secrecy hinged on those same men. It is clear these men were the epitome of unfailing loyalty, courage, and solidarity. The invasion had been postponed a day due to weather, and it was only after assurances from a meteorologist that conditions would improve that General Eisenhower agreed to proceed. But still, cloudy skies caused drop zones to be overshot, and more than half of the equipment to be parachuted in was lost. But soldiers persisted, risks paid off, and bravery triumphed over peril. On that dangerous early morning, following a treacherous English Channel crossing, 150,000 Allied troops took the shore, and 100,000 continued inland. Mr. President, 9,000 men were lost that day, but it went down in history as the decisive battle that turned the tide of the war.

I am proud to bring your attention to what these men did. And as I recognize their valor on this remarkable anniversary, I think it is both fitting and necessary to recognize the valor of our troops in battle today who are no less brave, and who face uncertainty and risk, as did those who fought for freedom in the Second World War. I wish I could stand up here and draw other comparisons between these two wars—WWII and the global war on terror—and between the threats of Nazism and terrorism, because it is without a doubt that World War II, despite our human losses, brought a unity of cause to our Nation, and that would be a great place for us to be again. But the fact is that we are in a different world and a different century; we face a different enemy, and, most of all, our Nation has tremendous differences on how to deal with this enemy.

However, as with the heroism demonstrated by our fighting forces both then and now, there are other unmistakable parallels. The invasion on D-day marked a pivotal time in history when the outcome was uncertain. The great generals going into battle had faith and trust in their troops, but knew their bold strategy carried with it great risk. Just before the invasion, MG Leroy Watson, commander of the 3rd Armored Division, sent his troops this message:

This is the greatest military operation in the history of the world. Its success or failure will determine the course of events for the next hundred years.

General Eisenhower, also uncertain about the outcome, prepared a letter which he never had to deliver, accepting responsibility for the loss. He expected catastrophic failure and military victory. He wrote to his troops:

My decision to attack at this time and place was based upon the best information available. The troops, the Air and the Navy did all that bravery and devotion to duty could do.

The leaders knew the danger, but also knew the consequences of failure. In Iraq, and in the fight against terrorism, we must continue to stay the course, because the stakes of not winning are too high, and, as was the case on D-day, we are again in a pivotal time in history. And again, the outcome will surely determine the course of events for the remainder of this century.

D-day was a tremendous battle, with thousands of casualties over the course of a day. It was a time of great loss for our Nation. And amidst those losses stand stories of bravery, individual valor and resounding brotherhood—stories that enveloped the historic battle and personalized it for a nation. And I can tell you that the soldiers I met in Iraq, and the troops whose stories I heard at Fort Benning and Fort Stewart, will be remembered in the annals of our Nation as warriors who are as brave, as strong, and as committed as the heroes of D-day we remember today.

And the Generals who led these brave men will also never be forgotten. World War II saw Eisenhower, Patton, Marshall and Bradley—all of these men have secured their places in history. And today and in the future we will remember the legacies of Petraeus, Odierno, McChrystal, and Fallon—generals and admirals whose leadership, ingenuity, courage and forthrightness are shaping the Iraq strategy, and no doubt its military outcome.

So in drawing these parallels, my conclusion is that in the history of war, there are some constants: the bravery of soldiers, the uncertainty of battle, the value of leadership, and the necessity of victory. These things never change. They were evident on June 6, 1944, and they are evident today. And so it is on the 63rd anniversary of D-day, the decisive battle of World War II, that I recognize the heroes who fought, lived, and died valiantly. And I thank them and their families for setting an example and standard our warriors remember on the battlefield today, and for creating a generation that is willing and able to set the same standard and example for our heroes of tomorrow. I hope that our men and women in uniform serving around the world today will draw courage from the example of those who have gone before them as they execute the responsibilities we as a nation have trusted them to carry out.

TRIBUTE TO WILLIAM "BILL" FRANCE, JR.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. President, I wish to speak today to pay tribute to a great Floridian, Bill France, Jr.—a man who lived the American dream, a man who literally turned an idea and hard work into a multibillion dollar national exhibition we today know as NASCAR.

Bill France was a great Floridian in many other ways as well. He was someone who contributed greatly to his local community of Daytona Beach, FL, as well as to the State of Florida at large. Mr. France left us at his home in Daytona Beach, when he passed away earlier this week after a long and difficult battle with cancer.

What we in Florida know, and what the news reports confirmed immediately following his death, is that Bill made NASCAR everything it is today: The sold-out races, the national network television coverage, the regalia and the memorabilia—it all can be credited to this man and his love of the sport.

Born right here in the Nation's capital, Bill France moved as a young man with his family, Bill France, Sr., and his mother Anne to Daytona Beach, FL, in 1935 to escape the Great Depression. With $100 in his pocket, Bill, Sr., started a new life for his family in Florida, setting up an auto repair shop and quickly taking a great interest in racing. In 1938, he would set up the Daytona Beach Road Course, and from there, as they say, the rest is history.

This course he set up back in those days was so unique, and to see photographs of it is one of those things that one can only harken back to the old Florida that is no more. But the races were essentially conducted on the strip of sand in Daytona Beach. They would circle around A1A, the strip of highway that was there at the time, and then circle back around on to the beach. The spectators would sit there on the beach side and watch these cars as they raced literally on the beach.

Bill, Jr., spent his young life around the racetrack and worked toward the legacy his father had begun to build. He worked on cars, helped out during races, and beginning in 1956, he worked every day of the week for more than a year on the construction of the Daytona International Speedway.

In 1972, Bill, Jr., took the reins of the racing organization that his father had helped to found in 1948 and took the risks and made the decisions that took NASCAR to a whole new level.

The International Motorsports Hall of Fame describes it this way:

Other than the founding of NASCAR itself, Bill, Jr.'s appointment to leadership is probably the most significant event in the history of the sanctioning body. As rule-maker, promoter, ambassador and salesman, France has set the standard by which all other forms of motor sports are measured. He has taken it from a regional sport to a national sport, and nurtured its growing popularity on television, culminating in a record-setting $2.4 billion broadcast contract.

He served for a quarter century leading NASCAR to unbelievable heights and set the stage for what it has become today.

I know I speak for hundreds of thousands of fans, the drivers, the pit crews and anyone and everyone who enjoys NASCAR, as well as Floridians and Daytona Beach residents, when I say a well deserved "thank you" to Bill France, Jr., for making our weekends a lot more exciting, more enjoyable, and a lot faster. Florida thanks you for your vision, Bill. We will miss you, but you leave behind a legacy we will never forget.

REMEMBERING SENATOR CRAIG THOMAS

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, today I rise to honor Senator Craig Thomas, who, very sadly, passed away Monday evening. As all of us in the Senate know, Craig was a respected Member of this body. A number of my colleagues have made very kind remarks on the floor about their relationship with Craig. While I have not served as long in the Senate as have many of my colleagues who knew and worked with Craig over the years, I did have an opportunity to get to know him since being elected to the Senate in 2004.

I think one of the most important things we have all witnessed with Craig's passing is the outpouring of support and stories about the people he impacted in the Senate, in Wyoming, and across the country.

Without question, the Senate is a lesser place today without Craig's presence. One of the clearest indications of any politician's popularity is his or her support back home. Craig's leadership as the senior member of the Wyoming delegation was overwhelming—primarily due to the confidence he earned from his constituents back in Wyoming. That confidence was something he fought to keep since first being elected to Congress back in 1989.

Craig's battle with leukemia was very indicative of the way he led his life and how he worked on behalf of his State and our Nation. I also believe if his diagnosis hadn't been made public following his reelection last November, I doubt anybody would have known of the battle he waged as he underwent his chemotherapy treatments.

Craig did timeless work on behalf of the citizens of Wyoming and our Nation. His absence from the Senate will be greatly felt. Kimberley and I are deeply saddened by Craig's passing and extend our prayers to Susan and her family. Craig's hard work over the years on behalf of Wyoming and our Nation is a testament to his character and gives all of us something to strive for.

Craig Thomas was a man of the people. He was a Wyoming original. He represented the very heart and soul of the people of his State and of our Nation. He personified hard work and integrity. He was a "what you see is what you get" kind of a guy. Wyoming and America are a better place because of his service.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I join the many Senators who have paid tribute to our colleague Craig Thomas. Many of my colleagues have come to the floor since Senator Thomas's passing, and it is clear how many friends he had in this Chamber and how well everyone thought of him and the work he did.

We all knew him as a hard-working Member of the Senate who quickly earned his colleagues' respect. That respect was grounded in the way Craig Thomas served his country throughout his life. He spent 4 years in the U.S. Marine Corps and served in the Wyoming State Legislature, the U.S. House of Representatives, and since 1995, the U.S. Senate.

During his years in the Senate, Senator Thomas served Wyoming with great dedication. Raised on a ranch, Senator Thomas understood the concerns of rural Americans, and I appreciated his efforts in the Senate to stand up for the people who keep our rural communities strong. That is an important concern in my State, and I know it is in Wyoming as well.

I was very pleased to work with him to improve competition and fair treatment for farmers and ranchers. I know that he was committed to giving farmers and ranchers a fair shake in the marketplace, and his constituents appreciated that dedication.

Senator Thomas also worked on a range of health care issues important to rural Americans. He well understood the challenges that people in rural areas face as they seek access to health care services and helped to address those concerns. The Senate benefited from his leadership as cochair of the Senate's Rural Health Caucus, where he showed tremendous commitment to these issues. He led the push to maintain full funding for several rural health discretionary programs, and I am grateful for his efforts. That was just one of the many ways he contributed to the work of the Senate and served the people of Wyoming.

As we remember Senator Thomas, we can all be grateful for the life he led and his outstanding service to the Senate and to our country. To his wife, his family, his staff, and his many friends, I offer my condolences and my deepest sympathies.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I rise to join others in paying tribute to a wonderful colleague, Senator Craig Thomas. Tragically, last night, he lost his battle with leukemia. I want to send my heartfelt condolences to his wife Susan, his children, Patrick, Greg, Peter, and Lexie, and to his staff.

Since January, I had the pleasure to serve with Senator Thomas on the Finance Committee. I found him to be a hard-working Senator and very concerned about his constituents' struggling to get health care in rural areas.

I also had a chance to work with him last year on the Michigan Lighthouse and Maritime Heritage Act. This legislation sets up a process whereby the National Park Service would work with the State of Michigan to create a lighthouse tourist trail.

As my colleagues know, he was chairman of the National Parks Subcommittee, which had jurisdiction over this legislation. During consideration of this bill, he was helpful to me and the people of Michigan even though these lighthouses are thousands of miles away from his home. He held a hearing on this legislation, worked with me to get it to the floor and ultimately to the President's desk.

On behalf of the people of Michigan, we appreciate his support of this legislation.

Senator Thomas was a wonderful man—kind and decent to everyone. We will all miss him.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. President, with a combination of great sadness and admiration, I join my colleagues in honoring the life of Craig Thomas, a person of strength, passion, and integrity.

Those who have had the blessing of traveling to the State of Wyoming appreciate its amazing beauty and variety. Craig Thomas reflected the geography of his State. He could be as peaceful and serene as Wyoming's rolling prairie grass lands, and he could be as striking and powerful as its majestic mountains.

Growing up, he learned the creative dynamic of frontier life: rugged individualism joined with an ethic of neighbor-helping-neighbor when the need was great.

In this sometimes stuffy and frustrating Washington world, he was a fresh breeze of unconventionality. He maintained his Wyoming vision of life throughout many years in this city, and the people of Wyoming deeply appreciated his strong immunity to the political disease called Potomac Fever.

Craig Thomas lived a very meaningful life and made the State and country he loved a better place to live in. From his young days as a marine to his last days as a Senator, his heart was service and he put everything he had into making a difference for generations to come.

Because of his service here, our national parks are a legacy that will be passed to future generations in better shape than he found them. Because of his fiscal conservatism, fewer dollars of debt will be passed on to our children. Because of his vision and integrity, a model of public service will be available to those who come after.

Laurie and I send our prayers to the Thomas family. We thank them and the people of Wyoming for sharing Senator Thomas with the Nation.

Every one of us on this floor can learn a lesson from his life and remember Craig Thomas by living the values and commitments he taught us.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, when Craig Thomas passed away on Monday evening, the U.S. Senate lost more than a Member; our institution has lost a good man and I a good friend—someone who was proud to be called an American cowboy. Sharon and I extend our deepest sympathy to his wife Susan, his family, his friends, his staff, and the people of Wyoming whom he served with such complete dedication.

Over the last few years, I worked closely with Senator Thomas. I came to know him well and came to respect him enormously. We both represented small, rural States with critical constituencies—his most emblematic being the farmer, mine the miner. We both maintained a deep commitment to our home States. Perhaps most importantly, we both had a history of public service.

Throughout our careers, I would say that we had a very good partnership. We served together on the Senate Finance Committee and fought to make this country more independent of foreign energy, to promote the development of clean coal technologies, and to preserve the rural American lifestyle.

Through it all, I greatly liked and admired Senator Thomas and appreciated him for the fine human being he was. He was a man of strong principle, one who knew the bottom line and didn't hesitate to consult his colleagues on the other side of the aisle. What I will remember most about him, however, wasn't his ability to work with his so-called foes or our tough fights in the Senate, but for his deep affinity for the beauty of this country.

In fact, over the years, when I have traveled to Wyoming and looked up at that towering, earthly skyline of the Grand Tetons, I have often thought of Craig.

Craig, after all, was perhaps one of the people who shared my deep love of the Grand Tetons. It was in those mountains and the Gros Ventre that we found a common bond. Together, we exchanged our marvels about the alpine lakes, the cutting glaciers, wind-swept glaciers and sparkling rivers.

I will never forget his advice on enjoying the beauty of Jackson Hole or his stories about long horseback rides or camping in the cool shadows of the mountains. I will never forget his interest in the wildlife and his appreciation for the foliage. Nor will I forget how passionately he protected the autonomy of the park, and how much he cherished the culture and beauty of his home.

Senator Craig Thomas held my deepest respect; and, to his family and the people of Wyoming, I offer my deepest sympathies. He was a valuable public servant, a true fighter and a friend—and, more than anything, a true American.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to our colleague, our friend, and a great statesman, Senator Craig Thomas.

It is a somber day in the Senate Chamber as we mourn this loss.

His passing leaves a significant mark on the many lives he touched throughout his life. On behalf of myself and my wife Annette, I send my deepest sympathies to his wife Susan, his four children, and the entire Thomas family.

Craig was an influential force in the Senate for the people of Wyoming, as well as a thoughtful leader on national issues.

Craig served the people of Wyoming with distinction and honor.

His roots in the State ran deep, and Wyoming had no greater advocate. He has built his reputation as a fiscal conservative while focusing on the unique issues affecting the American west.

He was honest, humble, good natured, and loyal. It was these characteristics that he brought to the Senate and to his work. He was an effective leader because he believed you could get a lot accomplished when you did not care who took the credit.

Craig was committed to the values and principles he believed in deeply. He loved his State, and it showed. He was committed to protecting our Nation's natural resources, improving the lives of those in rural America, and a leader in advocating a sound national energy policy.

It was my true privilege to have served with Craig over the past 13 years in the Senate. While we continue to mourn his passing, we should try to carry on with the same determination and energy he brought every day to the challenges he faced.

He will be remembered as a dedicated American, a marine, a public servant, and the quintessential American cowboy who gave so much of his life in service to the Nation.

I offer my thoughts and prayers to those close to Craig in this difficult time, especially to his family.

ENERGY INDEPENDENCE

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, today I come to the floor to discuss some of the changes that need to be made to our national energy policy. The simple truth is, our country is headed down the wrong energy path. Our current path has led to record-high electricity and gas prices. These prices are not only hurting ordinary families, they are also hurting businesses who are seeing their costs go up dramatically. The growth of energy-intensive industries such as manufacturing is actually being stunted due to skyrocketing electricity costs. We already know the negative global impacts our current energy path is having on our environment. It is clear we can't continue down this energy path anymore. It is not good policy. It is not good economic policy, and it is not good environmental policy.

Mr. President, I will be introducing a bill that will lead the Nation down a path to a better, cleaner, more independent energy economy, a path that takes us away from higher electric bills and leads to new opportunities for investment and innovation, more jobs, and more economic development. As the chart beside me illustrates, 52 percent of our electricity is currently generated from coal; 15 percent is from natural gas; 3 percent from petroleum; 20 percent from nuclear; 7 percent from hydro; and 3 percent from renewable energy. Clearly, this is not a diversified energy portfolio. Clearly, something needs to be done about rising energy costs.

It is estimated that Americans will spend over $200 billion more on energy this year than last year. That is an increase of nearly 25 percent. The bill will allow us to meet our future electricity needs. It will allow us to diversify our electricity supply. It will allow us to reduce the vulnerability of our energy system, and it will allow us to stabilize electricity prices, protect the environment, and most of all, stimulate the economies of rural America.

It is time to act. It is time to pass an aggressive renewable electricity standard, one requiring that all electricity providers would have to generate or purchase 25 percent of their electricity from renewable sources by the year 2025. Twenty-two States throughout the country have already demonstrated the value of establishing renewable electricity standards.

This chart shows what is going on around the country. I am looking at Rhode Island, to try one State, a 16-percent standard by 2019. You see California, 20 percent by 2010. You see Washington, 15 percent by 2020. All over the country, we see a change afoot. The checkered States are ones that have voluntary goals, such as Illinois. The striped States have standard goals, and the green States actually have standards put into law.

While the States are already heading down the path toward the new "green economy," the Federal Government has not even made it to the trail head. The Federal Government is stuck in the fossil age.

I am proud to say my State of Minnesota is further down the path than any other State. In February, the Democratic Minnesota State legislature passed and our Republican Governor signed into law what is considered the Nation's most aggressive standard for promoting renewable energy in electricity production. It is a "25-by-25" standard. By the year 2025, the State's energy companies are required to generate 25 percent of their electricity from renewable sources such as wind, water, solar, and biomass. The standard is even higher for the State's largest utility, Excel Energy, which must reach 30 percent by 2020. The CEO has been in my office and said it is going to be tough but they are going to make it, and they are going to be able to meet this goal without raising rates.

I admire what the States and communities and businesses are doing across the country. I admire them for their inspiration, and I admire them for their initiative. There is a famous phrase: the "laboratories of democracy." That is how Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis described the special role of States in our Federal system.

In this model, States are where new ideas emerge, where policymakers can experiment, where innovative proposals can be tested.

Brandeis wrote over 70 years ago:

It is one of the happy incidents of the federal system that a single courageous state may, if its citizens choose, serve as a laboratory; and try novel social and economic experiments without risk to the rest of the country.

But he did not mean for this to serve as an excuse for inaction by the Federal Government. Good ideas and successful innovations are supposed to emerge from the laboratory and serve as a model for national policy and action. That is now our responsibility in Congress.

The courage we are seeing in the States, as they deal with global warming, climate change, should be matched by courage in Washington, DC. We should be prepared to act on a national level, especially when the States and local communities are showing us the way.

Now there is an opportunity for the Federal Government to act. It is time for the Federal Government to begin moving toward an aggressive national standard—on par with Minnesota's 25-by-25 standard.

There are many economic benefits of this aggressive standard. Yet, perhaps most importantly, an aggressive national standard opens the door to a new electricity industry that will bring thousands of jobs and pump billions of dollars into our economy.

Over the last 20 years, America's renewable energy industries—and the wind industry in particular—have achieved significant technological advancements. The industries for solar, wind, and biomass energy systems are expanding at rates exceeding 30 percent annually.

The clean water revolution is still in its infancy. I think of it like the beginnings of the computer revolution when the computer used to take up an entire room. Now they are much cheaper, and they are much more efficient. That is what is happening with our green technology. But it will not happen unless we get into the act and set the standards as they should be.

Businesses are coming on board. CEOs of major corporations such as DuPont, Duke Energy, and General Electric see the opportunities. High-tech entrepreneurs in our country want to develop the green technologies before they do it in India and Japan. It is already starting.

Nationally, venture capital investments in "green" or "clean" technologies have increased dramatically. Last year, venture capital investment in green technologies reached an impressive $2.9 billion. From 2001 to 2006, there was a 243 percent increase in green technology venture capital investments.

Not only is clean technology the fastest growing venture capital sector, it is now the third largest category—behind only biotech and computer software.

The economic benefits are not just limited to high-risk investors. In September of 2004, the Union of Concerned Scientists used the Energy Information Administration's National Energy Modeling System to examine the costs and benefits of an aggressive national standard. Their analysis found an aggressive national standard would reduce electric and natural gas prices and provide significant economic benefits for all of America.

For example, as you can see from this chart, an aggressive national standard would create 355,000 new jobs—nearly twice as many as generating electricity from fossil fuels.

We would see economic development, such as $72.6 billion in new capital investment; $16.2 billion in income to farmers, ranchers, and rural landowners; $5 billion in new local tax revenue. We would see consumer savings. We would see $49 billion in lower electricity and natural gas bills. We would have a healthier environment. We would see reductions in global warming, pollution equal to taking nearly 71 million cars off the road. We would see less air pollution, less damage to land, and better water use.

So while traditional manufacturing jobs continue to move away from the United States, the country now has an opportunity to become a global hub of new, high-quality jobs in manufacturing and other high-skill areas, while generating environmental benefits at the same time.

So the future looks bright. Never before have we seen such strong interest and growth in renewable energy and energy-efficiency technologies. But the question we face is this: Does the United States want to be a leader in creating the new green technologies and the new green industries of the future? Or are we going to sit back and watch the opportunities pass us by?

In this country, we have the fields to grow the energy that will keep this Nation moving. And we have the wind energy to propel our economy forward. Right here in the United States, we have the science, we have the universities, we have the technological know-how, and we have the financial capital to harness our own homegrown energy.

It is time to act. The only thing holding us back is complacency. A national renewable energy standard will be a major contributor in driving innovation in green technologies.

Now, I know there are critics of a national standard. These critics—who I believe are stuck in the fossil age—believe an aggressive standard would negatively affect the reliability of an energy system. Yet, these critics seem to forget that numerous countries in Europe, including Spain, Germany, and Denmark—where wind power supplies over 30 percent of their electricity—have seen no adverse impacts on the reliability of their systems.

In fact, a renewable electricity standard can actually increase the overall reliability of an electric system. It can diversify our electricity sources so we are not so reliant on energy sources such as natural gas that are vulnerable to periodic shortages or other supply interruptions.

Not only is a national standard more reliable and good for the economy, it will also, of course, protect the environment and public health. Electricity production has a significant impact on our environment. Today, electricity accounts for more than 26 percent of smog-producing emissions, one-third of toxic mercury emissions, and some 40 percent of climate-changing greenhouse gases.

An aggressive standard will reduce CO₂ emissions by 434 million metric tons per year by 2020—reductions of 15 percent below current levels. This, as I said, is equivalent to taking nearly 71 million cars off the road.

A couple of weeks ago, Minnesota's own Tom Friedman had a cover story in the New York Times magazine about "The Power of Green." It should be required reading for anyone who cares not only about the future of our environment but also our economic future and our future national security. He talked about the need in this area for setting the standards. When you set the standards, and people can see off into the future, we will see the investment. People say: Well, why do you have a standard set at 2025? Obviously, our bill is going to have a standard growing each year. But the reason you want to go out to 2025 is you want American businesses and capitalists and people involved in this to understand if they invest, where they are going.

In his article, Tom Friedman asks: "How do our kids compete in a flatter world? How do they thrive in a warmer world? How do they survive in a more dangerous world?"

The answer is in making the most of the economic and technological opportunities to reduce our dependence on fossil fuels and the greenhouse gas pollution that comes from it.

Friedman says clean energy technology is going to be "the next great global industry." Well, if that is the case—and I believe he is right—then we need to make America the leader. We cannot afford to sit back and watch the opportunities pass us by.

As I mentioned before, we are seeing unprecedented interest and growth in renewable energy technologies. But at the same time, we are no longer the world leader in two important clean energy fields. We rank third in wind power production, behind Denmark and Spain. We are third in solar power installed, behind Germany and Japan.

Ironically, these countries surpassed us largely by adopting technologies that had first been developed right here in the United States. We came up with the right ideas, but we did not capitalize on these innovations with adequate policies to spur deployment. Our foreign competition was able to leapfrog over American businesses because these other countries have government-driven investment incentives, aggressive renewable energy targets, and other bold national policies.

Friedman proposes a "Green New Deal"—"one in which government's role is not funding projects, as in the original New Deal, but seeding basic research, providing loan guarantees where needed, and setting standards, taxes and incentives that will spawn" all kinds of new technologies.

I agree. It is about leading the new economy. It is about making America the global environmental leader, instead of a laggard. It is about creating a better economy for the next generation by inventing a whole new industry, which will not only give us the clean power industrial assets to preserve our American dream but also give us the technologies that billions of others need to realize our own dreams without destroying the planet.

It is about not being complacent. It is about getting on a new energy path. I believe an aggressive renewable electricity standard leads us down that path.

I urge all of my colleagues to support an aggressive standard. I suggest Minnesota's standard: 25 percent by 2025 for renewable electricity. It is a start down the path.

TRIBUTE TO FORMER CONGRESSMAN PARREN J. MITCHELL

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today I rise to pay tribute to a fallen pillar of the movement to extend equal opportunity to thousands of African-American and minority businesses throughout our Nation: Congressman Parren J. Mitchell.

With the passing of former Congressman Mitchell on May 28, 2007, our country has lost one of its legendary advocates for minority business owners, a giant who knew that the struggle for civil rights and equal opportunity would be decided in America's board rooms as well as its voting booths and lunch counters.

Congressman Mitchell fought with heart, grit, integrity, and determination to level the playing field so more minority firms could do business with the Federal Government. He didn't just serve as chairman of the House Small Business Committee, he served as Congress's conscience. He also was founder and chairman of the Minority Business Enterprise Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Congressman Mitchell's life was an incredible story of courage and resolve. He became the first African-American graduate student at the University of Maryland when he challenged the university's policy of segregation. He was the first African American elected to Congress from the State of Maryland. He was the first African American elected to Congress who lived below the Mason-Dixon line since 1898. And he was the first African American to chair the House Small Business Committee.

Congressman Mitchell's work on that committee has left a legacy that is as long and impressive as his commitment to equal opportunity for all of our nation's citizens. Many of his policies made it possible for the rise of the minority business community. In 1976, he attached an amendment to a public works bill stipulating that cities and States receiving Federal grants had to award 10 percent of the money to minority-owned businesses. That year he also managed to pass a law requiring contractors to document their goals in contracting with minority-owned companies. In 1980, he was able to successfully amend the Surface Transportation Assistance Act to require 10 percent of the money to be set aside for minority businesses.

On May 22, 2007, in the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship we held a hearing to look at the state of minority small businesses. And while the witnesses at the hearing revealed that there have been many gains for minority businesses, they also revealed that there is still more that needs to be done. I believe that the accomplishments of those who testified at the hearing would have made Congressman Mitchell proud. I also believe that the testimony about discriminatory practices that still confront minority businesses would have confirmed for him as it did for me that there are still more hills to climb.

The challenge now is to climb those hills by creating opportunities for minority businesses that will do justice to the memory of Congressman Mitchell. As we move forward in the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, the best way to do that is to pass laws that expand opportunities for all Americans who have been shut out or left behind.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

FIRST LIEUTENANT KEITH NEAL HEIDTMAN

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, every Memorial Day, words fight a losing battle against action. Each year, as spring warms into summer, we pause our lives and bow our heads in safety, and grope for words to honor the men and women who have made that safety possible. Inevitably, we fail; we say "fallen" when we mean "killed"; we say "sacrifice" for those who died unwillingly, in great pain. I believe we do so because we want to find a register for our voice to match the heroism of their work, but, also, because high words shield us from the immediacy of death in war. Even as we remember, we can't help looking away.

But some lack that luxury. They are in Iraq and Afghanistan, and they are living the war we speak about. For 10 American soldiers in Iraq, Memorial Day was their last day.

Last week, the Senate was out of session in commemoration of Memorial Day, but now that we have returned, I want to honor the memory of one of those 10 soldiers: Army 1LT. Keith Neil Heidtman. He was a native of Norwich and a graduate of the University of Connecticut. He was 24 years old. On Monday, May 28, the helicopter he was copiloting crashed, likely brought down by enemy fire. Early the next morning, an Army chaplain brought the news to Lieutenant Heidtman's family.

For Maureen and Arthur Robidoux, his mother and stepfather, for Kerry Heidtman, his father, for Chris Heidtman, his uncle, and for Keely Heidtman, his older sister, memories will never fill the place of the lives they loved. "If you had to pick your son, this is who you would pick," said Chris Heidtman. "He was handsome, he was bright". A star baseball player and a distinguished ROTC cadet, Lieutenant Heidtman volunteered for pilot training upon his graduation in 2005.

He learned the value of service from his parents, both public servants themselves: his mother at the State Department of Children and Families, and his father in a State child-support program. His death reminds us that the highest service carries the highest cost. "We're sending our finest, and we're losing them," said Lieutenant Heidtman's uncle.

So today we honor one of our finest, who wore our uniform and died long before his time. Next Memorial Day, his name will join the rolls of our dead. I pray that by then time will have soaked up his family's tears. Next spring, we will bow our heads and look for words to do him justice. I don't believe those words exist. His best memorial will be in our silence.

WAR CRIMES TRIAL

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, earlier this week in a special chamber of the Special Court for Sierra Leone, based in The Hague, proceedings began in the trial of former Liberian President Charles Taylor, who is accused of crimes against humanity, war crimes, and serious violations of international law committed during Sierra Leone's 11-year civil war. Tens of thousands died in this conflict that ended in 2002, and more than a third of Sierra Leone's 6 million people were forced to flee. His trial is expected to have significant impact across Sierra Leone but also throughout neighboring countries as his raging brutality was in no way confined by national borders.

For over a decade, the people of Sierra Leone and Liberia not only suffered from deprivation and displacement at the hands of Charles Taylor, but they also endured forced recruitment of child soldiers, widespread and brutal sexual violence, and horrifying murders and mutilations. Those responsible for these crimes abandoned all human decency in their quest for power and wealth.

I have long been a strong supporter of accountability mechanisms around the world—and in particular Sierra Leone's Special Court and Truth and Reconciliation Commission. I have worked to ensure that the United States provides appropriate financial and political support for such important institutions, which are crucial to building a framework for the rule of law in postconflict countries. I commend the court for taking its mandate seriously and for following the evidence where it led—directly to a sitting head of state.

Despite Charles Taylor's unwillingness to appear at the opening of yesterday's trial, the message this critical trial sends—to current and would-be corrupt, violent, and brutal leaders—is momentous: the international community will no longer stand silently by but will support efforts to break the worst cycles of violence and impunity. When the trial continues later this month in The Hague, it is essential that international fair trial standards be adhered to, that robust and transparent outreach programs continue uninterrupted so the trial remains as accessible as possible to those most affected by the conflict and that great care is taken to ensure the security of victims, witnesses, and their families.

While I welcome the proceedings in The Hague, more needs to be done on behalf of the people of Sierra Leone and Liberia. True accountability for the horrific atrocities they endured will only be achieved when the rule of law is respected at every level in the governments of both countries and all citizens have access to justice. Great steps forward have been taken, but much more work remains. I will continue to press the United States and the international community not to desert the people of Sierra Leone—or the region—as they work to reconcile their grievances and seek to heal from one of Africa's worst conflicts.

CONQUER CHILDHOOD CANCER ACT

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I would like to take a few moments to talk about 8-year-old Jenessa Byers, known as "Boey" by her friends and family.

Last year, Boey was diagnosed with a very rare childhood cancer called rhabdomyosarcoma. Showing tremendous courage and strength as she underwent radiation and chemotherapy, Boey battled the cancer into remission. Unfortunately, that cancer returned and Boey is back in treatment undergoing radiation and chemotherapy once again.

While I was in Oregon over the recess, I had a chance to visit with Boey and her family at the Children's Cancer Center at Doernbecher Children's Hospital, as well as with other children at the hospital who are battling a variety of childhood cancers. Boey refers to herself as a warrior in the fight against cancer, and there is no doubt about it, Boey is a warrior. As I witnessed firsthand when I visited her last week, she is fighting the cancer as hard as she can. This in itself makes Boey a very brave and very special little girl.

But what makes her especially amazing is that in spite of what she is going through, Boey has been working tirelessly to help other children who are also battling cancer. Each month, she donates special bears and handmade cards titled "Be Strong" to other children at the hospital. The day before her eighth birthday last month, Boey participated as a survivor in the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life, for which she raised over $500. In addition, she has raised money to help fight cancer on a local radiothon, and she has raised awareness using her own videos, which she has posted on YouTube.

Because of Boey's incredible compassion and determination to help the other children fighting cancer, she was recently asked to be a spokesperson for Doernbecher Children's Hospital. On May 31, she spoke about her experiences at a reception for the Children's Miracle Network. Just this past weekend, she was featured in a segment of the Doernbecher Children's Miracle Network Telethon.

While I was visiting Boey, she asked me to cosponsor the Conquer Childhood Cancer Act. Introduced by Senators REED and COLEMAN, this act would provide critical resources for the treatment, prevention, and cure of childhood cancer. The act would authorize $150 million over a 5-year period to expand support for biomedical research programs of the existing National Cancer Institute-designated multicenter national infrastructure for pediatric cancer research. It would also establish a population-based national childhood cancer registry; enable researchers to more accurately study the incidence of childhood cancers and long-term effects of treatments; and provide funding for informational and educational services to families coping with a diagnosis of childhood cancer. The Conquer Childhood Cancer Act brings hope to the more than 12,500 children who are diagnosed with cancer each year, as well as more than 40,000 children and adolescents currently being treated for childhood cancers.

On behalf of Boey and the other courageous and wonderful children I met at Doernbecher Children's Hospital recently, and every child with cancer, I would like to announce that I am cosponsoring the Conquer Childhood Cancer Act. I will be working with my colleagues to get this bill signed into law so that we can find a cure for childhood cancer once and for all.

D-DAY ANNIVERSARY

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to recognize the great sacrifices made by our Nation's veterans on the anniversary of D-day and to once again highlight the need for all of us to do more for those serving today.

On this day 63 years ago, 3,393 American troops gave their lives on the beaches of Normandy defending the freedom of America and its allies. These brave young men sacrificed themselves to stop an empire born of hatred from consuming Europe and fought to prove that freedom and justice would never bow to terror and intolerance. Their valor and service will forever endure in our Nation's memory.

Today, a new generation faces new challenges. The nearly 170,000 American troops currently serving in Iraq and Afghanistan exemplify the kind of courage and dedication that has defined the American military throughout our history. And for the sacrifices they are willing to make, we in the Senate, our colleagues in the House, the military leadership, the President, and the American people have an absolute moral obligation to provide our servicemen and women with the best possible protection when we send them to war.

I know that when President Roosevelt sent his men into battle, he did not simply pay lip service to their courage, he made sure that they had the strongest artillery, the best gear, and the most advanced equipment available. He did not worry that the landing craft he needed for D-day would not be needed when the war ended. He made equipping the force the entire Nation's top priority. Calling on the patriotism of American businessmen to ensure military needs were met before all else. And so I ask why—a half century later—we cannot do the same for our troops today.

Today, improvised explosive devices, IEDs, are the single greatest threat to the lives of our troops, causing 70 percent of U.S. casualties in Iraq. The military has indicated that mine-resistant ambush protected, MRAP, vehicles, which provide four to five times more protection than up-armored Humvees, will reduce casualties from IEDs by two-thirds. These vehicles have already been tested fully at Aberdeen Proving Center and our allies have been using similar technologies in the field for years.

So why, then, are these critical vehicles not already in the field?

We learned recently that in February of 2005, Marine commanders in Iraq realized that they needed vehicles designed specifically to defeat the IED threat and asked the Pentagon to build them. Yet 2 years later their request remains unfulfilled. Secretary Gates has indicated that MRAPs compete with other defense spending, which may make it difficult to produce all we need. I just don't get that logic. I can see no greater use of our dollars than getting American troops the best possible protection that exists today. This Nation can afford to do that and whatever else is necessary to do right by our military men and women and their families.

At a later date we will get to the bottom of what happened in 2005, but our first order of business today should be making sure that we get our troops the technology they need as soon as possible. That will require a genuine assessment of how many MRAPs are needed in the field and how much it will cost to build that critically needed inventory.

We also need to provide our troops with all the latest in tested technology to defend against the new weapons which insurgents are using in Iraq: shaped charges called EFPs, or explosively formed penetrators/projectiles, those shaped-charges which hit our vehicles from the side with devastating effect. We cannot wait another 2 years to field technology to protect against these devices when Americans are dying today.

Today I ask of my colleagues, of the President, of our military commanders, and of the American people, that we pay respect to American servicemembers with more than words. We have the ability and the obligation to do more and we must.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. President, 63 years ago today, many brave Americans and other allied forces members were dropped out over the frigid North Atlantic coastline of Normandy; numerous others stormed the beaches from the sea. Ultimately, well over 100,000 determined Allied troops were involved in one of the most remarkable and well orchestrated military events in history. D-day was among the greatest victories of World War II. June 6, 1944 is a day all lovers of freedom should hold on high. We cannot ever forget the sacrifice and meaning of that day.

Were it not for the supreme leadership—both here and abroad—of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, General Dwight D. Eisenhower, and many other government and military leaders—and a patriotic citizenry—we might be living in a starkly different world today. D-day does not just signify singular success; it symbolizes the power of our fearless democracy and way of life. This triumph—not only on D-day, but in the war effort at large—helped to further a clear message made by an earlier American President, one who was considering the weight of World War I. As Woodrow Wilson remarked a generation earlier, "The world must be made safe for democracy." The events of June 6, 1944, helped to make the world a safer place. Victory would not have come about without the smart and strong dedication of our military.

We must take it upon ourselves as Americans, and as grateful citizens, to continue to thank the brave patriots who served in what has become a legacy of freedom; we thank them for their service and their sacrifice. Every generation faces new challenges and must accept the consequences of inaction. We are better off for the actions of the Greatest Generation. Across the beaches of Omaha, Utah, Juno, Gold, and others, our brave Allied troops sacrificed mightily on June 6, 1944. That sacrifice lives on.

For all those veterans of D-day, and for that matter, any campaign of World War II, thank you. You helped to make the world safe for democracy. Your victorious struggle of more than 60 years ago makes this Nation proud and grateful. Thank you for your dedication and sacrifice.

LOS ALAMOS NATIONAL LABORATORY

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I wish to congratulate Los Alamos National Laboratory for its part in completing the 100th genome sequence. Like the Human Genome Project, this achievement serves as a constant reminder of the possibilities before us and a step forward in scientific knowledge. The scientists of Los Alamos National Lab constantly achieve excellence through their various endeavors, and I am proud of their contribution to this vast project. This well-deserved recognition highlights their continuing dedication to serving this country through research in health and environment-related fields.

Los Alamos National Laboratory has championed the advancement of national security for over 60 years. In the tumultuous times of World War II, it stood as our Nation's front line in acquiring a superior tool with which we could be certain that freedom would prevail. However, once its mission was complete it continued to pursue the advancement of American security and research. What began as an installation solely focused on the creation of an atomic bomb has developed into a diverse and advanced institution dedicated to securing our nuclear ordinance, combating the effectiveness of weapons of mass destruction, and addressing many problems in areas such as energy and health.

Los Alamos National Laboratory serves as one of five national laboratories working with the Department of Energy to sequence genomes. Labeled the Joint Genome Institute, this group of research institutions first helped to complete the Human Genome Project, which has since been called one of the greatest scientific advances of our time. The benefits of this outstanding achievement are many. For example, we can now match organ donors and recipients with less uncertainty and even diagnose disease more efficiently.

Over the years, the mission of the Genome Project has oriented itself towards other vital interests. The Joint Genome Institute is now targeting specific animals and microbes with traits that, if harnessed, could aid in areas such as biotechnology, alternative fuels, and the environment. For example, the organism just completed has shown potential in aiding the cleanup of uranium-contaminated areas. This application would greatly benefit Los Alamos itself, which has several radioactive wastesites.

In the past, I have strongly supported the research of Los Alamos National Laboratory and the advancement of the Genome Project and have helped each of them secure defense and biotechnology funding. In return, their research has yielded important advances in areas such as health, energy, and the environment. Furthermore, the continuing excellence of Los Alamos National Laboratory has led to the creation of many jobs in the northern New Mexico region. Los Alamos continues to succeed in its purpose of national service, and I am pleased to offer my support and congratulations for their contribution to the 100th mark in the Genome Project.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

100th ANNIVERSARY OF HETTINGER, NORTH DAKOTA

• Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize a community in North Dakota that is celebrating its 100th anniversary. On July 3-8, the residents of Hettinger will gather to celebrate their community's history and founding.

Hettinger is a vibrant community in southwest North Dakota. Hettinger holds an important place in North Dakota's history. The townsite was founded in 1907, and Erastus A. Williams of Bismarck, whose son-in-law was Mathias Hettinger, was credited with naming the community. It became the county seat of Adams County in 1907. The post office was established in May 17, 1907, and Hettinger was organized into a city in 1916. One of the last living survivors of the Titanic, Ole Abelseth, was a longtime resident of Hettinger.

Today, Hettinger is a magnet for outdoor enthusiasts who come to enjoy bird watching, fishing, and big game hunting. Nearby Mirror Lake offers camping and other outdoor activities for all ages. In 2004, Hettinger was recognized as Hometown of the Year by the Bismarck Tribune and it received the North Dakota Capital Community Designation by the Federal Home Loan Bank, which recognized Hettinger's vision and planning in sustaining and revitalizing the local economy.

The people of Hettinger are enthusiastic about their community and the quality of life it offers. Hettinger has a wonderful centennial celebration planned that includes dances, a steak fry, a lumberjack show, a parade, a horseshoe tournament, class reunions, and a whisker growing contest. The week long celebration will definitely be one to remember.

Mr. President, I ask the U.S. Senate to join me in congratulating Hettinger, ND, and its residents on their first 100 years and in wishing them well through the next century. By honoring Hettinger and all the other historic small towns of North Dakota, we keep the great pioneering frontier spirit alive for future generations. It is places such as Hettinger that have helped to shape this country into what it is today, which is why this fine community is deserving of our recognition.

Hettinger has a proud past and a bright future.●

125TH ANNIVERSARY OF ELLENDALE, NORTH DAKOTA

● Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I am pleased to recognize a community in North Dakota that will be celebrating its 125th anniversary. From June 28 to July 1, the residents of Ellendale will gather to celebrate their community's history and founding.

Ellendale is a community of about 1,550 on the border between North and South Dakota. It was founded in 1881 in anticipation of the Milwaukee Road Railroad. It was the first white settlement in the county and, as the first stop on the railroad in the region, it became a great distributing point for settlers' supplies. It was named in honor of the wife of Milwaukee Road Rail Road official S. S. Merrill.

Today, Ellendale is the county seat of Dickey County. It is also home to an Opera House which, at one time, was the largest between Minneapolis and Seattle. The Organization of the People in Ellendale for the Restoration of the Arts hopes to reopen the Opera House, which is currently undergoing restoration, so that it can, once again, have live productions. In addition, the Cole Memorial Museum hosts numerous artifacts and memorabilia showcasing the Ellendale area.

For those who call Ellendale home, it is a comfortable place to live, work, and play. The people of Ellendale are enthusiastic about their community and the quality of life it offers. Nearby Pheasant Lake offers a wealth of recreational opportunities from fishing to boating to camping. The community has a wonderful quasiquicentennial weekend planned that includes school reunions, a Walk of Fame inductee banquet, a golf tournament, and a Historical Pageant.

Mr. President, I ask the U.S. Senate to join me in congratulating Ellendale, ND, and its residents on their first 125 years and in wishing them well in the future. By honoring Ellendale and all the other historic small towns of North Dakota, we keep the great pioneering frontier spirit alive for future generations. It is places such as Ellendale that have helped to shape this country into what it is today, which is why this fine community is deserving of our recognition.

Ellendale has a proud past and a bright future.●

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF BOWMAN, NORTH DAKOTA

● Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I am pleased to recognize a community in North Dakota that will be celebrating its 100th anniversary. From June 29–July 4, the residents of Bowman will gather to celebrate their community's history and founding.

Bowman is a quaint town of about 1,500 people nestled in the southwest corner of North Dakota. It was founded in 1907 and is named after William Bowman, the territorial legislator, after whom the county is also named.

Today, Bowman is the county seat of Bowman County. It is also home to the Pioneer Trails Regional Museum, which preserves the rich history of the community and surrounding area. Bowman lies in an area of the state that has a number of fossils that are millions of years old. In fact, within the last few years, paleontologists uncovered the fossils of a tyrannosaurus rex. Bowman also plays host to the Bowman County Fair, an annual day fair with live music, games, and other events that adults and children can enjoy.

For those who call Bowman home, it is a comfortable place to live, work, and play. The people of Bowman are enthusiastic about their community and the quality of life it offers. Bowman won the City of the Year 2006 award from the North Dakota League of Cities. The community has a wonderful centennial weekend planned that includes school reunions, a golf tournament, local musical entertainment, and much more.

Mr. President, I ask the U.S. Senate to join me in congratulating Bowman, ND, and its residents on their first 100 years and in wishing them well through the next century. By honoring Bowman and all the other historic small towns of North Dakota, we keep the great pioneering frontier spirit alive for future generations. It is places such as Bowman that have helped to shape this country into what it is today, which is why this fine community is deserving of our recognition.

Bowman has a proud past and a bright future.●

HONORING THE F.A. PEABODY COMPANY

● Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, today I recognize a tremendous small business from my home State of Maine that was recently designated as the 2007 Eastern Region Small Business of the Year by the United States Chamber of Commerce. Established in 1927 by Frank A. Peabody, the F.A. Peabody Company, based in Houlton, ME, has grown over the last 80 years to meet the insurance, investment, and real estate needs of Mainers. From the number of employees, to the number of locations, and even the services the company provides to the residents of northern Maine, F.A. Peabody's expansion has been a crowning achievement of small business in Aroostook County and, indeed, all of northern and eastern Maine. This award is a fitting recognition of F.A. Peabody's past accomplishments, and its continued superb work for Maine.

F.A. Peabody began as a property casualty insurance agency for Aroostook County, and grew to represent 20 insurance companies. As time progressed, the company expanded to meet other needs in the community, including investment management, real estate brokerage, and travel services. A truly diversified operation, F.A. Peabody has gone further in recent years by administering mortuary trusts and providing broadband internet to businesses and individuals from the counties of Maine's northern potato fields to its eastern shoreline. In light of a lack of broadband internet in Aroostook County earlier this decade, F.A. Peabody decided to take action and become a broadband internet service provider.

Collectively, F.A. Peabody employs over 70 people, and has a wellness program to award employees with bonuses and gifts. Chris and Bob Anderson, president and chief financial officer, respectively, of F.A. Peabody, carry on the company's commitment to Maine's positive, pro-growth small business community.

F.A. Peabody is truly a success story, and a bright example of what small businesses can accomplish with measured expansion and consistent determination. I congratulate F.A. Peabody on all of its accomplishments and, in particular, for garnering the attention of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. This award is well-deserved, and I am confident that F.A. Peabody's strong, outstanding achievements will continue for years to come as a source of pride for all of Maine. I wish F.A. Peabody and its employees continued success.●

S. 1553. A bill to provide additional assistance to combat HIV/AIDS among young people, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today with Senator SNOWE to introduce legislation to strengthen our international HIV prevention efforts and empower the people on the ground who are fighting this disease to design the most effective and appropriate HIV prevention program.

The bill is cosponsored by Senator LEAHY, Senator DURBIN, Senator CLINTON, Senator LAUTENBERG, Senator BROWN, Senator KERRY, Senator BOXER, Senator DODD, Senator MURRAY, and Senator FEINGOLD.

This bill simply strikes the provision in the United States Leadership Against HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria Act of 2003 that mandates that at least 33 percent of HIV prevention funding in the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, PEPFAR, be set aside "abstinence-until-marriage" programs.

Let me be clear from the beginning: this bill does not prohibit the administration from funding "abstinence-until-marriage" programs.

In fact, if the bill becomes law, the administration would still be able to spend all of our HIV prevention funding on abstinence-until-marriage programs if it decided to do so.

This bill is about giving the administration and HIV/AIDS workers the flexibility to design the most effective HIV prevention program without having to worry about artificial earmarks that are based on politics, not science.

Indeed, in the fight against the HIV/AIDS pandemic, we cannot afford to tie ourselves down with undue restrictions.

Worldwide, 40 million people are infected with HIV. Each day, approximately 12,000 people are newly infected with HIV. In 2006, there were 4.3 million new HIV infections around the world, 2.8 million in sub-Saharan Africa alone. Sub-Saharan Africa is home to almost two-thirds of the estimated 40 million people currently living with HIV.

Across sub-Saharan Africa, the prevalence rate for the adult population is 6 percent. Mr. President, 2.1 million adults and children died of AIDS in 2005.

Despite these devastating numbers, according to UNAIDS, less than one in five people at risk for infection of HIV have access to basic prevention services. Studies have shown that two-thirds of new HIV infections could be averted with effective prevention programs.

Clearly, we still have a long ways to go to rein in this disease.

The 2003 HIV/AIDS legislation recognized that prevention, along with care and treatment, is an essential component of that fight and demands a multipronged approach. It endorsed the "ABC" model for prevention of the sexual transmission of HIV: abstain, be faithful, use condoms.

Yet instead of allowing HIV/AIDS workers and doctors the ability to use all of the prevention tools at their disposal to respond to local needs, we required them to spend at least 33 percent on "abstinence-until-marriage" programs.

The question has to been asked: Why 33 percent? Why not 15 percent? Why not 50 percent? What scientific study concluded that 33 percent of HIV prevention funds for abstinence only programs was appropriate?

There was no study and it begs the question: when you are fighting a pandemic that has already cost so many lives, who should decide how to allocate funding among different types of HIV prevention programs, Congress or the people with the knowledge and expertise on how to fight this disease?

I support abstinence programs as a critical part of our HIV prevention programs. But mandating an earmark has negative consequences for other effective tools.

It means less money for funds to prevent mother-to-child transmission, less money to promote a comprehensive prevention message to high risk groups such as sexually active youth, and fewer funds to protect the blood supply.

Indeed, the evidence clearly shows that the one-third earmark has inhibited the ability of local communities to design a multipronged HIV prevention program that works best for them.

Last year, the Government Accountability Office issued a report that found "significant challenges" associated with meeting the abstinence-until-marriage programs. The report concluded that the 33 percent abstinence spending requirement is squeezing out available funding for other key HIV prevention programs such as mother-to-child transmission and maintaining a health blood supply.

Country teams that are not exempted from the one-third earmark have to spend more than 33 percent of prevention funds on abstinence-until-marriage activities, sometimes at the expense of other programs, in order for the administration to meet the overall 33 percent earmark.

The spending requirement limited or reduced funding for programs directed to high-risk groups, such as sexually active youth and the majority of country teams on the ground reported that meeting the spending requirement "challenges their ability to develop interventions that are responsive to local epidemiology and social norms."

Last month, a congressionally mandated review by the Institute of Medicine on the first 3 years of the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief also found significant problems with the abstinence earmark. It concluded: there is no evidence to support a 33 percent abstinence only earmark; the 33 percent earmark does not allow country teams on the ground the flexibility they need to respond to local needs.

Our bill seeks to address the problems highlighted in the GAO and the Institute of Medicine reports and provide local communities the necessary flexibility to achieve the goal we all share: stopping the spread of HIV, especially among young people.

Simply put, our bill balances congressional priorities with public health needs. Under our legislation, country teams can take into account country needs including cultural differences, epidemiology, population age groups and the stage of the epidemic in designing the most effective prevention program.

One size does not fit all. A prevention program in one country may look a lot different than a prevention program in another country.

A May 2003 report from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and Henry J. Kaiser Foundation highlights that proven prevention programs include behavior change programs, including delay in the initiation of sexual activity, faithfulness and correct and consistent condom use; testing and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases; promoting voluntary counseling and testing; harm reduction programs for IV drug users; preventing the transmission of HIV from mother to child; increasing blood safety; empowering women and girls; controlling infection in health care settings; and devising programs geared towards people living with HIV.

For example, studies have shown that combining drugs with counseling and instruction on use of such drugs reduces mother-to-child transmission by 50 percent.

Such cost effective programs are not related to abstinence and should not be constrained by the 33 percent earmark on funds for prevention.

I understand the importance of teaching abstinence. It is and will remain a key part of our strategy in preventing the spread of HIV.

But let us listen to the words of someone with firsthand experience about the challenges sub-Saharan African countries face in combating HIV/AIDS and the constraints the “abstinence-until-marriage” earmark places on those efforts.

In an August 19, 2005, op-ed in the New York Times, Babatunde Osotimehin, chairman of the National Action Committee on AIDS in Nigeria, wrote:

Abstinence is one critical prevention strategy, but it cannot be the only one. Focusing on abstinence assumes young people can choose whether to have sex. For adolescent girls in Nigeria and in many other countries, this is an inaccurate assumption. Many girls fall prey to sexual violence and coercion. . . . When dealing with AIDS, we must address the realities and use a multipronged approach to improving education and health systems, one that can reach all of our people.

He concludes:

National governments must have the freedom to employ the very best strategies at our disposal to help our people.

I could not agree more.

If we want to help the girls of Nigeria and the youth of sub-Saharan Africa, we cannot limit the information they receive about keeping them safe from acquiring HIV.

We do not have time to lose. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation and support a pro-abstinence, multipronged approach to preventing the spread of HIV.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1553

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “HIV Prevention Act of 2007”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (in this Act referred to as “PEPFAR”) is an unprecedented effort to combat the global AIDS epidemic, with $9,000,000,000 targeted for initiatives in 15 focus countries.

(2) The PEPFAR prevention goal is to avert 7,000,000 HIV infections in the 15 focus countries—most in sub-Saharan Africa, where heterosexual intercourse is by far the predominant mode of HIV transmission.

(3) According to the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, young people between the ages of 15 and 24 years old are “the most threatened by AIDS” and “are at the centre of HIV vulnerability”. Globally, young people between the ages of 10 and 24 years old account for ½ of all new HIV cases each year. About 7,000 young people in this cohort contract the virus every day.

(4) A recent review funded by the United States Agency for International Development found that sex and HIV education programs that encourage abstinence but also discuss the use of condoms do not increase sexual activity as critics of sex education have long alleged. Sex education can help delay the initiation of intercourse, reduce the frequency of sex and the number of sexual partners, and also increase condom use.

(5) The United States Leadership Against HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria Act of 2003 (22 U.S.C. 7601 et seq.) requires that at least ⅓ of all prevention funds be reserved for abstinence-until-marriage programs.

(6) A congressionally mandated review by the Institute of Medicine of the first 3 years of PEPFAR unequivocally recommends greater flexibility in the global fight against AIDS. The March 2007 Institute of Medicine report entitled “PEPFAR Implementation: Progress and Promise” calls for greater emphasis on prevention than the law currently allows and says that “removal of the abstinence-until-marriage” earmark, among other changes, “could enhance the quality, accountability, and flexibility” of prevention efforts.

(7) The Institute of Medicine report further found that the abstinence-until-marriage earmark “has greatly limited the ability of Country Teams to develop and implement comprehensive prevention programs that are well integrated with each other and with counseling and testing, care and treatment programs and that target those populations at greatest risk”.

(8) The Institute of Medicine report also found that the earmark has “limited PEPFAR's ability to tailor its activities in each country to the local epidemic and to coordinate with . . . the countries' national plans”.

(9) The Institute of Medicine report is in keeping with the conclusions of a report issued in 2006 by the Government Accountability Office. The GAO report, entitled “Spending Requirement Presents Challenges for Allocating Funding under the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief”, found “significant challenges” associated with meeting the earmark for abstinence-until-marriage programs.

(10) The Government Accountability Office found that a majority of country teams report that fulfilling the requirement presents challenges to their ability to respond to local epidemiology and cultural and social norms.

(11) The Government Accountability Office found that, although some country teams may be exempted from the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement, country teams that are not exempted have to spend more than the 33 percent of prevention funds on abstinence-until-marriage activities—sometimes at the expense of other programs.

(12) The Government Accountability Office found that, as a result of the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement, some countries have had to reduce planned funding for Prevention of Mother-to-Child Transmission programs, thereby limiting services for pregnant women and their children.

(13) The Government Accountability Office found that the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement limited or reduced funding for programs directed to high-risk groups, such as services for married discordant couples, sexually active youth, and commercial sex workers.

(14) The Government Accountability Office found that the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement made it difficult for countries to fund medical and blood safety activities.

(15) The Government Accountability Office found that, because of the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement, some countries would likely have to reduce funding for condom procurement and condom social marketing.

(16) In addition, the Government Accountability Office found that ⅔ of focus country teams reported that the policy for implementing PEPFAR's ABC model (defined as “Abstain, Be faithful, use Condoms”) is unclear and open to varying interpretations, causing confusion about which groups may be targeted and whether youth may receive the ABC message.

(17) The Government Accountability Office found that the ABC guidance does not clearly delineate permissible “C” activities under the ABC model. Program staff reported that they feel “constrained” by restrictions on promoting or marketing condoms to youth. Other country teams reported confusion about whether PEPFAR funds may be used for broad condom social marketing, even to adults in a generalized epidemic.

(18) Young people are our greatest hope for changing the course of the AIDS epidemic. According to the World Health Organization, “[f]ocusing on young people is likely to be the most effective approach to confronting the epidemic, particularly in high prevalence countries”.

SEC. 3. ENSURING BALANCED FUNDING FOR HIV PREVENTION METHODS.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS ON ABSTINENCE-UNTIL-MARRIAGE FUNDING REQUIREMENT.—Section 402(b)(3) of the United States Leadership Against HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria Act of 2003 (22 U.S.C. 7672(b)(3)) is amended by striking “, of which such amount at least 33 percent should be expended for abstinence-until-marriage programs”.

(b) ELIMINATION OF ABSTINENCE-UNTIL-MARRIAGE FUNDING REQUIREMENT.—Section 403(a) of such Act (22 U.S.C. 7673(a)) is amended by striking the second sentence.

By Ms. COLLINS (for herself and Mr. LIEBERMAN):

S. 1554. A bill to comprehensively address challenges relating to energy independence, air pollution, and climate change facing the United States; to the Committee on Finance.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Energy Independence, Clean Air, and Climate Security Act of 2007. This legislation takes an integrated approach that is much needed and long overdue if we are to address effectively three intertwined issues of crucial importance to our Nation's economy and security and to the health of our people and our planet. I am very pleased to be joined on this legislation by Senator LIEBERMAN, a true leader on energy, climate change, and environmental issues.

The majority leader has announced the Senate may well take up a broad package of energy legislation next week. The bill I am introducing today lays out my own vision of how our Nation can best address its energy problems.

If Mark Twain were with us today, it is not hard to imagine he would rephrase his famous quip about the weather to something along the lines of: Everyone talks about climate change and energy independence, but nobody does anything about it.

Since the actions we take to reduce our dependence on foreign oil, to clean our air, and to reduce our contribution to climate change all affect each other, it is necessary we develop a comprehensive strategy for all three of these challenges.

Indeed, since the oil embargo of 1973, through 17 Congresses and 7 different Presidents, energy efficiency and energy independence have generated a lot of talk, some pretty good ideas, and a lot of promises but not enough concerted, determined, coordinated action. During these 34 years, our Nation's imports of foreign oil have soared from less than 35 percent to more than 60 percent, leaving us dangerously reliant on unstable regions of the world in order to fuel our Nation and our economy.

In addition to our increased reliance on foreign oil, we are also consuming more and more electricity. As demand puts increasing pressure on supply, electricity prices have soared. In the summer, when air-conditioners struggle to keep up with rising temperatures, we run the risk of blackouts, brownouts, and price spikes.

At the same time, our greenhouse gas emissions have soared, leading to virtually indisputable evidence that human activity is contributing to climate change. In the United States, emissions of the primary greenhouse gas, carbon dioxide, have risen more than 20 percent since 1990. Globally, carbon dioxide concentrations in the atmosphere now far exceed the natural range over the last 650,000 years. We know this from scientific analyses of ice cores and other evidence.

According to the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, the increase in greenhouse gas emissions has already increased global temperatures and has likely contributed to more extreme weather events, such as droughts and floods. These emissions will continue to change the climate, causing warming in most regions and likely causing more floods, droughts, and an increase in the intensity of hurricanes.

Climate change is not the only environmental problem caused by fossil fuel use. The quality of our air also suffers. Although we have made some important strides in improving air quality since the 1970s, we have not done enough. Fossil fuel use is the primary cause of mercury pollution, smog, and acid rain that continue to plague our Nation. Indeed, air pollution causes thousands of asthma attacks and costs many lives annually.

The time has come to address our air quality, climate change, high energy prices, and dangerous reliance on foreign oil. The legislation I am introducing today is, I believe, the first Senate bill that would address all these problems in a single, integrated approach. There have been many bills introduced that address one of these problems. This is an attempt to have a comprehensive approach and to recognize that each of these problems affects the other.

My legislation focuses primarily on two sectors of the economy: electricity and transportation. Together, these two sectors account for 73 percent of carbon dioxide emissions. Electricity generation accounts for more than 40 percent of our carbon dioxide emissions. More than 80 percent of these emissions are attributable to coal-fired powerplants. Coal-fired powerplants are also the single largest source of mercury pollution, smog, and acid rain. Between 1990 and 2004, emissions from these sectors increased by 27 percent.

My legislation requires utilities to reduce carbon dioxide emissions to 1990 levels by the year 2020, while also addressing the emissions that cause smog, acid rain, and mercury pollution. It includes a renewable portfolio standard which would help to diversify our electricity supplies and energy efficiency resource standards that the Alliance to Save Energy estimates would save consumers, over time, billions of dollars on their electricity bills.

The transportation sector, which relies almost entirely on oil, is not only partly responsible for our dangerous reliance on foreign oil but also accounts for 33 percent of carbon dioxide emissions. My legislation would help to reduce emissions from this sector through a combination of provisions such as CAFE standards for automobiles and heavy-duty trucks, tax incentives for consumers to encourage them to purchase hybrid and alternative fueled vehicles, incentives for manufacturers to produce the next generation of energy-efficient vehicles, and a low carbon fuel standard that will help to replace some gasoline with biofuels. Taken together, these provisions will substantially reduce our reliance on foreign oil, while reducing greenhouse gas emissions by hundreds of millions of tons.

I wish to make clear the choice is not between hobbling our Nation's economy and protecting our environment. This legislation is based on the principle that research, development, and implementation of new approaches to energy independence and environmental stewardship will provide a powerful new stimulus for our economy. All too often, we are confronted with proposals to address one issue that only aggravate another problem. The integrated approach I am proposing will help us break through that impasse.

This legislation does not attempt to reinvent the wheel. In fact, it incorporates several good ideas from my colleagues that have been introduced as separate bills, many of which I have co-sponsored, such as the Ten-in-Ten and other CAFE bills, the DRIVE Act, and the Clean Power Act. It includes provisions of legislation I have introduced to address abrupt climate change and to eliminate certain tax credits for the oil industry. It contains many of the excellent energy efficiency provisions in the Energy for Our Future Act introduced by Representative CHRIS SHAYS in the House.

My bill is also complementary with the McCain-Lieberman Climate Stewardship and Innovation Act. We need to pass that bill in order to establish a nationwide cap and trade program for addressing climate change. However, the regulations to implement that could take many years. The legislation I am proposing today will help us take some early action to help achieve the targets in the McCain-Lieberman bill.

I believe the first step toward energy independence is to make better, more efficient use of our current energy supplies. The first title of this bill tackles that issue on several fronts.

It would implement the "Ten-in-Ten" legislation I have co-sponsored with Senators FEINSTEIN and SNOWE to increase fuel economy standards to 35 miles per gallon by 2016. It would then go a step further and increase CAFE standards to 45 miles per gallon by 2025. This provision would save approximately 2.5 million barrels of oil per day.

It would help consumers buy more fuel-efficient cars by repealing the phase-out of the tax credit for hybrid vehicles, which is scheduled to sunset at the end of 2009. It would also require light trucks that use diesel fuel to meet more stringent EPA emission standards in order to qualify for the lean-burn credit.

Public transportation is one of the most effective ways we can get more passenger miles per gallon. This legislation would promote the development and use of public transportation by subsidizing fares, encouraging employers to assist their employees with fares, and authorizing funding to build energy-efficient and environmentally friendly modes of transport, such as clean buses and light rail.

It would direct the Department of Transportation to designate 20 Transit-Oriented Development Corridors in urban areas by 2015, and 50 by 2025. These TOD Corridors would be developed with the aid of grants to state and local governments to construct or improve facilities for motorized transit, bicycles, and pedestrians. These provisions would be funded by an authorization of $500 million per year from 2007 through 2016.

We must do more to encourage the development and manufacture of energy-efficient vehicles. This legislation would create a 20-percent investment tax credit for automobile manufacturers, and a fuel economy achievement credit for manufacturers that have a combined fleet fuel economy that exceeds that of their 2005 model year. This credit would begin at 5 percent next year and rise to 50 percent in 2015.

And we must do more to help existing vehicles be as energy efficient as possible. This legislation would direct the DOT to create a National Tire Fuel Efficiency Program that would include tire testing and labeling, energy-efficient tire promotions through incentives and information, and the creation of minimum fuel economy standards for tires. These standards would establish the maximum technically feasible and cost-effective fuel savings without adversely affecting tire safety or average tire life.

Heavy-duty vehicles move our economy. This legislation would keep them on the move while helping to reduce both fuel consumption and emissions.

It would require DOT to develop a testing and assessment program to determine what is feasible to improve the efficiency of heavy vehicles, and then to develop the appropriate fuel-economy standards. It also would provide a tax credit of up to $3,500 for the purchase of idling reduction technology for heavy vehicles.

In order for the Federal Government to lead by example, this legislation would require the Secretary of Energy to issue regulations for federal fleets covered by the Energy Policy Act of 1992 to reduce petroleum consumption by 30 percent from a 1999 baseline by 2016.

Title II of my legislation focuses on increasing our energy independence and reducing our emissions from the transportation sector through the use of alternative fuels.

Renewable fuels offer great potential to help us achieve greater energy independence. This legislation would help us realize that potential by establishing a clean, renewable fuels performance standard. The performance standard would require fuel providers to increase the volume of clean, low-carbon, renewable fuels by up to 35 billion gallons by 2025, unless EPA finds that the increase is technically infeasible or is likely to result in adverse impacts.

This legislation would expand existing tax credits for ethanol to include cellulosic biomass. While there has been a great deal of focus on using corn-based ethanol in order to decrease our reliance upon foreign oil, there are other renewable, plant-based energy sources that are more environmentally friendly and have greater potential to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Researchers at the University of Maine have been at the forefront of applying a research technique known as "Life Cycle Analysis." Life Cycle Analysis is a unique interdisciplinary research tool that analyzes the energy requirements and environmental footprint involved with the manufacture, use, and disposal of a material. This technique is ideal for identifying fuels which have the lowest environmental impact and the greatest potential for reducing greenhouse gas emissions, while reducing our dependence on foreign oil.

My legislation would authorize $275 million over five years for research that would use Life Cycle Analysis in order to identify and develop new biotechnologies. These technologies will help move our petroleum-based economy toward a renewable, sustainable forest bio-economy.

Environmental stewardship must go beyond the tailpipes of our vehicles to the smokestacks of our power plants. Title III of my legislation builds upon the Clean Power Act that I introduced in the last Congress with Senators JEFFORDS and LIEBERMAN. I have, however, modified this provision to provide assistance to small businesses struggling with high electricity costs. I have also included increased funding for important conservation programs such as Forest Legacy, in order to help wildlife adapt to the impacts of climate change.

This legislation would cut all four major power plant pollutants over the next six years. Sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides, which cause smog, acid rain, and asthma attacks, would be cut by 75 percent. Toxic mercury emissions would be cut by 90 percent from 1999 levels, and carbon dioxide, which forms the heat-trapping blanket that contributes to global warming, would be cut to 1990 levels.

These reductions would do more than provide long-term protection for our environment; they also would produce dramatic and immediate health gains for our people. According to the EPA, quick and decisive cuts in nitrogen and sulfur emissions from power plants would save 18,700 lives every year, avoid 366,000 asthma attacks, and prevent $100 billion in health care costs. In addition, these cuts would combat the acid rain that is spoiling some of our Nation's most treasured parks and wilderness areas.

The Centers for Disease Control has concluded that 4.9 million women of childbearing age have elevated levels of mercury, and that 322,000 newborns are at risk of neurological damage from mercury exposure. This provision preserves our national commitment to reduce toxic threats to pregnant women and to children by requiring meaningful reductions and by prohibiting trading.

The Clean Power Act incorporated into this legislation closes the grandfather loophole that exempts dirty, aging power plants from cleanup. Every power plant will be required to meet the most modern pollution control standards by either the plant's 40th year of operation or by the fifth year of the enactment of this legislation.

The Clean Power Act uses market mechanisms, such as buying and selling pollution allowances known as "emissions trading." As I have already stated, under my bill, this trading will not be allowed for toxic mercury. Nor will it be allowed if it enables a power plant to pollute at a level that damages public health or the environment.

Power plants are the largest source of our Nation's contribution to global warming; as I stated earlier, they account for some 40 percent of our carbon dioxide emissions. This legislation would return carbon dioxide emissions to 1990 levels. By providing electricity producers with regulatory certainty now about future pollution-reduction requirements, this legislation would allow smarter investments and more cost-efficient planning.

As with existing motor vehicles, we must make more efficient use of the energy we now produce to heat our homes and power our lights. This legislation would double funding for the Department of Energy Weatherization Program, reaching $1.4 billion for 2008. It also would provide predictable funding for the valuable Energy Star Program, which helps consumers buy energy efficient appliances, and would extend the renewable electricity tax credit through 2011 and the residential investment tax credit for solar and energy efficient buildings through 2012.

This legislation also includes an Energy Efficiency Performance Standard for utilities. This provision requires utilities to achieve energy efficiency improvements. This provision would help consumers save on their electricity bills. By way of example, in California, where a similar provision was employed, utilities achieved energy savings at a cost of around 2-4 cents per kilowatt hour. According to the Alliance to Save Energy, an Energy Efficiency Performance Standard could save consumers $64 billion in net savings, and avoid the need to build 400 power plants, preventing 320 million metric tons of carbon dioxide emissions.

In addition, my legislation includes a renewable portfolio standard which would require utilities to generate 20 percent of their electricity from environmentally sound renewable energy sources by the year 2020. For example, biomass electricity generated under this provision must be done using sustainable forest practices.

This legislation will help Americans save on utility bills, and make our tax code fairer, too. Title V would eliminate two major tax credits that benefit large oil and gas companies: tax credits for intangible drilling costs and for excess percentage over cost depletions. This would save the taxpayers billions of dollars over the next five years.

This legislation also would help us better understand and assess climate change. During the last three years, I have had the opportunity to meet in the field with some of the world's foremost climate scientists. I have traveled to Ny-Alesund, Norway, the northernmost community in the world, where I saw the dramatic loss of sea-ice cover and the retreating Arctic glaciers. I have seen the same alarming changes in Alaska. Just a year ago, I went to the other end of the world and met with researchers—including a team from the University of Maine's outstanding Climate Change Institute—in Antarctica. These regions are the canary in the coal mine, and the changes taking place provide a warning we cannot ignore.

Nor can we forestall taking action by arguing over the precise extent of climate change and the human contribution to it. The answer to scientific uncertainty is additional research. Title VI of my legislation would authorize $60 million for abrupt climate change research. Studies suggest that the climate can change dramatically within a very short period of time. An abrupt climate change triggered by the ongoing buildup of greenhouse gases could cause catastrophic droughts and floods.

Understanding and predicting climate change are enormous scientific challenges. A great deal more scientific research is necessary in order to better understand the potential risk of abrupt climate change, and this legislation would provide the resources that are so urgently required.

There are few issues of greater concern to my constituents in my home state of Maine than our nation's ongoing and escalating reliance on foreign oil, and the damage our vehicle and power plant emissions are doing to the environment. They bear the brunt of wildly fluctuating and steadily increasing energy prices. They know the harm this dependence causes to our national security, and they know the harm our current energy usage causes to the air they breathe. And although a bone-chilling, winter nor'easter may bring a new round of jokes about the possible benefits of global warming, they know that human-caused climate change is no laughing matter. They know we must be better stewards of our planet.

I believe that all Americans—whether they live in the sunny south or a winter wonderland—share these concerns. They have heard enough talk; they want us to act. Americans deserve to breathe clean air, pay reasonable gasoline and electricity prices, live in a world with a stable climate future, and have the peace of mind that comes with secure energy supplies. The Energy Independence, Clean Air, and Climate Security Act offers a comprehensive, integrated approach to these issues.

In conclusion, let me describe the six titles very briefly.

The first title of my bill would increase energy independence and reduce greenhouse gas emissions by improving the efficiency of our transportation sector. The second title would accomplish similar goals by replacing some gasoline with alternative fuels. The third title would reduce emissions of mercury, carbon dioxide, sulfur dioxide, and nitrogen oxides from powerplants. The fourth title would help to reduce heat and electricity bills and diversify our electricity supply through a combination of energy efficiency and renewable energy provisions. The fifth title would help save taxpayers money through the elimination of certain tax breaks for the oil industry. Finally, the sixth title would authorize $60 million for abrupt climate change research to help us better understand this phenomenon.

I am particularly excited about renewable fuels. I think there is a lot we could do to expand the tax break for ethanol to include cellulosic biomass. There is very exciting research being done at the University of Maine which has been in the forefront of applying a research technique known as "Life Cycle Analysis," which is a tool that analyzes the energy requirements and environmental footprint involved in the manufacture, use, and disposal of a material. It is ideal for identifying fuels which have the lowest environmental impact and the greatest potential for reducing greenhouse gas emissions while reducing our dependence on foreign oil. This technology will help us move our petroleum-based economy toward a renewable, sustainable, forest bioeconomy.

This is a complex bill. I appreciate the indulgence of my colleagues.

By Mr. DODD (for himself, Mr. ENSIGN, Mr. AKAKA, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. MENENDEZ, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, and Mr. CASEY):

S. 1557. A bill to amend part B of title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to improve 21st Century Community Learning Centers; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today, joined by my colleague Senator ENSIGN, to introduce the Improving 21st Century Community Learning Centers Act of 2007, which will provide children with safe, healthy, and academically focused afterschool programs. This bill is endorsed by the Afterschool Alliance, an organization representing more than 20,000 public, private, and nonprofit afterschool providers who are dedicated to expanding access to high quality afterschool programs, as well as many other national and local organizations.

More than 14 million children enrolled in kindergarten through 12th grade spend time unsupervised in the hours after school. Between the hours of 3 p.m. and 6 p.m., while parents are at work, kids are most likely to experiment with risky behaviors. To the contrary, students who regularly attend afterschool programs have better grades and behavior in school, better peer relations and emotional adjustment, and lower incidences of drug use, violence, and pregnancy. America's families rely on afterschool programs to give their children the opportunity to be engaged in high quality learning activities that will enhance their children's success in school and in life.

The Improving 21st Century Community Learning Centers Act of 2007 is designed to do three things: enhance program quality and sustainability, address the obesity epidemic by including physical fitness and wellness programs in the list of possible programming activities, and encourage service learning. First, our bill provides States with tools designed to sustain high quality afterschool programs by allowing program grantees to renew their grants based on their program performance. The legislation also gives States the option to expand their technical assistance functions to further improve the quality of afterschool programs.

Second, this bill will increase opportunities for children and young people to be more physically active. As obesity reaches epidemic proportions in our society, allowing for such opportunities is critical in ensuring our children's overall health. Obesity is among the easiest medical conditions to recognize, but among the most difficult to treat. The annual cost to society for obesity is estimated at nearly $100 billion. Physical activity and wellness programs are critical to our overall health and well-being.

Third, this bill encourages children to be involved in service learning and youth development activities. Service learning integrates student designed service projects with academic studies. This type of program has been shown to strengthen student engagement, enhance student achievement, lower drop out and suspension rates, develop workforce and leadership skills and provide opportunities for team work. The Improving 21st Century Community Learning Centers Act will help build the character and work ethic of our children and youth.

Finally, it is of paramount importance that we adequately fund our afterschool programs. Currently, afterschool programs have served, at most, only 1.4 million children. It is critical that we provide more opportunities for youth to be engaged in high quality afterschool programming.

The Improving 21st Century Community Learning Centers Act provides a critical first step toward ensuring the health, safety, and education of our Nation's children. I hope that my colleagues will join me in supporting this important legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1557

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "21st Century Community Learning Centers Act of 2007".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) More than 28,000,000 children in the United States have parents who work outside the home and 14,300,000 children in the United States are unsupervised after the school day ends.

(2) 6,500,000 children are in after school programs but an additional 15,300,000 would participate if such a program were available.

(3) After school programs inspire learning. In academic year 2003-2004, 45 percent of all 21st Century Community Learning Centers program participants had improved their reading grades, and 41 percent improved their mathematics grades.

(4) In academic year 2003-2004 teachers reported that a majority of students who participated in 21st Century Community Learning Centers programs demonstrated improved student behavior, particularly in the areas of academic performance, homework completion, and class participation.

(5) A growing body of research also suggests that children who participate in after school programs attend school more regularly, are more likely to stay in school, and are better prepared for college and careers.

(6) Benefits of after school programs extend beyond the classroom. Communities with after school programs have reported reduced vandalism and juvenile crime.

(7) After school programs help working families. One study estimates that decreased worker productivity due to stress and absenteeism caused by issues related to after school care arrangements costs employers $496 to $1,984 per employee, per year, depending on the annual salary of the employee. The total cost to the business industry is estimated to be between $50,000,000,000 and $300,000,000,000 annually in lost job productivity.

(8) While students in the United States are falling behind in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM), more than 90 percent of after school programs funded by 21st Century Community Learning Centers offer STEM activities, providing more time for children and youth to gain skills and build interest in the STEM fields. Evaluations of after school programs offering STEM activities to students have found increases in the reading, writing, and science skills proficiency of these students. Children who participate in such programs show more interest in science careers, and are more likely to have engaged in science activities just for fun.

(9) Data from 73 after school studies indicate that after school programs employing evidence-based approaches to improving students' personal and social skills were consistently successful in producing multiple benefits for students, including improvements in students' personal, social, and academic skills, as well as students' self-esteem.

(10) Teens who do not participate in after school programs are nearly 3 times more likely to skip classes than teens who do participate. The teens who do not participate are also 3 times more likely to use marijuana or other drugs, and are more likely to drink alcohol, smoke cigarettes, and engage in sexual activity. In general, self care and boredom can increase the likelihood that a young person will experiment with drugs and alcohol by as much as 50 percent.

(11) A 2006 study predicts that by the year 2010 more than 46 percent of school-age children in the Americas will be overweight and 1 in 7 such children will be obese. A study of after school program participants in 3 elementary schools found that after school participants were significantly less likely to be obese at the 3-year follow-up physical exam and were more likely to have increased acceptance among their peers. After school programs provide children and youth with opportunities to engage in sports and other fitness activities.

(12) After school programs have been identified as effective venues for improving nutrition, nutrition education, and physical activity at a time when just 20 percent of youth in grades 9 through 12 consume the recommended daily servings of fruits and vegetables.

(13) After school programs also provide children and youth with opportunities for service learning, a teaching and learning approach that integrates student-designed service projects that address community needs with academic studies. With structured time to reflect on their service experience, these projects can strengthen student engagement, enhance students' academic achievement, lower school drop out and suspension rates, and help develop important workforce skills that employers are looking for, including leadership skills, critical thinking, teamwork, and oral and written communication.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Improving 21st Century Community Learning Centers Act of 2007 with my colleague, Senator CHRIS DODD.

The Improving 21st Century Community Learning Centers Act of 2007 will go a long way toward providing our Nation's children with safe, healthy, and academically focused afterschool programs. Mr. President, 21st century community learning centers provide students in rural and inner-city public schools with access to homework centers, tutors, mentors, and drug and alcohol prevention counseling, as well as cultural and recreational activities.

Today, 14.3 million children go home alone when the school day ends, including over 40,000 kindergartners and almost 4 million middle school students. With less than half of the children in afterschool programs, the parents of another 15.3 million children say their children would participate in afterschool—if a program were available. The 21st Century Community Learning Centers Program is a critical resource to children, families, and communities in their struggle to meet the need for high-quality afterschool programs.

The 21st Century Community Learning Centers Program is a worthwhile and necessary investment—evaluations show that these investments are having a great impact on children's academic achievement and behavior. In 2003–2004, 45 percent of all program participants had improved their reading grades and 41 percent improved their math grades. Teachers reported that a majority of the students participating in the programs improved their academic performance, improved their school attendance, completed more homework on time and to the teacher's satisfaction, and improved their class participation. Beyond the academic gains, these programs are making kids and communities safer by reducing vandalism and juvenile crime. It is important that we provide our children with access to high-quality, safe, and enriching environments in the hours after the school day.

When my colleagues and I passed the No Child Left Behind Act in 2002 it included a bipartisan commitment to quality afterschool programs and investment in the 21st Century Community Learning Centers Program. The learning centers are currently funded at $981 million and serve about 1 million children, yet this is just a fraction—7 percent—of the children who are eligible for the program and need access to high-quality afterschool programs. Improving 21st Century Community Learning Centers Act of 2007 will address this need and provide our children with the sustainable afterschool opportunities that they deserve.

Recent evaluations of 21st Century Community Learning Center Programs show that participating students are improving both their academic performance and social behavior in and out of the classroom. Yet maintaining quality programs takes constant effort and resources. This legislation increases the investments in quality that are critical to ensuring that programs not only contribute to children's academic and social development but also give young people the opportunities that will ensure their college and workplace readiness in the future.

As the father of three and as a former latch-key kid myself, I understand the benefits of providing children with a place to go and activities to help them excel. I am committed to ensuring that our schools have the assistance they need to ensure that our children leave the public education system as well-rounded individuals. Children attending public schools should not only be proficient in reading, writing, and arithmetic but also be skillful in music, art, and athletics. It is my sincere hope that my colleagues in the Senate will recognize this important need and cosponsor the Improving 21st Century Community Learning Centers Act of 2007.

By Mr. DODD (for himself, Mr. DOMENICI, and Mr. KENNEDY):

S. 1560. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to improve the quality and availability of mental health services for children and adolescents; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. DODD, Mr. President, I rise today to introduce bipartisan legislation with my colleagues, Senators DOMENICI and KENNEDY, that seeks to meet the mental health needs of children and adolescents.

I believe that the task of ensuring the emotional well-being and resiliency of our young people is one of paramount importance. We all know that mental health is a critical component contributing to a child's general health and ability to grow both intellectually and physically. Yet, the task of ensuring the mental health of children and adolescents is not an easy one. In fact, it is arguably one of the most difficult and largely unspoken tasks facing our Nation today.

According to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration SAMHSA, 1 in 10 children and adolescents suffer from mental health disorders serious enough to cause some level of impairment. Out of these young people, only one in five receive the specialty mental health services they require.

These startling statistics prompted former Surgeon General Dr. David Satcher to convene a conference in 1999 that examined the mental health needs of children. The conference, composed of some of the Nation's leading experts in mental and public health published a seminal report that concluded that "... the burden of suffering experienced by children with mental illness and their families has created a health crisis in this country." The report further concluded that "... there is broad evidence that the Nation lacks a unified infrastructure to help children suffering from mental illness."

The "burden of suffering" described in Surgeon General Satcher's report is a burden endured by millions of children, adolescents, and their families in Connecticut and across our Nation. Throughout my Senate career, I have heard from families who have shared with me their personal stories in struggling to care for their children. Their stories have fueled my belief that child and adolescent mental health needs to be a top priority.

Recognizing the fragmentation of the Nation's mental health delivery system, Surgeon General Satcher's report concluded that one fundamental way to meet the mental health needs of children and adolescents is to "... move towards a community-based mental health delivery system that balances health promotion, disease prevention, early detection, and universal access to care." The report further stated eight goals to ensure the resiliency of children and adolescents. These goals were: first, to promote public awareness of children's mental health issues and reduce the stigma often associated with mental illness; second, to continue to develop, disseminate, and implement scientifically proven prevention and treatment services in the field of children's mental health; third, to improve the assessment and recognition of mental health needs in children; fourth, to eliminate racial, ethnic and socioeconomic disparities in access to mental health care services; fifth, to improve infrastructure for children's mental health services, including support for scientifically proven interventions across professions; sixth, to increase access to and coordination of quality mental health care services; seventh, to train frontline providers to recognize and manage mental health issues, and educate mental health care providers about scientifically proven prevention and treatment services, and; finally, to monitor the access to and coordination of quality mental health care services.

In 2002, President Bush established the President's New Freedom Commission on Mental Health to study three obstacles identified by the President that prevent Americans with mental illness from getting the care they require. These obstacles were identified as the stigma that too often surrounds mental health care, a lack of mental health parity, and the fragmented mental health delivery system. In 2003, the President's New Freedom Commission issued a report that made a series of recommendations on how the Nation's mental health system could be transformed for the better. Like Surgeon General Satcher's report, this publication also set forth a series of goals. They were: first, to ensure that Americans understand that mental health is essential to overall health; second, to ensure that mental health care is consumer- and family-driven; third, to eliminate disparities in mental health care services; fourth, to ensure that early mental health screening, assessment, and referral services are common practices; fifth, to ensure that excellent mental health care is delivered and research is accelerated; and finally, to ensure that technology is used to access mental health care and information.

I describe these two reports because the legislation I am introducing with my colleagues today seeks to address the recommendations they espouse. The Child and Adolescent Mental Health Resiliency Act of 2007 authorizes $205 million in an effort to meet five principal objectives.

The first objective is to increase access to, and improve the quality of, mental health care services delivered to children and adolescents. Our legislation seeks to meet this objective in several ways.

First, it authorizes a new grant of $50 million for states to develop and implement a comprehensive mental health plan exclusively for children and adolescents that provides community-based mental health early intervention and prevention services and relevant support services, such as primary health care, education, transportation and housing. The plan would have to meet a set of core operational and evaluative requirements and would have to be developed through extensive outside consultation with children and adolescents, their families, advocates and health professionals.

Second, our legislation authorizes two matching grants of $22.5 million each for community health centers, many of which primarily serve low-income populations, and primary health care facilities, such as a pediatrician's office, to provide community-based mental health services in coordination with community mental health centers and/or trained mental health professionals.

Third, our legislation authorizes a new grant of $22.5 million for states, localities and private nonprofit organizations, for example, school districts, to provide community-based mental health services in schools and appropriate mental health training activities to relevant school and health professionals.

Fourth, our legislation authorizes a new grant of $20 million for States, localities and private nonprofit organizations to provide community-based mental health services specifically for at-risk mothers and their children.

Fifth, our legislation authorizes a new grant of $10 million for States, localities and private nonprofit organizations to provide community-based mental health services for children and adolescents in juvenile justice systems.

Sixth, our legislation authorizes $10 million for the Secretary of Health and Human Services to establish, run and evaluate a demonstration project that improves the ability of local case managers to work across the mental health, public health, substance abuse, child welfare, education, juvenile justice and social services systems in a State.

Finally, our legislation requires States to meet their statutory obligations to fund fully mental health screening services under the Early and Periodic Screening, Diagnostic and Treatment Services Program. It also requires current successful initiatives, such as the Comprehensive Community Mental Health Services for Children with Serious Emotional Disturbance Program, the Community Mental Health Services Performance Partnership block grant, the Community Mental Health Services block grant, and the Jail Diversion Program, to expand their scope with respect to certain reporting, evaluative, and service activities.

The second objective our legislation seeks to meet is ensuring greater public awareness and greater family participation in mental health services decisionmaking. Toward this end, our legislation does the following:

First, it authorizes a new grant of $10 million for States, localities and private nonprofit organizations to develop policies that enable families of children and adolescents with mental health disorders to have increased control and choice over mental health services provided and received through a publicly funded mental health system.

Second, it authorizes a new grant of $10 million for private nonprofit organizations to provide information on child and adolescent mental health disorders, services, support services and respite care to families of children and adolescents with or who are at risk for mental health disorders.

Third, it authorizes a new grant of $10 million for private nonprofit organizations to develop community coalitions and public education activities that promote child and adolescent resiliency.

In addition, our legislation authorizes $10 million to establish two new technical assistance centers. These centers are designed to collect and disseminate information on mental health disorders, mental health disorder risk factors, mental health services, mental health service access, relevant support services, reducing the inappropriate use of seclusion and restraints, and family participation in mental health service decision-making, exclusively for children and adolescents with or at risk of mental health disorders.

The third objective that this legislation seeks to meet is for the Federal Government to develop a policy specifically designed to meet the unique mental health needs of children and adolescents. The legislation authorizes $10 million for the establishment of an interagency coordinating committee consisting of all Federal officials whose departments or agencies oversee mental health activities for children and adolescents. Modeled after language in the Garrett Lee Smith Memorial Act, our legislation requires the coordinating committee to consult with outside parties, develop a Federal policy exclusively pertaining to child and adolescent mental health, and report annually to Congress on specific challenges and solutions associated with comprehensively addressing the mental health needs of children and adolescents. It also gives the committee flexibility to develop and implement joint demonstration projects that bolster appropriate mental health care services to children and adolescents.

The fourth and final objective that this legislation seeks to meet is increasing the amount of research into child and adolescent mental health. Only through intensive research can we develop evidence-based best practices that allow us to develop services that fully meet the mental health needs of our children. Toward that end, our legislation authorizes a new grant of $12.5 million for States, localities, institutions of higher education and private nonprofit organizations to identify and research current service, training and information awareness gaps in mental health delivery systems for children and adolescents. Our legislation also authorizes $12.5 million to enhance comprehensive Federal research and evaluation of promising best practices, existing disparities, psycho-tropic medications, trauma, recovery and rehabilitation, and co-occurring dis-

I have begun working with my colleagues on the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions to reauthorize the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. It is my hope that this legislation can contribute to that reauthorization effort.

I would like to conclude by saying that this legislation, while comprehensive, is a first step, not a complete solution, towards fully meeting the challenge of ensuring the resiliency of our children and adolescents. We need to continue working together—young people, families, doctors, counselors, nurses, teachers, advocates, and policymakers, since we all have a stake, either professional or personal, on this issue. Only by working together can we develop effective and compassionate ways through which every young person in this Nation is given a solid foundation upon which to reach his or her dreams in life. I sincerely hope that my colleagues will join us in this important effort.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) According to the Surgeon General's Conference on Children's Mental Health: A National Action Agenda, mental health is a critical component of children's learning and general health.

(2) According to the Surgeon General's Conference on Children's Mental Health: A National Action Agenda, 1 in 10 children and adolescents suffer from mental illness severe enough to cause some level of impairment.

(3) According to the Surgeon General's Conference on Children's Mental Health: A National Action Agenda, only 1 in 5 children and adolescents who suffer from severe mental illness receive the specialty mental health services they require.

(4) According to the World Health Organization, childhood neuropsychiatric disorders will rise by more than 50 percent by 2020, internationally, to become 1 of the 5 most common causes of morbidity, mortality, and disability among children.

(5) According to the Surgeon General's Conference on Children's Mental Health: A National Action Agenda, the burden of suffering experienced by children with mental illness and their families has created a health crisis in this country.

(6) According to the Surgeon General's Conference on Children's Mental Health: A National Action Agenda, there is broad evidence that the nation lacks a unified infrastructure to help children suffering from mental illness.

(7) According to the President's New Freedom Commission on Mental Health, President George Bush identified 3 obstacles preventing Americans with mental illness from getting the care they require: stigma that surrounds mental illness, unfair treatment limitations and financial requirements placed on mental health benefits in private health insurance, and the fragmented mental health service delivery system.

(8) According to the Surgeon General's Conference on Children's Mental Health: A National Action Agenda, 1 way to ensure that the country's health system meets the mental health needs of children is to move towards a community-based mental health delivery system that balances health promotion, disease prevention, early detection, and universal access to care.

(9) According to the President's New Freedom Commission on Mental Health, transforming the country's mental health delivery system rests on 2 principles: services and treatments must be consumer and family-centered, and care must focus on increasing a person's ability to successfully cope with life's challenges, on facilitating recovery, and building resiliency.

(10) According to the Surgeon General's Conference on Children's Mental Health: A National Action Agenda, the mental health and resiliency of children can be ensured by methods that promote public awareness of children's mental health issues and reduce stigma associated with mental illness, continue to develop, disseminate, and implement evidence-based and promising prevention and treatment services in the field of children's mental health, improve the assessment of and recognition of mental health needs in children, eliminate racial, ethnic, and socioeconomic disparities in access to mental healthcare services, improve the infrastructure for children's mental health services, including support for evidence-based and promising interventions across professions, increase access to and coordination of quality mental healthcare services, train frontline providers to recognize and manage mental health issues and educate mental healthcare providers about evidence-based and promising prevention and treatment services, and monitor the access to and coordination of quality mental healthcare services.

(11) According to the President's New Freedom Commission on Mental Health, the country's mental health delivery system can be successfully transformed by methods that ensure Americans understand that mental health is essential to overall health, ensure mental health care is consumer and family-driven, eliminate disparities in mental healthcare services, ensure early mental health screening, assessment, and referral services are common practices, ensure that excellent mental health care is delivered and research is accelerated, and ensure that technology is used to access mental health care and information.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 221—SUPPORTING NATIONAL PERIPHERAL ARTERIAL DISEASE AWARENESS MONTH AND EFFORTS TO EDUCATE PEOPLE ABOUT PERIPHERAL ARTERIAL DISEASE

Mr. CRAPO (for himself and Mr. DORGAN) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions:

S. RES. 221

Whereas peripheral arterial disease is a vascular disease that occurs when narrowed arteries reduce blood flow to the limbs;

Whereas peripheral arterial disease is a significant vascular disease that can be as serious as a heart attack or stroke;

Whereas peripheral arterial disease affects approximately 8,000,000 to 12,000,000 Americans;

Whereas 1 in 5 patients with peripheral arterial disease will experience cardiovascular death, heart attack, stroke, or hospitalization within 1 year;

Whereas the survival rate for individuals with peripheral arterial disease is worse than the outcome for many common cancers;

Whereas peripheral arterial disease is a leading cause of lower limb amputation in the United States;

Whereas many patients with peripheral arterial disease have walking impairment that leads to a diminished quality of life and functional capacity;

Whereas a majority of patients with peripheral arterial disease are asymptomatic and less than half of individuals with peripheral arterial disease are aware of their diagnoses;

Whereas African-American ethnicity is a strong and independent risk factor for peripheral arterial disease, and yet this fact is not well known to those at risk;

Whereas effective treatments are available for people with peripheral arterial disease to reduce heart attacks, strokes, and amputations and to improve quality of life;

Whereas many patients with peripheral arterial disease are still untreated with proven therapies;

Whereas there is a need for comprehensive educational efforts designed to increase awareness of peripheral arterial disease among medical professionals and the greater public in order to promote early detection and proper treatment of this disease to improve quality of life, prevent heart attacks and strokes, and save lives and limbs; and

Whereas September 2007 is an appropriate month to observe National Peripheral Arterial Disease Awareness Month: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) supports National Peripheral Arterial Disease Awareness Month and efforts to educate people about peripheral arterial disease;

(2) acknowledges the critical importance of peripheral arterial disease awareness to improve national cardiovascular health;

(3) supports raising awareness of the consequences of undiagnosed and untreated peripheral arterial disease and the need to seek appropriate care as a serious public health issue; and

(4) calls upon the people of the United States to observe the month with appropriate programs and activities.

SENATE RESOLUTION 222—SUPPORTING THE GOALS AND IDEALS OF PANCREATIC CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

Mrs. CLINTON (for herself and Mr. SMITH) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions:

S. RES. 222

Whereas over 37,170 people will be diagnosed with pancreatic cancer this year in the United States;

Whereas pancreatic cancer is the 4th most common cause of cancer death in the United States;

Whereas 75 percent of pancreatic cancer patients die within the first year of their diagnosis and only 5 percent survive more than 5 years, making pancreatic cancer the deadliest of any cancer;

Whereas there has been no significant improvement in survival rates in the last 25 years and pancreatic cancer research is still in the earliest scientific stages;

Whereas there are no early detection methods and minimal treatment options for pancreatic cancer;

Whereas when symptoms of pancreatic cancer generally present themselves, it is too late for an optimistic prognosis, and the average survival rate of those diagnosed with metastasis of the disease is only 3 to 6 months;

Whereas the incidence rate of pancreatic cancer is 40 to 50 percent higher in African Americans than in other ethnic groups; and

Whereas it would be appropriate to observe November as Pancreatic Cancer Awareness Month to educate communities across the Nation about pancreatic cancer and the need for research funding, early detection methods, effective treatments, and treatment programs: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate supports the goals and ideals of Pancreatic Cancer Awareness Month.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a resolution which supports the goals and ideals of Pancreatic Cancer Awareness Month. This resolution is an important step toward bringing the public awareness, funding for research, and congressional attention that is essential for addressing one of the most lethal cancers we face as a Nation.

I doubt that there is one person who hasn't lost a friend or family member to cancer, or knows someone who has. The American Cancer Society tells us that pancreatic cancer is the fourth leading cause of cancer death in the United States. The reality is that pancreatic cancer will take over 33,000 American lives this year, more than 2,330 in New York. And yet, there are no early detection methods and our best treatment is a surgical procedure that is more than 70 years old.

I believe that we can do better. This resolution encourages communities across the country to use the month of November to bring attention to what we have left to tackle. We need research dollars to create early detection methods, to find effective treatments, and to raise awareness about this deadly disease.

I am proud to introduce the Pancreatic Cancer Awareness Month resolution today, and I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this critical health issue.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise today in support of a resolution that recognizes November as National Pancreatic Cancer Awareness Month. I am pleased to be joining my colleague, Senator CLINTON, in introducing this resolution, which represents a way to educate communities across the Nation about pancreatic cancer and the need for increased research funding, early detection methods, and effective treatments and programs.

Like many Americans, I have seen the ramifications of cancer first hand. I support this resolution in honor and loving memory of the millions of Americans who have been diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and their families, and for my mother, Jessica Udall Smith, whom I lost to pancreatic cancer.

Pancreatic cancer is hard to detect in its early stages as it doesn't cause symptoms right away. Also, because the pancreas is hidden behind other organs, health care providers cannot see or feel the tumors during routine exams. Because there are no early detection methods, pancreatic cancer often is found late and spreads quickly.

This year, more than 37,000 Americans will receive a diagnosis of pancreatic cancer and for over 33,000 of them, it will be their killer. While overall cancer death rates have declined, the number of people diagnosed with pancreatic cancer is actually increasing. It is projected that this year, 440 Oregonians will die from pancreatic cancer. That represents a 17-percent increase in pancreatic cancer deaths in Oregon over the last 3 to 4 years.

Individuals fighting pancreatic cancer continue to face discouragingly low odds of survival. In 1975, the 5 year survival rate for pancreatic cancer was 2 percent. Twenty-five years later, the survival rate remain at an unacceptably low level of 5 percent, making this cancer the fourth leading cause of cancer-related death. Indeed, pancreatic cancer is considered the deadliest cancer, of which 75 percent of patients diagnosed with this disease die within the first year and most within the first 3 to 6 months. Early detection tools, such as those that currently are available for ovarian, colon, breast and prostate cancer, would make a significant impact on pancreatic cancer, but those tools require a new investment in basic scientific research at the National Cancer Institute, NCI.

In recent years, funding for cancer research has fallen behind the promise made during the doubling of the budget for the National Institutes for Health, NIH. When NIH funding was first doubled, success rates for first submissions of grant requests to the NCI were 30 percent overall and 15 percent for new investigators. Those rates now have dropped to an average of 10 percent across the board. Unfortunately, we are anticipating cuts to other NCI programs that advance research, such as the Specialized Programs of Research Excellence program, which provides vital opportunities to explore new areas of research.

I support biomedical research and the great promise it holds in the development of new treatments and possible cures for the many types of cancer, including pancreatic cancer. Past investments at the NCI have helped drive new discoveries that led to the decline in overall cancer deaths in the U.S. for the second consecutive year. Now is the time to expand our efforts in the fight against pancreatic cancer.

I ask that my colleagues support this resolution, which will help increase research, education and awareness for pancreatic cancer.

SENATE RESOLUTION 223—RECOGNIZING THE EFFORTS AND CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE MEMBERS OF THE MONUMENTS, FINE ARTS, AND ARCHIVES PROGRAM UNDER THE CIVIL AFFAIRS AND MILITARY GOVERNMENT SECTIONS OF THE UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES DURING AND FOLLOWING WORLD WAR II WHO WERE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE PRESERVATION, PROTECTION, AND RESTITUTION OF ARTISTIC AND CULTURAL TREASURES IN COUNTRIES OCCUPIED BY THE ALLIED ARMIES

Mr. INHOFE (for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mrs. BOXER, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. MENENDEZ, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mr. WYDEN) submitted the following resolution; which was:

S. RES. 223

Whereas the United States Government established the American Commission for the Protection and Salvage of Artistic and Historic Monuments in War Areas in 1943 to promote and coordinate the protection and salvage of works of art and cultural and historical monuments and records in countries occupied by Allied armies during World War II;

Whereas the American Commission for the Protection and Salvage of Artistic and Historic Monuments in War Areas is also known as the Roberts Commission, in honor of its chairman, Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts;

Whereas, in connection with the establishment of the Roberts Commission, the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives program (MFAA) was established under the Civil Affairs and Military Government Sections of the United States Armed Forces;

Whereas the establishment of the Roberts Commission and the MFAA provided an example for other countries, working in conjunction with the United States, to develop similar programs, and more than 100 foreign MFAA personnel, representing at least seventeen countries, contributed to this international effort;

Whereas the MFAA was comprised of both men and women, commissioned officers and civilians, who were appointed or volunteered to serve as representatives of the Roberts Commission and as the official guardians of some of the world's greatest artistic and cultural treasures;

Whereas members of the MFAA, called the "Monuments Men", often joined frontline military forces and some even lost their lives in combat during World War II;

Whereas, during World War II and for years following the Allied victory, members of the MFAA worked tirelessly to locate, identify, catalogue, restore, and repatriate priceless works of art and irreplaceable cultural artifacts, including masterpieces by Da Vinci, Michelangelo, Rembrandt, and Vermeer, that had been stolen or sequestered by the Axis powers;

Whereas the heroic actions of the MFAA in saving priceless works of art and irreplaceable cultural artifacts for future generations cannot be overstated, and set a moral precedent and established standards, practices, and procedures for the preservation, protection, and restitution of artistic and cultural treasures in future armed conflicts;

Whereas members of the MFAA went on to become renowned directors and curators of preeminent international cultural institutions, including the National Gallery of Art, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Modern Art, the Toledo Museum of Art, and the Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art, as well as professors at institutions of higher education, including Harvard University, Yale University, Princeton University, New York University, Williams College, and Columbia University;

Whereas other members of the MFAA were founders, presidents, and members of associations such as the New York City Ballet, the American Association of Museums, the American Association of Museum Directors, the Archaeological Institute of America, the Society of Architectural Historians, the American Society of Landscape Architects, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the National Endowment for the Arts, as well as respected artists, architects, musicians, and archivists; and

Whereas members of the MFAA have never been collectively honored for their service and contributions to humanity, and they are deserving of the utmost acknowledgment, gratitude, and recognition, in particular the 12 known Monuments Men who are still alive: Now, therefore, be it

(1) recognizes the men and women who served in the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives program (MFAA) under the Civil Affairs and Military Government Sections of the United States Armed Forces for their heroic role in the preservation, protection, and restitution of monuments, works of art, and other artifacts of inestimable cultural importance in Europe and Asia during and following World War II;

(2) recognizes that without their dedication and service, many more of the world's artistic and historic treasures would have been destroyed or lost forever amidst the chaos and destruction of World War II;

(3) acknowledges that the detailed catalogues, documentation, inventories, and photographs developed and compiled by MFAA personnel during and following World War II have made and continue to make possible the restitution of stolen works of art to their rightful owners; and

(4) commends and extols the members of the MFAA for establishing a precedent for action to protect cultural property in the event of armed conflict, and by their action setting a standard not just for one country, but for people of all nations to acknowledge and uphold.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a resolution honoring the efforts and contributions of the members of the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives Program under the Civil Affairs and Military Government Sections of the U.S. Armed Forces during and following World War II. This group, known as the "Monuments Men," was responsible for the preservation, protection, and restitution of priceless artistic, and cultural treasures in countries occupied by the Allied armies.

In 1938, the Nazi party in Germany began a wide-scale confiscation of millions of pieces of artwork and other cultural artifacts throughout continental Europe, including masterpieces by Leonardo Da Vinci, Michelangelo, and Rembrandt. Much of the art was confiscated from Nazi-conquered Europe, as well as from Jewish private collectors who were forced to relinquish their property rights.

In 1944, with the Allied armies rolling across Europe, the Monuments Men began their work. They were given the charge of protecting the cultural treasures of Europe, which proved to be a daunting task, given that they, at times, had to protect these treasures from friend as well as foe. Their first task was to prevent Allied forces in the field from damaging national monuments and from damaging or looting public or private collections. In the spring of 1945, the Monuments Men began discovering large caches of Nazi-confiscated artwork and artifacts. They began the arduous process of cataloging and repatriating the artwork and artifacts to their rightful owners.

I would like to take this moment to recognize the efforts of a couple of my fellow Oklahomans who served as Monuments Men. CPT Walter Johan Huchthausen served as a Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives officer with the U.S. 9th Army in Europe. Captain Huchthausen was born in Perry, OK on December 19, 1904. He earned a master of architecture degree from Harvard University in 1930 and went on to become the director of the Department of Design at the Boston Museum School of Fine Arts before joining the faculty at the University of Minnesota. Captain Huchthausen enlisted in 1942. He served as a Monuments Man in France and Germany before he was tragically killed by gunfire in April of 1945 while working to salvage an altarpiece in a German town.

Technical SGT Horace V. Apgar of Oklahoma City was transferred to the Monuments Men in Frankfurt in 1945, where he was involved in the retrieval and restitution of Jewish property. He was then assigned to the Rothschild home in Paris, which was being used as a depository for recovered Jewish artifacts stolen from synagogues and temples. Mr. Apgar returned home after the war and sought a career in music. He graduated from the Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester in 1949 served as a bass teacher at the University of Oklahoma from 1951 to 1955. He went on to a 56-year career with the Oklahoma City Philharmonic Orchestra.

It is in large part due to the tireless efforts of Captain Huchthausen, Sergeant Apgar, and the many brave American men and women who served as Monuments Men that over 5 million works of art and other cultural treasures were protected and preserved following the collapse of the Nazi regime.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 35—DECLARING JUNE 6 A NATIONAL DAY OF PRAYER AND REDEDICATION FOR THE MEN AND WOMEN OF THE UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES AND THEIR MISSION

Mr. DEMINT submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration:

S. CON. RES. 35

Whereas public prayer and national days of prayer are a long-standing American tradition to bolster national resolve and summon the national will for victory;

Whereas the Continental Congress asked the colonies to pray for wisdom in forming a nation in 1775;

Whereas Benjamin Franklin proposed that the Constitutional Convention begin each day with a prayer;

Whereas General George Washington, as he prepared his troops for battle with the British in May 1776, ordered them to pray for the campaign ahead, that it would please the Almighty to “prosper the arms of the united colonies” and “establish the peace and freedom of America upon a solid and lasting foundation”;

Whereas President Abraham Lincoln, in declaring in the Gettysburg Address that “this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom”, rededicated the Nation to ensuring that “government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth”;

Whereas, as 73,000 Americans stormed the beaches at Normandy, France, on June 6, 1944 (D-Day), President Franklin Delano Roosevelt went on the national radio to lead the Nation in prayer for their success;

Whereas, in his D-Day radio prayer, President Roosevelt did not declare a single day of special prayer, but instead compelled all Americans to “devote themselves in a continuance of prayer”;

Whereas the words of President Roosevelt calling on all Americans to “devote themselves in a continuance of prayer” for American soldiers, sailors, airmen, and Marines in harm’s way are just as appropriate today as they were in June 1944;

Whereas, with our troops once again facing danger abroad and the Nation looking for support here at home, the time is ripe to once again heed the words and prayerful wisdom contained in the D-Day radio address of the 20th century’s greatest Democrat president as he implored the Nation: “as we rise to each new day, and again when each day is spent, let words of prayer be on our lips, invoking Thy help to our efforts”;

Whereas more than 350,000 men and women of the United States Armed Forces are deployed worldwide today;

Whereas more than 200,000 of these troops are engaged in armed combat in Iraq and Afghanistan against determined and ruthless enemies;

Whereas more than 3,800 brave Americans have been killed, and over 26,000 have been wounded, while fighting the War on Terror;

Whereas, because the War on Terror will be long and hard, because success is not likely to come with rushing speed, and because the sacrifice will continue to be immeasurable in human terms, it is appropriate to make every anniversary of D-Day, June 6th, a national day of prayer and rededication for the men and women of the United States Armed Forces and their mission; and

Whereas the D-Day radio address of President Roosevelt is the inspiration and model for this annual national day of prayer and rededication: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That—

(1) every June 6 will hereafter be a national day of prayer and rededication for the men and women of the United States Armed Forces and their mission; and

(2) in encouraging our fellow Americans to join us in this national day of prayer and rededication for our troops and their mission, that the Senate and the House of Representatives will each designate one member to read aloud in the Senate and House chambers each June 6th, in its entirety, President Roosevelt’s D-Day radio prayer, as follows:

“My Fellow Americans:

Last night, when I spoke with you about the fall of Rome, I knew at that moment that troops of the United States and our Allies were crossing the Channel in another and greater operation. It has come to pass with success thus far.

And so, in this poignant hour, I ask you to join with me in prayer:

Almighty God: Our sons, pride of our nation, this day have set upon a mighty endeavor, a struggle to preserve our Republic, our religion, and our civilization, and to set free a suffering humanity.

Lead them straight and true; give strength to their arms, stoutness to their hearts, steadfastness in their faith.

They will need Thy blessings. Their road will be long and hard. For the enemy is strong. He may hurl back our forces. Success may not come with rushing speed, but we shall return again and again; and we know that by Thy grace, and by the righteousness of our cause, our sons will triumph.

They will be sore tried, by night and by day, without rest—until the victory is won. The darkness will be rent by noise and flame. Men’s souls will be shaken with the violences of war.

For these men are lately drawn from the ways of peace. They fight not for the lust of conquest. They fight to end conquest. They fight to liberate. They fight to let justice arise, and tolerance and goodwill among all Thy people. They yearn but for the end of battle, for their return to the haven of home.

Some will never return. Embrace these, Father, and receive them, Thy heroic servants, into Thy kingdom.

And for us at home—fathers, mothers, children, wives, sisters, and brothers of brave men overseas, whose thoughts and prayers are ever with them—help us, Almighty God, to rededicate ourselves in renewed faith in Thee in this hour of great sacrifice.

Many people have urged that I call the nation into a single day of special prayer. But because the road is long and the desire is great, I ask that our people devote themselves in a continuance of prayer. As we rise to each new day, and again when each day is spent, let words of prayer be on our lips, invoking Thy help to our efforts.

Give us strength, too—strength in our daily tasks, to redouble the contributions we make in the physical and the material support of our armed forces.

And let our hearts be stout, to wait out the long travail, to bear sorrows that may come, to impart our courage unto our sons wheresoever they may be.

And, O Lord, give us faith. Give us faith in Thee; faith in our sons; faith in each other; faith in our united crusade. Let not the keenness of our spirit ever be dulled. Let not the impacts of temporary events, of temporal matters of but fleeting moment—let not these deter us in our unconquerable purpose.

With Thy blessing, we shall prevail over the unholy forces of our enemy. Help us to conquer the apostles of greed and racial arrogances. Lead us to the saving of our country, and with our sister nations into a world unity that will spell a sure peace—a peace invulnerable to the schemings of unworthy men. And a peace that will let all of men live in freedom, reaping the just rewards of their honest toil.

Thy will be done, Almighty God.

Amen.”

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I rise to speak on a resolution I have submitted today that declares June 6 a national day of prayer and rededication for the men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces and their mission.

As my colleagues know, when 73,000 Americans stormed the beaches at Normandy, France, on June 6, 1944, President Franklin Roosevelt went on national radio to lead the Nation in prayer for their success.

With more than 350,000 men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces deployed worldwide today, and many of these troops directly engaged in armed combat in Iraq and Afghanistan against determined and ruthless enemies, President Roosevelt's words calling on all Americans to "devote themselves to a continuance of prayer" for American soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines in harm's way are as appropriate today as they were in June of 1944.

As we have witnessed, the war on terror will be long and hard. Unfortunately, the sacrifice will continue to be immeasurable in human terms. It is appropriate to make every anniversary of D-day, June 6, a national day of prayer for the men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces.

Now I wish to read President Roosevelt's D-day radio prayer:

MY FELLOW AMERICANS

Last night, when I spoke with you about the fall of Rome, I knew at that moment that troops of the United States and our Allies were crossing the Channel in another and greater operation. It has come to pass with success thus far.

And so, in this poignant hour, I ask you to join with me in prayer:

Almighty God: Our sons, pride of our nation, this day have set upon a mighty endeavor, a struggle to preserve our Republic, our religion, and our civilization, and to set free a suffering humanity.

Lead them straight and true; give strength to their arms, stoutness to their hearts, steadfastness in their faith.

They will need Thy blessings. Their road will be long and hard. For the enemy is strong. He may hurl back our forces. Success may not come with rushing speed, but we shall return again and again; and we know that by Thy grace, and by the righteousness of our cause, our sons will triumph.

They will be sore tried, by night and by day, without rest—until the victory is won. The darkness will be rent by noise and flame. Men's souls will be shaken with the violences of war.

For these men are lately drawn from the ways of peace. They fight not for the lust of conquest. They fight to end conquest. They fight to liberate. They fight to let justice arise, and tolerance and goodwill among all Thy people. They yearn but for the end of battle, for their return to the haven of home.

Some will never return. Embrace these, Father, and receive them, Thy heroic servants, into Thy kingdom.

And for us at home—fathers, mothers, children, wives, sisters, and brothers of brave men overseas, whose thoughts and prayers are ever with them—help us, Almighty God, to rededicate ourselves in renewed faith in Thee in this hour of great sacrifice.

Many people have urged that I call the nation into a single day of special prayer. But because the road is long and the desire is great, I ask that our people devote themselves in a continuance of prayer. As we rise to each new day, and again when each day is spent, let words of prayer be on our lips, invoking Thy help to our efforts.

Give us strength, too—strength in our daily tasks, to redouble the contributions we make in the physical and the material support of our armed forces.

And let our hearts be stout, to wait out the long travail, to bear sorrows that may come, to impart our courage unto our sons wheresoever they may be.

And, O Lord, give us faith. Give us faith in Thee; faith in our sons; faith in each other; faith in our united crusade. Let not the keenness of our spirit ever be dulled. Let not the impacts of temporary events, of temporal matters of but fleeting moment—let not these deter us in our unconquerable purpose.

With Thy blessing, we shall prevail over the unholy forces of our enemy. Help us to conquer the apostles of greed and racial arrogances. Lead us to the saving of our country, and with our sister nations into a world unity that will spell a sure peace—a peace invulnerable to the schemings of unworthy men. And a peace that will let all of men live in freedom, reaping the just rewards of their honest toil.

Thy will be done, Almighty God.

Amen.

This same prayer will be read in the Chamber of the House of Representatives today, and I hope this Chamber will take up this resolution at some point and make June 6 a day of prayer for our Nation.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 36—SUPPORTING THE GOALS AND IDEALS OF NATIONAL TEEN DRIVER SAFETY WEEK

Mr. CASEY (for himself, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. DURBIN, and Mr. OBAMA) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation:

S. CON RES. 36

Whereas motor vehicle crashes are the leading cause of death for adolescents and young adults in the United States, and many of these deaths are preventable;

Whereas almost 7,500 drivers between the ages of 15 and 20 years were involved in fatal crashes in 2005 throughout the United States;

Whereas the fatality rate in the United States for drivers between the ages of 16 and 19 years, based on miles driven, is 4 times the fatality rate for drivers between the ages of 25 and 69 years;

Whereas the majority of teen driver crashes in the United States are due to driver error and speeding, and 15 percent of the crashes are due to drunk driving;

Whereas roughly two-thirds of the teenagers killed in motor vehicle accidents in the United States each year do not use seatbelts;

Whereas approximately 63 percent of teen passenger deaths in the United States occur while other teenagers are driving;

Whereas it is necessary to explore effective ways to reduce the crash risk for young drivers by focusing research and outreach efforts on areas of teen driving that show the most promise for improving safety;

Whereas the National Teen Driver Survey, developed with input from teenagers and administered by The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, demonstrates a national need to increase overall awareness about the safe use of electronic handheld devices, the risk of nighttime and fatigued driving, the importance of consistent seatbelt use, and the practice of gradually increasing driver privileges over time as a young driver gains more experience under supervised conditions;

Whereas in 2005, 1,553 crash fatalities involving a teen driver occurred in the fall, when teenagers are in the first months of the school year and faced with many decisions involving driving, including whether to drive with peer passengers and other distractions; and

Whereas designating the third week of October as National Teen Driver Safety Week is expected to increase awareness of these important issues among teenagers and adults in communities throughout the United States, as additional research is conducted to develop and test effective interventions that will help teenagers become safe drivers: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress—

(1) supports the goals and ideals of National Teen Driver Safety Week; and

(2) encourages the people of the United States to observe the week with appropriate activities that promote the practice of safe driving among the Nation's licensed teenage drivers.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce, along with my colleagues, Senators SPECTER, DURBIN and OBAMA, a Senate concurrent resolution that will recognize a National Teen Driver Safety Week during the third week of October. This resolution will focus increased public attention and positive action upon the No. 1 cause of death of adolescents in our country—motor vehicle crashes. The fatality rate for drivers ages 16 to 19 is approximately four times that of drivers ages 25 to 69. In 2005, approximately 7,500 of our Nation's teenagers were involved as drivers in fatal car crashes.

According to data from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 13 of 67 counties in Pennsylvania had six deaths or more in 2005 as a result of traffic accidents involving teens. In Lackawanna County alone, where I reside, there were 13 accidents among drivers ages 19 and under that resulted in death or an incapacitating injury.

It is essential that we focus a heightened degree of public attention and awareness upon this tragic—and preventable—crisis. A majority of teen driver crashes are due to driver error and speeding. We must provide more numerous and effective interventions that will help reduce accidents involving teen drivers.

We all know that learning to drive is an important rite of social passage and independence for teenagers. The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, in partnership with the State Farm Insurance Companies, is conducting ongoing research on teen drivers and recently completed the National Young Driver Survey, questioning thousands of students across the country. The survey was designed to be representative of the 10.6 million public high school students in the United States. Thanks to this new data, we know more about what teens themselves think about driving and how we can more effectively instill safe driving habits.

I would like to mention three key findings from this survey:

1. The critical role of parents. As parents, we are often our children's first driving teachers. But our role does not end when our children get their licenses. Parents play a major role in setting and enforcing safe driving behavior, supervising their teen drivers, and ensuring that teens assume responsibility for driving, including financial responsibility.

2. The prevalence of risky distractions. With 80 percent of teen drivers reporting that they own cell phones, these technological advances pose a serious threat to our children's safety while driving. Nearly all—93 percent of—teens in the survey report that they witness distractions such as cell phone calls, loud music, other teens in the car, and their own emotions. Nearly half of all teens say they have witnessed road rage in fellow teen drivers.

3. The prevalence of risky driving behaviors. While 50 percent of teens report seeing other teens drive drunk, nearly three fourths of teens report seeing their peers drive while fatigued. Half of teens report driving 10 miles over the speed limit at least some of the time. Only 65 percent of teens say they consistently use seat belts.

This superb research from Children's Hospital will continue to provide us greater insight and strategies for reaching our young people.

Our resolution will designate the third week in October, when schools are back in session, as a time for intensive outreach and programming to encourage teens to drive more safely—to minimize risky driving conditions, to manage peer-to-peer interactions around driving, and to learn the skills they need to detect and react to hazards more appropriately.

As a member of the Senate, and as a father, I want to do everything in my power to ensure our children are safe on the road. Losing even one child to a preventable death is a tragedy beyond words. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution recognizing a National Teen Driver Safety Week.

TEXT OF AMENDMENTS

SA 1334. Mr. DOMENICI submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1348, to provide for comprehensive immigration reform and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of subsection (a) of section 218A of the Immigration and Nationality Act (as added by section 402(a)), add the following:

“(5) REQUIREMENT.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—For each calendar year in which Y nonimmigrant visas are made available under this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Secretary of Labor, shall reserve not less than 25 percent of the quantity of Y nonimmigrant visas available for the calendar year for use by business concerns, in accordance with this paragraph.

“(B) TIMELINE.—Of the Y nonimmigrant visas reserved under subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall ensure that—

“(i) for the period beginning on January 1 of the applicable calendar year and ending on June 30 of that calendar year, the visas are provided only to entities that qualify as small businesses under the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 631 et seq.) (including regulations promulgated pursuant to that Act); and

“(ii) for the period beginning on July 1 of the applicable calendar year and ending on December 31 of that calendar year, any remaining visas are provided to business concerns, regardless of whether the business concerns qualify as small businesses.”.

SA 1335. Mr. DOMENICI (for himself and Mr. BINGAMAN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1348, to provide for comprehensive immigration reform and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ INCREASE IN FEDERAL JUDGESHIPS IN DISTRICTS WITH LARGE NUMBERS OF CRIMINAL IMMIGRATION CASES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Based on the recommendations made by the 2007 Judicial Conference and the statistical data provided by the 2006 Federal Court Management Statistics (issued by the Administrative Office of the United States Courts), the Congress finds the following:

(1) Federal courts along the southwest border of the United States have a greater percentage of their criminal caseload affected by immigration cases than other Federal courts.

(2) The percentage of criminal immigration cases in most southwest border district courts totals more than 49 percent of the total criminal caseloads of those districts.

(3) The current number of judges authorized for those courts is inadequate to handle the current caseload.

(4) Such an increase in the caseload of criminal immigration filings requires a corresponding increase in the number of Federal judgeships.

(5) The 2007 Judicial Conference recommended the addition of judgeships to meet this growing burden.

(6) The Congress should authorize the additional district court judges necessary to carry out the 2007 recommendations of the Judicial Conference for district courts in which the criminal immigration filings represented more than 49 percent of all criminal filings for the 12-month period ending September 30, 2006.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to increase the number of Federal judgeships, in accordance with the recommendations of the 2007 Judicial Conference, in district courts that have an extraordinarily high criminal immigration caseload.

(c) ADDITIONAL DISTRICT COURT JUDGESHIPS.—

(1) PERMANENT JUDGESHIPS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate—

(i) 4 additional district judges for the district of Arizona;

(ii) 1 additional district judge for the district of New Mexico;

(iii) 2 additional district judges for the southern district of Texas; and

(iv) 1 additional district judge for the western district of Texas.

(B) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—In order that the table contained in section 133(a) of title 28, United States Code, reflect the number of additional judges authorized under paragraph (1), such table is amended—

(i) by striking the item relating to Arizona and inserting the following:

“Arizona 16”;

(ii) by striking the item relating to New Mexico and inserting the following:

“New Mexico 7”;

(iii) by striking the item relating to Texas and inserting the following:

“Texas:
Northern 12
Southern 21
Eastern 7
Western 14”.

(2) TEMPORARY JUDGESHIP.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate—

(i) 1 additional district judge for the district of Arizona; and

(ii) 1 additional district judge for the district of New Mexico.

(B) VACANCY.—For each of the judicial districts named in this paragraph, the first vacancy arising on the district court 10 years or more after a judge is first confirmed to fill the temporary district judgeship created in that district by this paragraph shall not be filled.

(d) FUNDING.—To carry out this section, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall, for each of fiscal years 2008 through 2012, allocate $2,000,000 from the Administrative Office of the United States Courts Salary & Expenses (Administrative Expenses) account.

SA 1336. Ms. COLLINS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill S. 1348, to provide for comprehensive immigration reform and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 242, between lines 39 and 40, insert the following:

(e) DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENT; PROHIBITION OF OUTPLACEMENT.—Section 212(n)(1) (8 U.S.C. 1182(n)), as amended by this section, is further amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by adding at the end the following:

“(iii) will provide to the H-1B non-immigrant—

“(I) a copy of each application filed on behalf of the nonimmigrant under this section; and

“(II) documentation supporting each attestation, in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Labor.”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(L) An H-1B nonimmigrant may not be stationed at the worksite of an employer other than the petitioning employer or its affiliate, subsidiary, or parent if the alien will be controlled and supervised principally by such unaffiliated employer or if the placement of the alien at the worksite of the affiliated employer is essentially an arrangement to provide labor for hire for the unaffiliated employer, rather than a placement in connection with the provision of a product or service for which specialized knowledge specific to the petitioning employer is necessary.”.

(f) FRAUD ASSESSMENT.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of United States Citizenship and Immigration Services shall submit to Congress a fraud risk assessment of the H-1B visa program.

“(2)(A) The Secretary of Homeland Security shall provide for a procedure under which an importing employer which meets the requirements established by the Secretary of Homeland Security may file a blanket petition to import aliens as nonimmigrants described in section 101(a)(15)(L) instead of filing individual petitions under paragraph (1) to import such aliens. Such procedure shall permit the expedited adjudication by the Secretary of Homeland Security of individual petitions covered under such blanket petitions. “(ii) The Secretary of Homeland Security shall promulgate rules, after notice and a period for comment, for an employer to apply for a waiver of the prohibition set out in clause (i). The decision whether to grant or deny such a waiver under this subparagraph shall be in the sole and unreviewable discretion of the Secretary. In order to receive such a waiver, the burden shall be on the employer seeking the waiver to establish that—

“(I) the placement is for legitimate business purposes and not to evade the requirements of this subsection;

“(II) the employer with whom the nonimmigrant would be placed has not displaced and does not intend to displace a United States worker employed by the employer within the period beginning 180 days before and ending 180 days after the date of the placement of the nonimmigrant with the employer;

“(d) ELECTRONIC EMPLOYMENT VERIFICATION SYSTEM.—

“(1) REQUIREMENT FOR SYSTEM.—The Secretary, in cooperation with the Commissioner of Social Security, shall implement an Electronic Employment Verification System (referred to in this subsection as the ‘System’) to determine whether—

“(A) the identifying information submitted by an individual is consistent with the information maintained by the Secretary, the Secretary of State, the Commissioner of Social Security, or the official of a State responsible for issuing drivers' licenses and identity cards; and “(B) such individual is eligible for employment in the United States.

“(2) REQUIREMENT FOR PARTICIPATION.—

“(B) OTHER EMPLOYEES.—Not later than 3 years after such date of enactment, the Secretary shall require all employers to verify through the System the identity and employment eligibility of any individual who—

“(ii) has not been previously verified through the System.

“(ii) if the Secretary has reasonable cause to believe that the employer has engaged in material violations of paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (a).

“(4) REQUIREMENT TO NOTIFY.—The Secretary shall notify the employer or class of employers in writing regarding the requirement for participation in the System under paragraph (2) or (3)(B) not less than 60 days prior to the effective date of such require-

“(7) CONSEQUENCE OF FAILURE TO PARTICIPATE.—If an employer is required to participate in the System and fails to comply with the requirements of the System with respect to an employee—

“(A) such failure shall be treated as a violation of subsection (a)(1)(B); and “(B) a rebuttable presumption is created that the employer has violated subsection (a)(1)(A), however, such presumption may not apply to a prosecution under subsection (f)(1).

“(8) DESIGN AND OPERATION OF SYSTEM.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall, through the System—

“(i) respond to each inquiry made by a registered employer through the Internet or other electronic media, or over a toll-free telephone line regarding an individual's identity and eligibility for employment in the United States; and

“(I) the individual's name and date of birth;

“(II) the individual's social security account number;

“(III) the identification number contained on the document presented by the individual pursuant to subsection (c)(1)(B); and “(IV) in the case of an individual who does not attest that the individual is a national of the United States under subsection (c)(1)(A)(i), such alien identification or authorization number that the Secretary shall require.

“(ii) SUBMISSION TO SYSTEM.—A registered employer shall submit an inquiry through the System to seek confirmation of the individual's identity and eligibility for employment in the United States—

“(I) no earlier than the date of hire and no later than the first day of employment, or recruiting or referring for a fee, of the individual (as the case may be); or

“(II) in the case of an employee hired before such employer was required to participate in the system, at such time as the Secretary shall specify.

“(C) INITIAL RESPONSE.—Not later than 3 days after an employer submits an inquiry to the System regarding an individual, the Secretary shall provide, through the System, to the employer—

“(i) if the System is able to confirm the individual's identity and eligibility for employment in the United States, a confirmation notice, including the appropriate codes on such confirmation notice; or

“(i) if the System is unable to confirm the individual’s identity or eligibility for employment in the United States, and after a secondary manual verification has been conducted, a tentative nonconfirmation notice, including the appropriate codes on such tentative nonconfirmation notice.

“(D) CONFIRMATION OR NONCONFIRMATION.—

“(i) CONFIRMATION UPON INITIAL INQUIRY.—If an employer receives a confirmation notice under subparagraph (C)(i) for an individual, the employer shall record, on the form described in subsection (c)(1)(A)(i), the appropriate code provided in such notice.

“(ii) TENTATIVE NONCONFIRMATION.—If an employer receives a tentative nonconfirmation notice under subparagraph (C)(ii) for an individual, the employer shall inform such individual of the issuance of such notice in writing, on a form prescribed by the Secretary not later than 3 days after receiving such notice. Such individual shall acknowledge receipt of such notice in writing on the form described in subsection (c)(1)(A)(i).

“(iii) NO CONTEST.—If the individual does not contest the tentative nonconfirmation notice within 10 days of receiving notice from the individual’s employer, the notice shall become final and the employer shall record on the form described in subsection (c)(1)(A)(i), the appropriate code provided through the System to indicate the individual did not contest the tentative nonconfirmation. An individual’s failure to contest a tentative nonconfirmation shall not be considered an admission of guilt with respect to any violation of this Act or any other provision of law.

“(II) in the case of an alien authorized to be employed in the United States for a temporary period, during such period.

“(vii) PROHIBITION ON TERMINATION.—An employer may not terminate such employment of an individual based on a tentative nonconfirmation notice until such notice becomes final under clause (iii) or a final nonconfirmation notice is issued for the individual by the System. Nothing in this clause shall prohibit the termination of such employment for any reason other than such tentative nonconfirmation.

“(viii) RECORDING OF CONTEST RESOLUTION.—The employer shall record on the form described in subsection (c)(1)(A)(i) the appropriate code that is provided through the System to indicate a final confirmation notice or final nonconfirmation notice.

“(ix) CONSEQUENCES OF NONCONFIRMATION.—If the employer has received a final nonconfirmation regarding an individual, the employer shall immediately terminate the employment, recruitment, or referral of the individual. Such employer shall provide to the Secretary any information relating to the individual that the Secretary determines would assist the Secretary in enforcing or administering the immigration laws. If the employer continues to employ, recruit, or refer the individual after receiving final nonconfirmation, a rebuttable presumption is created that the employer has violated subsections (a)(1)(A) and (a)(2). Such presumption may not apply to a prosecution under subsection (f)(1).

“(E) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE SECRETARY.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish a reliable, secure method to provide through the System, within the time periods required by this subsection—

“(I) a determination of whether the name and alien identification or authorization number provided in an inquiry by an employer is consistent with such information maintained by the Secretary in order to confirm the validity of the information provided; and “(II) a determination of whether the individual is authorized to be employed in the United States.

“(ii) CONTEST AND SELF-VERIFICATION.—The Secretary in consultation with the Commissioner of Social Security, shall establish procedures to permit an individual who contests a tentative or final nonconfirmation notice, or seeks to verify the individual’s own employment eligibility prior to obtaining or changing employment, to contact the appropriate agency and, in a timely manner, correct or update the information used by the System.

“(iii) INFORMATION TO EMPLOYEE.—The Secretary shall develop a written form for employers to provide to individuals who receive a tentative or final nonconfirmation notice. Such form shall be made available in a language other than English, as necessary and reasonable, and shall include—

“(10) ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—An individual who is terminated from employment as a result of a final nonconfirmation notice may, not later than 30 days after the date of such termination, file an appeal of such notice.

“(B) PROCEDURES.—The Secretary and Commissioner of Social Security shall develop procedures to review appeals filed under subparagraph (A) and to make final determinations on such appeals.

“(C) REVIEW FOR ERRORS.—If a final determination on an appeal filed under subparagraph (A) results in a confirmation of an individual’s eligibility to work in the United States, the administrative review process shall require the Secretary to determine whether the final nonconfirmation notice issued for the individual was the result of—

“(i) the decision rules, processes, or procedures utilized by the System;

“(ii) a natural disaster, or other event beyond the control of the government;

“(iii) acts or omissions of an employee or official operating or responsible for the System;

“(iv) acts or omissions of the individual’s employer;

“(v) acts or omissions of the individual; or

“(D) COMPENSATION FOR ERROR.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary makes a determination under subparagraph (C) that the final nonconfirmation notice issued for an individual was caused by a negligent, reckless, willful, or malicious act of the government, and was not due to an act or omission of the individual, the Secretary shall compensate the individual for lost wages.

“(ii) CALCULATION OF LOST WAGES.—Lost wages shall be calculated based on the wage rate and work schedule that prevailed prior to termination. The individual shall be compensated for wages lost during the period beginning on the date the individual files a notice of appeal under this paragraph and ending on the earlier of—

“(I) the date which is 180 days thereafter; or

“(II) the day after the date the individual receives a confirmation described in subparagraph (C).

“(11) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—After the Secretary makes a final determination on an appeal filed by an individual under the administrative review process described in paragraph (10), the individual may obtain judicial review of such determination by a civil action commenced not later than 30 days after the date of such decision, or such further time as the Secretary may allow.

“(B) JURISDICTION.—A civil action for such judicial review shall be brought in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the plaintiff resides, or has a principal place of business, or, if the plaintiff does not reside or have a principal place of business within any such judicial district, in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

“(C) ANSWER.—As part of the Secretary’s answer to a complaint for such judicial review, the Secretary shall file a certified copy of the administrative record compiled during the administrative review under paragraph (10), including the evidence upon which the findings and decision complained of are based. The court shall have power to enter, upon the pleadings and transcript of the record, a judgment affirming or reversing the result of that administrative review, with or without remanding the cause for a rehearing.

“(D) COMPENSATION FOR ERROR.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—In cases in which such judicial review reverses the final determination of the Secretary made under paragraph

(10), the court shall compensate the individual for lost wages.

“(ii) CALCULATION OF LOST WAGES.—Lost wages shall be calculated based on the wage rate and work scheduled that prevailed prior to termination. The individual shall be compensated for wages lost during the period beginning on the date the individual files a notice of appeal under paragraph (10) and ending on the earlier of—

“(I) the date which is 180 days thereafter; or

“(II) the day after the date the individual receives a reversal described in clause (i).

“(12) COMPENSATION FOR LOSS OF EMPLOYMENT.—For purposes of paragraphs (10) and (11)—

“(A) LIMITATION ON COMPENSATION.—For purposes of determining an individual’s compensation for the loss of employment, such compensation shall not include any period in which the individual was not present in, or was ineligible for employment in, the United States.

“(ii) for the purpose of unlawfully obtaining employment in the United States or unlawfully obtaining employment in the United States for any other person; or “(iii) for any purpose other than as provided for under any provision of law; shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be fined under title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

“(C) EXCEPTIONS.—Nothing in subparagraph (A) or (B) may be construed to limit the collection, maintenance, or use of data by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the Commissioner of Social Security as provided by law.

“(14) MODIFICATION AUTHORITY.—The Secretary, after notice is submitted to Congress and provided to the public in the Federal Register, is authorized to modify the requirements of this subsection with respect to completion of forms, method of storage, attestations, copying of documents, signa-

“(A) PREPENALTY NOTICE.—If the Secretary has reasonable cause to believe that there has been a violation of a requirement of this section and determines that further proceedings related to such violation are warranted, the Secretary shall issue to the employer concerned a written notice of the Secretary’s intention to issue a claim for a fine or other penalty. Such notice shall—

“(ii) specify the laws and regulations allegedly violated;

“(iii) specify the amount of fines or other penalties to be imposed;

“(iv) disclose the material facts which establish the alleged violation; and

“(v) inform such employer that the employer shall have a reasonable opportunity to make representations as to why a claim for a monetary or other penalty should not be imposed.

“(B) REMISSION OR MITIGATION OF PENALTIES.—

“(i) REVIEW BY SECRETARY.—If the Secretary determines that such fine or other penalty was incurred erroneously, or determines the existence of such mitigating circumstances as to justify the remission or mitigation of such fine or penalty, the Secretary may remit or mitigate such fine or other penalty on the terms and conditions as the Secretary determines are reasonable and just, or order termination of any proceedings related to the notice. Such mitigating circumstances may include good faith compliance and participation in, or agreement to participate in, the System, if not otherwise required.

“(ii) APPLICABILITY.—This subparagraph may not apply to an employer that has or is engaged in a pattern or practice of violations of paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (a) or of any other requirements of this section.

“(C) PENALTY CLAIM.—After considering evidence and representations offered by the employer, the Secretary shall determine whether there was a violation and promptly issue a written final determination setting forth the findings of fact and conclusions of law on which the determination is based and the appropriate penalty.

“(4) CIVIL PENALTIES.—

“(A) HIRING OR CONTINUING TO EMPLOY UNAUTHORIZED ALIENS.—Any employer that violates any provision of paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (a) shall pay civil penalties as follows:

“(5) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—An employer adversely affected by a final determination may, within 30 days after the date the final determination is issued, file a petition in any appropriate district court of the United States. The filing of a petition as provided in this paragraph shall stay the Secretary's determination until entry of judgment by the court. The burden shall be on the employer to show that the final determination was not supported by substantial evidence. The Secretary is authorized to require that the petitioner provide, prior to filing for review, security for payment of fines and penalties through bond or other guarantee of payment acceptable to the Secretary.

“(6) ENFORCEMENT OF ORDERS.—If an employer fails to comply with a final determination issued against that employer under this subsection, and the final determination is not subject to review as provided in paragraph (5), the Attorney General may file suit to enforce compliance with the final determination, not earlier than 31 days and not later than 180 days after the date the final determination is issued, in any appropriate district court of the United States. In any such suit, the validity and appropriateness of the final determination shall not be subject to review.

“(1) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—An employer that engages in a pattern or practice of knowing violations of subsection (a)(1)(A) or (a)(2) shall be fined not more than $75,000 for each unauthorized alien with respect to whom such a violation occurs, imprisoned for not more than 3 years for the entire pattern or practice, or both.

“(2) ENJOINING OF PATTERN OR PRACTICE VIOLATIONS.—If the Secretary or the Attorney General has reasonable cause to believe that an employer is engaged in a pattern or practice of employment, recruitment, or referral in violation of paragraph (1)(A) or (2) of subsection (a), the Attorney General may bring a civil action in the appropriate district court of the United States requesting a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order against the employer, as the Secretary deems necessary.

“(g) ADJUSTMENT FOR INFLATION.—All penalties in this section shall be increased every 4 years beginning January 2011 to reflect the percentage increase in the consumer price index for all urban consumers (all items; U.S. city average) for the 48 month period ending with September of the year preceding the year such adjustment is made. Any ad-

“(h) PROHIBITION OF INDEMNITY BONDS.—

“(1) PROHIBITION.—It is unlawful for an employer, in the hiring, recruiting, or referral of an individual, to require the individual to post a bond or security, to pay or agree to pay an amount, or otherwise to provide a financial guarantee or indemnity, against any potential liability arising under this section relating to such hiring, recruiting, or referral of the individual.

“(2) CIVIL PENALTY.—Any employer which is determined, after notice and opportunity for mitigation of the monetary penalty under subsection (e), to have violated paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be subject to a civil penalty of $10,000 for each violation and to an administrative order requiring the return of any amounts received in violation of such paragraph to the employee or, if the employee cannot be located, to the Employer Compliance Fund established under section 286(z).

“(B) NOTICE TO AGENCIES.—Prior to debarring the employer under subparagraph (A), the Secretary, in cooperation with the Administrator of General Services, shall advise all agencies or departments holding a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement with the employer of the Government's intention to debar the employer from the receipt of new Federal contracts, grants, or cooperative agreements for a period of not more than 2 years.

“(C) WAIVER.—After consideration of the views of all agencies or departments that hold a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement with the employer, the Secretary may, in lieu of debarring the employer from the receipt of new Federal contracts, grants, or cooperative agreements for a period of not more than 2 years, waive operation of this subsection, limit the duration or scope of the debarment, or may refer to an appropriate lead agency the decision of whether to debar the employer, for what duration, and under what scope in accordance with the procedures and standards prescribed by the Federal Acquisition Regulation. However, any proposed debarment predicated on an administrative determination of liability for civil penalty by the Secretary or the Attorney General shall not be reviewable in any debarment proceeding.

“(3) SUSPENSION.—Indictments for violations of this section or adequate evidence of actions that could form the basis for debarment under this subsection shall be considered a cause for suspension under the procedures and standards for suspension prescribed by the Federal Acquisition Regulation.

“(4) DETERMINATION OF REPEAT VIOLATORS.—Inadvertent violations of record-keeping or verification requirements, in the absence of any other violations of this section, shall not be a basis for determining that an employer is a repeat violator for purposes of this subsection.

“(j) MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.—

“(1) DOCUMENTATION.—In providing documentation or endorsement of authorization of aliens eligible to be employed in the United States, the Secretary shall provide that any limitations with respect to the period or type of employment or employer shall be conspicuously stated on the documentation or endorsement (other than aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence).

ment intended to be proposed by her to the bill S. 1348, to provide for comprehensive immigration reform and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . HUMAN TRAFFICKING AWARENESS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that:

(1) The United States has a tradition of advancing fundamental human rights.

(2) Because the people of the United States remain committed to protecting individual freedom, there is a national imperative to eliminate human trafficking, including early or forced marriage, commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, labor obtained through debt bondage, involuntary servitude, slavery, and slavery by descent.

(3) To combat human trafficking in the United States and globally, the people of the United States and the Federal Government, including local and State governments, must be aware of the realities of human trafficking and must be dedicated to stopping this contemporary manifestation of slavery.

(4) Beyond all differences of race, creed, or political persuasion, the people of the United States face national threats together and refuse to let human trafficking exist in the United States and around the world.

(5) The United States should actively oppose all individuals, groups, organizations, and nations who support, advance, or commit acts of human trafficking.

(6) The United States must also work to end human trafficking around the world through education.

(7) Victims of human trafficking need support in order to escape and to recover from the physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual trauma associated with their victimization.

(8) Human traffickers use many physical and psychological techniques to control their victims, including the use of violence or threats of violence against the victim or the victim's family, isolation from the public, isolation from the victim's family and religious or ethnic communities, language and cultural barriers, shame, control of the victim's possessions, confiscation of passports and other identification documents, and threats of arrest, deportation, or imprisonment if the victim attempts to reach out for assistance or to leave.

(9) Although laws to prosecute perpetrators of human trafficking and to assist and protect victims of human trafficking have been enacted in the United States, awareness of the issues surrounding human trafficking by those people most likely to come into contact with victims is essential for effective enforcement because the techniques that traffickers use to keep their victims enslaved severely limit self-reporting.

(10) The effort by individuals, businesses, organizations, and governing bodies to promote the observance of the National Day of Human Trafficking Awareness on January 11 of each year represents one of the many examples of the ongoing commitment in the United States to raise awareness of and to actively oppose human trafficking.

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that Congress supports the goals and ideals of observing the National Day of Human Trafficking Awareness on January 11 of each year and all other efforts to raise awareness of and opposition to human trafficking.

S. RES. 223

Whereas the United States Government established the American Commission for the Protection and Salvage of Artistic and Historic Monuments in War Areas in 1943 to promote and coordinate the protection and salvage of works of art and cultural and historical monuments and records in countries occupied by Allied armies during World War II;

Whereas the American Commission for the Protection and Salvage of Artistic and Historic Monuments in War Areas is also known as the Roberts Commission, in honor of its chairman, Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts;

Whereas, in connection with the establishment of the Roberts Commission, the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives program (MFAA) was established under the Civil Affairs and Military Government Sections of the United States Armed Forces;

Whereas the establishment of the Roberts Commission and the MFAA provided an example for other countries, working in conjunction with the United States, to develop similar programs, and more than 100 foreign MFAA personnel, representing at least seventeen countries, contributed to this international effort;

Whereas the MFAA was comprised of both men and women, commissioned officers and civilians, who were appointed or volunteered to serve as representatives of the Roberts Commission and as the official guardians of some of the world's greatest artistic and cultural treasures;

Whereas members of the MFAA, called the "Monuments Men", often joined frontline military forces and some even lost their lives in combat during World War II;

Whereas, during World War II and for years following the Allied victory, members of the MFAA worked tirelessly to locate, identify, catalogue, restore, and repatriate priceless works of art and irreplaceable cultural artifacts, including masterpieces by Da Vinci, Michelangelo, Rembrandt, and Vermeer, that had been stolen or sequestered by the Axis powers;

Whereas the heroic actions of the MFAA in saving priceless works of art and irreplaceable cultural artifacts for future generations cannot be overstated, and set a moral precedent and established standards, practices, and procedures for the preservation, protection, and restitution of artistic and cultural treasures in future armed conflicts;

Whereas members of the MFAA went on to become renowned directors and curators of preeminent international cultural institutions, including the National Gallery of Art, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Modern Art, the Toledo Museum of Art, and the Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art, as well as professors at institutions of higher education, including Harvard University, Yale University, Princeton University, New York University, Williams College, and Columbia University;

Whereas other members of the MFAA were founders, presidents, and members of associations such as the New York City Ballet, the American Association of Museums, the American Association of Museum Directors, the Archaeological Institute of America, the Society of Architectural Historians, the American Society of Landscape Architects, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the National Endowment for the Arts, as well as respected artists, architects, musicians, and archivists; and

Whereas members of the MFAA have never been collectively honored for their service and contributions to humanity, and they are deserving of the utmost acknowledgment, gratitude, and recognition, in particular the 12 known Monuments Men who are still alive: Now, therefore, be it

(1) recognizes the men and women who served in the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives program (MFAA) under the Civil Affairs and Military Government Sections of the United States Armed Forces for their heroic role in the preservation, protection, and restitution of monuments, works of art, and other artifacts of inestimable cultural importance in Europe and Asia during and following World War II;

(2) recognizes that without their dedication and service, many more of the world's artistic and historic treasures would have been destroyed or lost forever amidst the chaos and destruction of World War II;

(3) acknowledges that the detailed catalogues, documentation, inventories, and photographs developed and compiled by MFAA personnel during and following World War II have made and continue to make possible the restitution of stolen works of art to their rightful owners; and

(4) commends and extols the members of the MFAA for establishing a precedent for action to protect cultural property in the event of armed conflict, and by their action setting a standard not just for one country, but for people of all nations to acknowledge and uphold.
